Scientists are rapidly making discoveries which are expected to prolong the life of the average man. Propylene, the new anaesthetic, more powerful than ethylene, makes the patient completely unconscious of any pain during an operation, and allows him full consciousness within a minute after the flow of gas has ceased. Consciousness is not accompanied with any after-sickness, or nausea, as is often the case with other anaesthetics. It is believed that with the pain-saving and life-saving discoveries, the men of the next century who die before 70 will be either the victims of accidents or personally to blame.

TOURING IN FLORIDA.

Before returning home to Ohio I desire to mention a few more trips and observations in this land of sunshine and flowers.

Will first mention our trip to Tarpon Springs, the largest sponge receiving port in the world. The boats come into this port loaded with sponges, four times a year. There are at this port 1500 Greeks employed in the unloading, curing and preparing of sponges for the market. Dealers in sponges all over the country come here to purchase their stock.

Tarpon Springs is a beautiful, thriving town of 8000. There is a water front in this town of 53 miles in a winding bayou. They have annual water carnivals which attract crowds from far and near. The sponge boats come up from the Gulf of Mexico, which is near, in the famous Anclote river, one of the wonders of the world, mentioned in books and magazines. This river is fed by seven springs and is 22 miles long. Six miles up from the gulf it is salt water, the balance of sixteen miles is fresh water. It is a great stream for fish. We are told 7000 pounds of fish were caught in it near the gulf just a few days before we were there. We were very fortunate in visiting this place when the boats were coming in. The harbor was full of boats loaded with sponges of all sizes, of which we had the opportunity of getting snap pictures. It is a trip worth taking by anyone at this time of the year when the boats come in.

The trip from Tampa was a beautiful and pleasant one on the fine asphalt road known as Memorial Highway, many miles of which is lined with the beautiful oleander trees, quite large and so full of bloom; some with red and some with other colors. It surely reveals to man the beauties of God in Nature.

We want to speak now of the wonderful development of Lonnquest county. This beautiful development known as "Sunset Hills" is in the new corporate limits of Tarpon Springs and extends from the town to the Gulf of Mexico, consisting of 1000 acres. These people are spending millions of dollars in the development of this beauty spot. 160 feet above sea level, with a gradual slope down to the gulf. They are now completing the finest club house I have seen in the south. This club house and golf links will cost one million dollars. They are soon to start a magnificent hotel of 350 rooms, all on high ground overlooking the gulf for miles and drinking in the health-giving breeze off the salt water. This is a wonderful spot. Their lots are 50 and 60 feet front and from 140 to 200 feet deep. Strict restrictions on buildings. No frame house to be built. All building to be stucco, brick or tile. The streets run from 60 to 100 feet wide, paved with asphalt; sidewalks, concrete; and all sewers, water, gas and electric lights to be put in by the company and maintained by them for several years without cost to the owners. We were more impressed by this development than any we have yet seen, being right at a thriving town which is now growing very fast. It is more of an addition than any we have yet seen. So many developments and sub-divisions are so far from any town, taking some time to grow enough to bring business and various kinds of employment for lot owners and merchants for early purchases. As we see it, Florida needs more additions to towns already on the map and less subdivisions miles out from any town. But they seem to be getting down to real business now and Florida people are fighting the "wildcat" mushroom subdivisions put on by speculators who move from place to place and leave the poor lot owner to fight it out alone. The great demand now in Florida is for the farmer, truck grower, stock and dairy and poultry man. We were told by a reliable development company, who are now realizing the great need of farm products, that soon they will put on the market 11,000 acres of fine agriculture land, with great inducements to attract and help farmers to get started.

This, as I see it, is a move in the right direction for a great state, as Florida is destined to have wonderful climate, a variety of soil and pure spring and lake water.

Our last visit was to Sulphur Springs and the alligator farm. This sulphur pool is the most wonderful bathing pool I ever saw. The sulphur water boils right up from the earth at the rate of 60,000 gallons per minute at a temperature of 72 degrees all the time—pure, clear, sparkling sulphur water. It flows down over a falls and forms a second pool for the more timid bathers, but the more venturesome one prefer diving and swimming right in the boiling up pool.

The large alligator farm is at this place, having 2500 alligators, from the baby up to the oldest monster named Gasperilla, 300 years old; the next Gen. Pershing, 200 years old. In the large breeding pen they run from 100 to 150 years. At this farm they also have many other species of animals and reptiles.

Many other beauty spots I have seen and would like to describe; and some of fruit packing houses and the manner of grading and packing is a whole article within itself, but time and space will not allow, as my time is limited and I leave for my home in Columbus soon, and hoping I can get back to Sunny Florida again before old King Winter strikes Ohio.

Burroughs Benefit

Baby Peggy in "The Family Secret" will be shown at the Rivoli theater on Friday, May 21, for the benefit of John Burroughs Parent-Teacher Association. The program is continuous from 3:30 to 11 p. m. Matinee for children at 3:30. Children 10c, adults 25c.

After a steamer has made its last ocean voyage, it is no longer sunk as useless. Many ways of employing the old vessels have been devised. One ship, in Biscayne Bay, Florida, has been turned into a tea room, with all of the conveniences of a land establishment, but retaining the atmosphere of the sea. Another serves as a laundry for a steamship in Valparaiso, Chile.

WEST HIGH SCHOOL PLANS APPROVED

Auditorium and Gymnasium Proposed as Separate Units.

The city board of education Monday approved plans for the new combination West Junior and Senior High school to be erected at Olive St. and Powell Ave., which will cost approximately $800,000.

Plans, as presented by School Architect Smith, show a departure from other high school buildings in Columbus, in that the auditorium and gymnasium are so built that when either of these alone is needed, it will not be necessary to open the remainder of the building.

The building will face east on Powell Ave., with Olive street on the north. The gymnasium will be built in a wing on the south side and the auditorium in a wing on the north, while a court will provide light for the rooms in the center of the building.

On the west of the building will be a cafeteria, half of which may be converted into study hall. Executive offices will be on the first floor in the northwest corner, where also the main entrance to be building is situated.

The building will be three stories high and will provide for 1500 pupils. The auditorium will seat about 1400.

ACCIDENT FATAL TO FRANK GATTON

Succumbs at Mt. Carmel Hospital Without Regaining Consciousness.

Frank Gatton, aged 61 years, of 671 Hamlet St., died Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock from injuries received earlier in the day when he was struck at Broad St. and Belvidere Ave. by the automobile of George Martin, 159 N. Oakley.

Mr. Gatton was an employe of the Rail-Light company and was doing excavation work at the intersection when the accident occurred. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and removed to Mt. Carmel hospital, where he died without gaining consciousness.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Flora Gatton; one son, Vernon, and four daughters, Mrs. Mabel Broiler, Mrs. Maude Schleich, Miss Elizabeth Gatton and Mrs. Lucille Ochenbower.

Highland Pupils Will Present Play

The 9A class of Highland junior high school will presents its spring play, "Daddy Long-Legs," Friday, May 27, in the auditorium of John Burroughs school, Sullivant avenue.

Norman Windermeyer will take the title roll. Miss Thelma Hamilton will have the female lead. Others in the cast are Margaret Miller, Laurena Francis, Agnes Gatten, Ruth Leach, Harvey Williams and Paul Kent.

The Hilltop School of Music announces the election of Hazel Freshner Reed as director of their vocal department. Mrs. Reed has had a large experience as church and concert singer. She is gifted with a rich dramatic soprano voice and an unusually pleasing personality. She studied voice and piano with Mrs. Ella May Smith for a number of years and for the past year or more has been studying with Herbert E. Hutchinson. Summer classes for the school are now open for registration.

WILL ENLARGE JEWELRY STORE

Sulzberger Leases Additional Room and Will Install New Equippment.

Fred L. Sulzberger, Hilltop jeweler 2381 West Broad St., has leased the business room immediately east of his present store and plans extensive remodeling and new equipment for his business.

The partition between the two rooms will be torn out and a new front installed, with the entrance in the center, giving him double his present floor space. New wallcases and fixtures will also be installed.

The optical department will be enlarged and outfitted with entirely new equipment. Another feature which Mr. Sulzberger will add to his store will be that of a special gift department.

When his plans are completed the Hilltop will have the most complete and largest community jewelry store and optical parlors in the city.

Children Cause Fire

The home of L. Duffy, 334 Lechner Ave., was damaged to the extent of $40 by fire Monday morning. It is said the fire was caused by children playing with matches.

Passed an ordinance to improve Crescent road from Sullivant avenue to the south line of the Wilshire Heights addition and Salisbury avenue from Sullivant to the south line of the Wilshire Heights addition.

Passed resolutions to improve Brinker avenue from Palmetto to Girard street.

Heard petition of Hilltop Business Men's association, asking that improvement of West Gate park be hastened.

WEST BROAD ST. SCHOOL NOTES

The pupils of West Broad Street school have enjoyed the opportunity of seeing the pictures loaned by the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts, and listening to lectures given by Miss Carrie Hagerman, supervisor of art in the public schools.

Miss Hagerman explained to the pupils the meaning of certain pictures, told the artists names and created much interest. The pupils remembered well what was told, and retold many of the most interesting facts.

Pupils from John Burroughs and Highland schools were invited to visit on Wednesday.

This is a fine chance for our pupils to see these valuable paintings and to learn about the artists.

Benson at Glenwood

Dr. John G. Benson, superintendent of the White Cross hospital, will speak at the supper meeting on Friday evening for those who are to make the every-member canvass of Glenwood church on Sunday, May 23. Dr. Benson is well known as a very popular speaker for such occasions.

Church Dinner at Hoge Memorial

A church and Sunday school dinner will be given at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church, Friday evening, May 21, at 6:30 for members of its congregation, Sunday school and friends. A report of the Birmingham convention and illustrated pictures of the trip recently taken by the pastor, Rev. R. E. Shields, and the Sunday school superintendent, H. G. Downs, will be given. A good program and good fellowship will be enjoyed by every member of the family. All reservations must be in by Thursday evening.

Vacation Bible School

There will be a meeting of the representatives of all of the churches of this community at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church Tuesday evening, May 25, at 8 o'clock, to discuss and organize the Hilltop Daily Vacation School for the coming summer.

Last year, the largest school ever held in this community, was conducted at the Hillcrest Baptist church. Already the children have begun to inquire as to whether we are having one, and where it will be and who will conduct the school. It is hoped that all churches will co-operate this year, and thus enable this community to have a still better school this year.

Mrs. L. W. Neff and her mother, Mrs. J. M. Edie, were called to Hutchinson, Kans., last Friday on account of the death of her father, J. M. Edie. Mr. and Mrs. Edie have been living in Columbus with their daughter since January. A few weeks ago Mr. Edie decided to return to his old home, where he lived only five days. The cause of death was heart trouble.

The Bethany Bible class will meet at the home of Mrs. Carter, 69 N. Hague Ave., Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The lesson begins with Exodus 31st chapter. Mrs. Compton our teacher, has arrived home from California and will be with us. A good attendance is desired.

Recreation Ball League

The City Recreation Department has issued a call for a meeting to form a West Side Independent Recreation Ball league. This meeting will be held at the recreation department offices at 12 o'clock next Monday noon. Display Illustrates Evolution of Light

The D. O. Sites Electric Co. has a unique display in their window this week, showing the various forms of light used for illumination and its evolution from the wood light used by primitive man to the present high-powered nitrogen electric lamp of today.

Following the wood fire was the oil-soaked "rush-rush" and then the primitive lamp of the Egyptians came into use about 4000 B. C. The colonial candle came into use about 400 A. D., which was followed by the oil wick lamp and the gas light. The first electric light used was the carbon filament lamp, which came into use in 1879. This light was improved upon by the Welsbach incandescent mantle which made its appearance in 1883. The Tungsden lamp came into use in 1913 and was followed by the Mazda Tungsden filament, in present use.

CELEBRATE 10th ANNIVERSARY

St. John's Church Has Grown From Mission of 17 Members to a Congregation of 260.

On the 21st of May, ten years ago, an unpretentious chapel, located at 68 S. Burgess Ave., was dedicated to the service of God. Rev. E. J. Klamfoth, then serving a congregation at Rome, gave such attention as he could to the mission that had its headquarters in the aforesaid chapel.

Later Rev. George W. Lose was called to serve the small band in connection with his work in the southeastern part of the city. Nearly seven years ago Pastor Lose moved to the Hilltop and gave better service to the young congregation. The work has prospered. Today the flock of 17 has increased to 260, and the chapel has given place to a more churchly and commodious edifice. The large congregation that assembled last Sunday morning in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the small beginning a decade ago, heard an edifying sermon delivered by Rev. Klamfoth, and in the afternoon enjoyed a service conducted by Rev. Zell of Marysville.

The senior and junior choir, under the leadership of L. O. Pearch, with Miss Elizabeth Raether and Miss Ruth Pearch as organists, enhanced the services with soul-inspiring songs of praise. An instrumental gem on organ and piano, presented by the organists, who are pupils of the Capital University School of Music, was a most pleasing part of the uplifting services of the day.

These festivities will be concluded on Friday evening, May 21, at 8 o'clock, when Rev. J. H. Schneider, who preached at the dedication of the chapel ten years ago, will deliver another of his matchless sermons.

PILGRIM HOLINESS CHURCH

Revival services every night, with Seth C. Rees, evangelist, bringing the message. Who has not heard of the good old religious days of our fathers? Many have hungered to attend revivals like they had. Those were days when God's word was the sword of the spirit and when it was fearlessly preached. Sinners were made tired of sin and wept their way to the cross at an old pine mourners' bench. The glory fell on all when new-born souls shouted. You are invited to attend this revival, a revival of the old type.

F. F. (Jack) Shank, 50 Binns Boulevard, has completed his road work for this year and informs us that he is is now endeavoring to make an honest living as salesman for Zartman & Co.

F. M. Hauer, 26 S. Oakley Ave., left Sunday for a six-week trip through the west and northwest. While he is away he will visit relatives in Utah, Nevada, California, Washington and British Columbia.

HEALTH HINTS

By DR. O. E. McFADON

"Vitamin starvation is an important point to be discussed by those who are interested in eliminating or reducing the cancer plague. Vitamin starvation weakens the body and its powers of resistance and leads to cancer-producing constipation. It also causes degeneration and laceration of the stomach and bowels, and these lesions cause the appearance of ulcers in the stomach and elsewhere.

"A vast amount of expert testimony has been produced showing that cancer of the stomach frequently arises out of stomach ulcers. It has been shown that cancer of the stomach and bowels claim an enormous number of victims in Great Britain. In other countries the number is most likely approximately as great.

"It stands to reason that vitamin starvation, an evil which unfortunately but necessarily accompanies our civilization, lessens the power of the body to resist the assault of disease. Hence the combination of chronic poisoning by bowel poisons and chemical poisons and of vitamin starvation is apt to prove most disastrous. Matters would perhaps be different if chronic poisoning were not accompanied by vitamin starvation or if vitamin starvation were not accompanied by chronic poisoning.

"Cancer seldom occurs at all among uncivilized people living in normal conditions, and if we want to make our bodies immune to this fatal plague we must eat foods that will give us what primitive mankind gets. Instruct mankind about foods and then a new people will grow up, replacing the miserable specimens of humanity who now constitute a large proportion of our population, especially in the large cities.

"I emphasize the importance of correct eating because I know that the major cause of cancer is the habit of permitting the residue of digested food to remain in the body longer than it should, and this condition is very largely the result of the nature of the food we eat. Although every doctor knows that this stagnation sets up a process of local irritation and slow poisoning in the body, so universal is it among civilized people that most medical men regard it as natural, and, even when marked, as being of trivial importance

"Nor would it be as serious as it is, if our lapse from the natural habits of the body lasted only for a month or even a year; for the body has wonderful powers of throwing off the poisons which enter it. But our bodily habits are formed in infancy and, once formed, last throughout our lives. As a result we unknowingly subject our bodies to 20 or 30 or 40 years of chronic irritation and slow poisoning, which sooner or later results in indigestions of various sorts, gastric ulcers, appendicitis and cancer. All of these are diseases of civilization and occur among uncivilized peoples only when the unnatural food and living conditions of civilization are imposed on them."

Camp Credit Given

Two quarter credit hours toward graduation from Ohio State University will be given students in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who attend citizens' military training camps this summer.

Decision to allow credit was made by President Rightmire at the suggestion of Capt. Paul A. Barry, reserve officer training camp adjutant. According to an announcement, students attending citizens' military training camp for 30 days will receive two thirds as much credit as they would have received for a whole year of reserve officer training camp.

Teachers' Exams

Examinations for local teachers' certificates will be held by the city board of examiners in Central High school building May 22 and June 5. The examinations are being given for Columbus certificates only. Teachers who hold temporary or emergency certificates should take the examination unless they are eligible for state or county certificates, which can be recognized by the board. Temporary certificates are not renewable.

STORED CLOTHES

If you will put light washable covers over your dresses that hang in the clothes closet, they will be saved much dirt and dust and will need cleaning less frequently.

DO YOU KNOW?

It was highly indelicate for ladies of ancient times to use forks rather than fingers. The old Roman poet Ovid wrote a couplet to a lady advising her how to pick her meat daintily with her fingers, and sketching the ugliness of the "spearing fork." Forks today are used for cake always. It is quite improper to eat any frosted cake with the fingers.

OHIO IS THIRD

The latest federal statistics show that Ohio is third among all states in the number of hunter's licenses sold, being exceeded by Pennsylvania and New York. Close to 5,000,000 hunting and fishing licenses were issued in the United States.

A most important and constructive work of scholarship is being undertaken by the American Council of Learned Societies Devoted to Humanistic Studies. The work is to be an authoritative dictionary of national biography. A LONG WAY

First Frosh (in math. exam.) How far are you from the correct answer?

Second Frosh—Two seats.

The oldest piano in existence is in the Metropolitan Museum of Art New York city. Its name is "Harpsichord with Soft and Loud," a title given it by its inventor, Bortolomeo di Francesco Cristofori, an Italian. It was made in 1720. It was sold at a public sale, traded for wine by a piano tuner, and relegated to a corner as a mere heirloom before its true worth was discovered.

A cana which will connect the North Sea with the Mediterranean, and which runs for five miles underneath a mountain was recently completed by French engineers, after nearly 100 years of work. A tunnel was dug 47½ feet high and 72 feet wide, in order that the canal might accommodate big barges.

HEALTH HINTS

"Vitamin starvation is an important point to be discussed by those who are interested in eliminating or reducing the cancer plague. Vitamin starvation weakens the body and its powers of resistance and leads to cancer-producing constipation. It also causes degeneration and laceration of the stomach and bowels, and these lesions cause the appearance of ulcers in the stomach and elsewhere.

"A vast amount of expert testimony has been produced showing that cancer of the stomach frequently arises out of stomach ulcers. It has been shown that cancer of the stomach and bowels claim an enormous number of victims in Great Britain. In other countries the number is most likely approximately as great.

"It stands to reason that vitamin starvation, an evil which unfortunately but necessarily accompanies our civilization, lessens the power of the body to resist the assault of disease. Hence the combination of chronic poisoning by bowel poisons and chemical poisons and of vitamin starvation is apt to prove most disastrous. Matters would perhaps be different if chronic poisoning were not accompanied by vitamin starvation or if vitamin starvation were not accompanied by chronic poisoning.

"Cancer seldom occurs at all among uncivilized people living in normal conditions, and if we want to make our bodies immune to this fatal plague we must eat foods that will give us what primitive mankind gets. Instruct mankind about foods and then a new people will grow up, replacing the miserable specimens of humanity who now constitute a large proportion of our population, especially in the large cities.

"I emphasize the importance of correct eating because I know that the major cause of cancer is the habit of permitting the residue of digested food to remain in the body longer than it should, and this condition is very largely the result of the nature of the food we eat. Although every doctor knows that this stagnation sets up a process of local irritation and slow poisoning in the body, so universal is it among civilized people that most medical men regard it as natural, and, even when marked, as being of trivial importance.

"Nor would it be as serious as it is, if our lapse from the natural habits of the body lasted only for a month or even a year; for the body has wonderful powers of throwing off the poisons which enter it. But our bodily habits are formed in infancy and, once formed, last throughout our lives. As a result we unknowingly subject our bodies to 20 or 30 or 40 years of chronic irritation and slow poisoning, which sooner or later results in indigestions of various sorts, gastric ulcers, appendicitis and cancer. All of these are diseases of civilization and occur among uncivilized peoples only when the unnatural food and living conditions of civilization are imposed on them."

The shoulder low with ends that hang to the waistline is one of the pert touches of the summer frocks.

THE MONK'S HOOD

An attractive sport coat from Paris is of brown wool and has a hood hanging down the back, lined with a darker tone.

THE GYPSY SILHOUETTE

There is a tendency in Paris to use girdles and belts that outline the hipline sharply, with skirts that flare below the knees.

Camp Credit Given

Two quarter credit hours toward graduation from Ohio State University will be given students in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who attend citizens' military training camps this summer.

Decision to allow credit was made by President Rightmire at the suggestion of Capt. Paul A. Barry, reserve officer training camp adjutant. According to an announcement, students attending citizens' military training camp for 30 days will receive two-thirds as much credit as they would have received for a whole year of reserve officer training camp.

Teachers' Exams

Examinations for local teachers' certificates will be held by the city board of examiners in Central High school building May 22 and June 5. The examinations are being given for Columbus certificates only. Teachers who hold temporary or emergency certificates should take the examination unless they are eligible for state or county certificates, which can be recognized by the board. Temporary certificates are not renewable.

Starched articles require a hotter iron to make them smoother than unstarched ones. Hence it is well to begin the ironing with the coarser things until the heat becomes even and the iron smooth.

White clothes that are yellow from improper washings will be bleached and whitened if you soak them overnight in a solution of soap and lukewarm water and wash in the morning, then rinse and put through a blueing water. Hang in the bright sunlight to dry.

Paris is using the jabot on evening gowns. A charming adaptation is the use of pleated gold cloth on a metal brocade gown.

STORED CLOTHES

If you will put light washable covers over your dresses that hang in the clothes closet, they will be saved much dirt and dust and will need cleaning less frequently.

DO YOU KNOW?

It was highly indelicate for ladies of ancient times to use forks rather than fingers. The old Roman poet Ovid wrote a couplet to a lady advising her how to pick her meat daintily with her fingers, and sketching the ugliness of the "spearing fork." Forks today are used for cake always. It is quite improper to eat any frosted cake with the fingers.

OHIO IS THIRD

The latest federal statistics show that Ohio is third among all states in the number of hunter's licenses sold, being exceeded by Pennsylvania and New York. Close to 5,000,000 hunting and fishing licenses were issued in the United States.

A most important and constructive work of scholarship is being undertaken by the American Council of Learned Societies Devoted to Humanistic Studies. The work is to be an authoritative dictionary of national biography. It is hoped that the myths and the legends which have grown up around certain great American figures will be discarded and the facts and other interpretation of the significance of each individual studied.

A LONG WAY

First Frosh (in math. exam.) How far are you from the correct answer?

Second Frosh—Two seats.

The oldest piano in existence is in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York city. Its name is "Harpsichord with Soft and Loud," a title given it by its inventor, Bortolomeo di Francesco Cristofori, an Italian. It was made in 1720. It was sold at a public sale, traded for wine by a piano tuner, and relegated to a corner as a mere heirloom before its true worth was discovered.

A cana which will connect the North Sea with the Mediterranean, and which runs for five miles underneath a mountain was recently completed by French engineers, after nearly 100 years of work. A tunnel was dug 47½ feet high and 72 feet wide, in order that the canal might accommodate big barges.

Dr. Koller urged all members of the United Lutheran church of Ohio to be efficient and business like in their administration of the trust.

Recipes

RAISIN FRENCH TOAST

The next time you have raisin bread left over try raisin bread French toast. To make the coating beat two eggs and add one-half cup milk and one-half teaspoon salt. The trick in making French toast is that the bread should not remain in the coating too long; just long enough that sufficient adheres to fry well.

CREOLE TOMATOES

Remove a slice from the tops of six tomatoes, scoop out some of the pulp. Sprinkle inside with salt, invert and let stand an hour. Melt one and one-half tablespoons of butter, blend a tablespoon of flour, and mix well. Pour on one-half cup of milk. Bring to boiling point, add a cup of crab meat, a tablespoon of chopped green pepper, paprika and pepper. Fill tomatoes with this, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and bake 15 to 20 minutes.

STUFFED BEETS

Stuffed beets are very colorful as well as very healthful. Take a No. 3 can of whole beets, hollow them out like cups, and cut the parts removed into small pieces. Heat these with a No. 2 can of peas from which the liquor has been drained. Heat the hollowed beets also, and drain them well. Season with butter, pepper and salt, and fill with the chopped beets and peas. Garnished with a bit of parsley in each cup, they are an unusually attractive dish to serve when giving a luncheon.

See Seiller's ad on back page

UNCOOKED MEATS

Uncooked meats should always be kept covered in an enamel dish.

FRESH BEANS

Fresh beans or peas should never pass through any cold water.

VARNISHED LINOLEUM

If linoleum is varnished it wears better and is easier to clean.

SAVING STEPS

Every woman should arrange her kitchen so that she does not have to cross and recross it many times in order to perform simple tasks.

You have a clear title to every passing minute. What are you doing with your possession?

He who will have a smooth road can seldom choose his destination.

HIGHWAYS

Less than 25 years ago the first automobile successfully negotiated the trip by highway from Detroit to New York City.

It took a full week to get there.

Today the same trip is made comfortably in three days without a stop for repairs, assistance out of mud holes, or delay in seeking directions.

More than 110,000 motor cars carried visitors into the national parks from every state in 1925.

Uncle Sam is delivering mail each day of the year on nearly one and a quarter million miles of these highways.

Recent surveys in Ohio indicated that passenger cars from other states varied from 9 per cent of the traffic to 30 per cent on through routes. At one point 60 per cent of these foreign cars were from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan and New York. The remainder represented other states from California to Maine, as well as the Dominion of Canada.

We have today 3,000,000 miles of highways, ranging from mere trails to the highest type of improved road. Half a million miles have some type of surfacing.

SPEAKING PLAINLY

A farmer who had married a rich woman was constantly irritated by having the fact of his wife's wealth thrown up at him by the wife herself and by her relatives. Whenever he bought anything, or made any improvement on the farm, it was always, "I wish it wasn't for my money you wouldn't have been able to do that." One day the farmer brought back from market a fine cow that he had bought for a mere song. While he was exhibiting the animal to an admiring group of farm-hands, his wife came on the scene. "Well, Nellie," he said proudly, isn't this a splendid cow?" "Yes, she replied coldly, "but if it wasn't for my money it wouldn't be here. Exasperated, the farmer yelled out "No, woman, and if it hadn't been for your money you wouldn't have been here yourself."

About 100,000 species of fish including some that walk and others that make vocal sounds, are found in the ocean. In South America is found a kind of catfish that growls like a dog the sound being distinguishable a hundred feet away. Some species of fish carry their eggs in their heads and "shoot" or "angle" at their prey. The migratory habits of other kinds are widely different. Some kinds of fish, such as cels and salmon, trail many miles to and from their breeding grounds.

FIVE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Charles Southwick Suffers Fractured Ankle and L. W. McFadon, Broken Arm.

Traffic accidents on the West Side were numerous last week-end.

L. L. Smith, 869 Bellows Ave., and C. D. Winders, 1318½ Summit St., were cut and bruised when the auto driven by Winders was hit by the car of Herbert Distlehorst, McDowell and Fish streets, at Davis avenue and Town street.

Bruises and cuts about the arms and body were suffered by Charles Burris, 322 S. Hague Ave., when he was hit by a taxicab driven by T. H. Stottler, 634 Reynolds Ave., as he was alighting from a street car at Broad and Glenwood Ave. He was taken to McKinley hospital.

John Southwick, 61 S. Davis Ave., was hit by the auto of W. J. McCreight, 239 Belvidere Ave., on Central Ave. and suffered a fractured right ankle and cuts about the body.

L. W. McFadon, barber, was hit at Broad and Glenwood by a hit-skip motorists and received a broken arm.

Mary Jane Todd, 9, living on Scott St., was struck and knocked down at Broad and Sandusky streets Monday morning by a truck. She was taken to St. Carmel hospital, where it was said her condition was not serious.

WILL REMODEL MARKET HOUSE

Building to Be Ronstructed and Used as Recreation Center.

Council Monday night made it possible for the city recreation department to remodel the old West Side market house on State street between Gift and Skidmore streets, to be used as a recreational center.

At the request of Director Raymouth council passed a bond issue of $22,974 for remodeling and stuccoing the building. A gymnasium, shower and public baths will be installed. A community hall for meetings and entertainments will also be a feature of the reconstructed building.

Fifty million acres of swamp, lake and marshland have been drained in this country during the last few years for agricultural purposes. Much of this drained land is worthless when the water is taken from it and some of the best nesting grounds of the wild fowls in America are destroyed. The government is taking steps to provide permanent refuges for this class of birds. Funds will also be given which will be used to combat the duck disease which annually kills millions of ducks in the west.

City Hall Bids Opened

Seven bids were received for the construction of the new city hall on the river front by Service Director Duffy, the lowest of which was $1,198,000, made by the Boyajohn & Barr Co. of Columbus, and covers the general contract only. Contracts will probably be let next week.

Workmen in the Harmar Mine of the Consumer Mining Company at Harmarville, Pa., recently uncovered a fossil of a tree branch which is said to be one of the finest specimens of its kind yet found. It has been presented to the Carnegie Institute of Technology and it is now on exhibition there. It represents the top of a tree, and the branches on it have a spread of about three feet. Carnegie professors consider the plan an excellent example with which to illustrate the great amount of plant and vegetable matter required to form a single bed of coal six feet thick. The uniqueness of the specimen lies in the fact that on it so many details, such as bark, markings, limbs, twigs and leaves are shown. The details of growth are rarely so visible. The fossil has been mounted in the geological laboratory as a permanent exhibit.

Two astronomical expeditions sailed half way around the world to observe the total eclipse of the sun on Jan. 14, 1926. The eclipse was best observed from Sumatra, Borneo, and the Indian ocean. Both expeditions observed the eclipse from Sumatra. San Francisco was the starting point for both these expeditions, one under the leadership of Captain F. B. Littell, and the other uder Dr. Heber D. Curtis. Reports from India say that thousands of Hindus were frenzied by the eclipse, and gathered in great numbers on the banks of the sacred Ganges to pray for protection.

MANY WEEK-END AUTO ACCIDENTS

Curtis Needles Injured When Machine Runs Over Sidewalk.

Mrs. Laura A. Swank, aged 62 years, of 423 S. Ogden Ave., is in Mt. Carmel hospital with both legs broken, a fractured left arm and possible internal injuries as a result of an auto crash near Marble Cliff in North Hague avenue. The auto in which she was riding with her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Stout, and her son-in-law, Mr. Stout, overturned in a ditch after being sideswiped by another car which did not stop.

Stout was knocked unconscious, but was revived and found to be injured only slightly. His wife also escaped serious injuries. Mrs. Minnie Boerner, 496 City Park Ave., was another occupant of the car and was slightly bruised.

W. H. Beech, 391 Whitethorne Ave., was struck by the motorcycle of Officer Earl Hise as he was alighting from a street car at the corner of Main and High streets. Both men were slightly bruised. Beech is a street car conductor.

Arthur Patton, 2451 W. Broad St., suffered a cut on the left wrist when he was struck by the auto of Clarence Schuman, 24 S. Ogden Ave.

Curtis Needles, 65, of 47 N. Harris Ave., suffered a possible fracture of the skull Monday when he was struck by the auto driven by Denver Scott of Portsmouth, at State and High streets.

Scott was driving north in High St., he said, when the auto in front of him stopped suddenly. He crashed into it, he said, and his car rebounded, running over the club and striking Needles, who was standing in the sidewalk.

Needles was taken to Grant hospital. Scott was released after being questioned by the police.

HIGHLAND 9A's WILL PRESENT

"Daddy Long-Legs" At John Burroughs School Friday Night.

By Thelma Scribner

Don't forget to mark this Friday, May 28, in your memorandum book as a very important engagement. It will be one of the most important on Highland Avenue Junior High school's yearly calendar.

Did you see Mary Pickford in "Daddy-Long Legs"? Did you like it? Of course you did, and you are going to like Thelma Hamilton, a senior at Highland, just as well. She has the leading role in "Daddy-Long Legs," to be given on that evening, in the auditorium of John Burroughs school. This play, in four acts, was written by Jean Webster and will be presented by the senior graduating class under the able direction of Miss Velma Moss, instructor of dramatics at Highland.

The theme is of how a young girl, who is encumbered in her path by being an orphan girl, tries her fate in the world and finds things worth living for. The scenes occur first, in the John Grier Home for Orphans; second, at a college for girls; third, in Lock-Willows, a country home; and fourth, in the beautiful home of Jervis Pendleton of the city.

The cast, supporting Miss Hamilton, who has the feminine lead, in addition to Norman Wintermeyer, who has the title role of Jarvis Pendleton, are:

James McBride	Leonell Koontz
Cyrus Wykoff	Harvey Williams
Abner Parsons	James Slicker
Griggs	Paul Keat
Walters	Stewart Hindmer
Miss Pritchard	Mary Ham
Mrs. Pendleton	Nellie Doughty
Julia Pendleton	Lourena Francis
Sallie McBride	Margaret Miller
Mrs. Semple	Agnes Gatten
Mrs. Lippett	Ruth Leach
Sadie Kate	Helen Hammond
Gladiola	Martha Waymer
Loretta	May Knisely
Mamie	Virginia Neff
Freddie Perkins	Vincent Eylar
Carrie	Virgina Gibson

The program will be made even more entertaining by several selected numbers, to be given by Highland Avenue school's orchestra under the direction of Mr. Birmingham.

SHALL SUGAR BE CONDEMNED?

The questions, "Is this a good food? "Is that a good food?" "Should I eat this?" etc., are common question which, segregated, as they usually are often lead to false notions. Thanks to Wiley, McCann and other scientists we have accurate analysis of all foods but, unfortunately the chemists do no give the figures on food mixtures.

If all questions of What, When, How and How Much food were answered and understood, there would still remain unanswered and, we might say almost unanswerable, problems of the results of any given mixture, when modified as it must be by the personal element of the mixer. This personal element must include the "mixer's" will, as affected by his cultivated or perverted taste, appetite, environment or idiosyncracy. And when we consider that these personality points are as variant at are our countenances and that we are all supposed to do our own mixing, the complexity of the problem, and therefore the futility of direct and positive answers to such superficial questions, will be apparent.

As some harmless and inoffensive elements (carbon and nitrogen, for instance), when brought together produce a rank poison, so, many foods each innocent and useful as food, may when mixed in our human "concrete mixer" (the stomach), be converted into a poisonous product which cannot be productive of good mental or physical results as we might otherwise expect from it.

We must not infer from Mr. McCann's incessant warfare against white sugar, that he is condemning the use of sugar, but he berates the white sugar of commerce for what it lacks, namely, the mineral elements which have been so ruthlessly taken away.

Moreover, white sugar in the proper balance with fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals, he would not regard as poisonous or dangerous. But the real culprit in the case is our sense of taste, which we allow to become perverted by the seductive flavor of sugar, leading to such excess use of it as will destroy the appetite for other foods. This excess and improper balance would be bad in its results if the sugar were not deprived of its minerals, but the excess and deficient minerals together against the lessened quantity of fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals, lead into lime starvation which make bone and teeth development impossible. Herein is good reason for limiting children in their use of candy. We often hear parents say that the children do not care for the more wholesome foods, but they would like them if deprived of their sweets a few days, and they would care less for candy. Therefore, keep up the fight against white sugar and white flour as if they were actually poisonous and keep the children (and all of us) from becoming addicts.

Drs. Hugenard, Mangan and Pianoli French physicists, recently demonstrated before the Paris Academy of Science a new instrument which measures altitude electrically, and is about eight times more accurate than the ordinary barometer. The apparatus is based on the fact that a heated object cools more quickly in dense air than in thin air. A wire of great resistance is used, so that when an electric current is passed through, a high temperature can be obtained. The electrical resistance of the wire changes with the temperature. Variation in the density of the air will cause a variation of the intensity of the electric current, and this can be used to measure the altitude.

Boston University now offers a scientific marriage course. The course was conceived by Prof. Laurence Davis, Dean of the College for Women, at Boston University. The course covers such subjects as the choice of a husband, the apportionment of income, and the reasons for marriage failures. This course is distinctly an innovation. Professor Davis does not feel that the courses in cooking, domestic economy, or on the care of children, which have been offered previously, are sufficient. The increasingly large numbers of divorces are, he maintains, proof that there is great need for a course that will prepare for marriage just as there are courses that prepare one for a professional career.

COMING FOR THE NEEDLE

Africa seems to be full of sickness, writes a doctor stationed in Kamerun, West Africa. Most of the patients come for some definite thing. Many come for the "needle," as they call the injection of neosalvarsan, which is used in treating ulcers and unsightly skin lesions. The way in which it quickly heals not only ulcers but long-continued headaches, aching joints and bones, and many other disorders is wonderful indeed.

The treatment of ulcers is done in the afternoon. Some days it is not possible to give to all who come, and there is hard feeling, so eager are the patients for this treatment. A steady hand is required to give these injections, especially up to thirty and forty in a day, yet the doctor has a native assistant who does this well and has given as many as ninety-one injections in a single day.

Dr. John J. Abel, professor of Pharmacology at Johns Hopkins University, was awarded the first annual prize of the Research Corporation of America. The award of $3500 is made each year to the scientist who does 'more to promote human enjoyment of life than any other living American scientist.' The award is made on the condition that the winner make his contribution to knowledge without hope of commercial benefit. Dr. Abel's contributions have been in a difficult branch of chemistry. His discoveries regarding the ductless glands and the light he has shed on their functions have been particularly valuable. He has also done some remarkable work in the field of disinfectants. "His contributions," says Arthur Hauserschlag, president of the Research Corporation, "are largely of that basic nature which extends human knowledge of the intensely important subjects involved, and leads to the better control of diseases and to the maintenance of health."

MORE STATELY ENGLISH

People who have been bitten by the culture bug like to show their culture by using words that other people are not familiar with, says The Pathfinder. The way to treat such people is to pay them back in their own coin. For instance when one of them makes a remark which is intended to lay you out, you retort with this: "Your assertion is adscititious."

"Adscititious" is pronounced "ad-si-tish-us" and it means superfluous, supernumerary, added, or unessential—not to the point. But it may be new to your high-brow friend.

BAD LOGIC

A contributor to Scribner's "As I Like It" department tells of a baseball game that was played in his youth. "We played the 'Muckers,' and one of them not only stole second base, a flat stone, but picked it up and ran all the way to third base with it, claiming he could not be put out because he was safe on second anyway, and had never left the base. We found no rule to cover this act of larceny, and as he was bigger than any of us, he got away with the theft. But my soul still rankles with the injustice of that logic."

RECIPES FOR USE OF CHERRIES

CHERRY JELLY

Wash and stem three pounds of ripe cherries. Put the fruit into a porcelain lined kettle, or an agate kettle and melt slowly, then cook gently until the juice flows freely. Strain through a colendar, pressing out all the juice. To a quart of juice add three-quarters of a package of gelatine powder softened in a little cold water. Sweeten to taste and bring to boiling point to slightly thicken. Strain into a wet mould and set to cool and harden. Unmold and serve with whipped cream or ice cream.

CHERRY PRESERVES

Prepare the cherries as for jam, only use a pint of sugar to a pint of fruit. Cook until the syrup is rich and thick, then can as usual. Sometimes the preserves will keep in a stone crock in a dry, cool place, but it is safer to seal them unless they are eaten up quickly.

CANNED CHERRIES

Prepare as for preserves, only use a half pint of sugar to a pint of the fruit. Cook until the fruit is done, then can hot in the usual way. Turn the cans upside down to cool; when cold tighten the covers and store in a dry place.

CHERRY ICE

Prepare the same as for the cherry jelly, then, after sweetening, stir in a heaping tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little water. Bring to boiling point and when slightly thickened remove from the fire and cool. The liquid should be sweeter than for the jelly as the freezing takes out the sweetness. When cold, turn into the freezer and freeze. Sometimes the juice of an orange or lemon is added when the cherry juice is removed from the fire.

The Story of Our Alphabet

All that the humane heart and intellect have ever conceived, or can ever conceive, of truth, of pity, of kindness, of love, of faith and of reverance; all prayers and all religion; all possible systems of order and philosophy; all civilization and culture are the ripe fruitage of the various combinations that can be formed with the letters of the alphabet. In these, and in these alone, may be found the records of the past, and lie all the possibilities of the future.

The alphabet is the key by which we unlock the thoughts of a people and it is the most useful of all human inventions enabling us in colorful words to speak to the eyes and by different forms impart brightness and body to our thoughts. If you are a student of speech you will be the last to treat your letters irreverently. The alphabet is far too blessed a thing to be treated with sacrilege.

It may be of interest to know that the twenty-six letters of the alphabet can be transposed 620 sextillion, 448 quintillion, 40 quadrillion, 733 trillion, 290 billion, 489 million, 360 thousand items.

As long as language endures, it will be possible for the women of genius to say the original thing. It is to her that we who are earnest advocates of the standardization of speech sounds must turn for the symbols needed to represent the sounds that must be employed to indicate words in writing. As a matter of history, every graphic system owes its origin to a rude form of picture-writing, as crude as that employed by the American Indian, the Maori, or the African bushman.

Our journey toward the letters was a painfully slow one, for we used a syllabary of hieroglyphs to express our ideas, and by ideas progressed to runes, and these runes we termed futhorc, the name being derived from the first six letters—f, u, th, o, r, c, or the first runic alphabet.

The runes are said to have been taken from the Greek alphabet like those of Thrace in the sixth century B. C. The earliest extant specimens are of the second and third century. They passed out of use with the spread of the Roman alphabet from the eleventh to the fifteenth century.

The original meaning of the word rune is "secret," and it was used to signify a mysterious song, doctrine, speech or writing. There were several runic alphbets—the Gothic, the Anglian and the Scandinavian.

From the clearest and from the simplest of these early alphabets, we have derived all the modern systems of writing, and after the Roman alphabet displaced the runes, it superseded the Greek and the square letter of the Hebrew, the decorative Sanskrit, the beautiful Neski of the Arabic-speaking world, and may be said to prevail everywhere.

"It is only within recent years, in fact, since the establishment of Angora as the Turkish capital, that Roman letters have by decree superseded the Arabic alphabet.

WESTERN TOUR LETTER

Our trip through the west has been a very interesting one in many ways, having traveled over fertile valleys, sandy deserts and mountains of rock formations, many of which were snow covered. Witnessed different conditions of living—the cliff dwellers, Indian adobes, ranch huts, pioneer wagons of the herder, tepees and dugouts. The Grand Canyon is the most awe-inspiring sight we ever beheld. After viewing the precipitous trail necessary to cross the canyon in order to visit the National Park of Southern Utah we suddenly "went cold," the only means of travel being on barres' back, a two-day trip; thought to route our course from Lund, Utah, on our return, but we later learned it was closed season for the parks and no standard means of transportation due to rains in the mountains at this time. Likewise, rains in central California made mountain travel dangerous so we had to give up the trip to Gen. Grant and Sequoia Parks.

Other side trips are being taken as scheduled. In crossing the mountains we experienced very little unpleasantness due to altitude. A little difficulty in hearing distinctly being the most noticeable. At the Grand Canyon we met a Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grayum, relatives of the Watts and Logan families on South Ogden avenue.

After crossing the Sierra Nevadas we entered a section of sand desert, practically uninhabitable, a few herders and Indian traders being the only signs of human habitants. Of the plant life, some sage brush, joshua trees and cacti being the only evidence, although for many miles not a plant of any kind could be seen—nothing but sand as far as the eye could scan. Where plant life could be seen in the distance we had a rare treat in seeing that phenomenon known as a mirage. Leaving the desert waste and crossing another range of mountains we came to a very fertile valley—depending on irrigation, however—where most tropical fruits are grown, also garden vegetables and alfalfa. This is a beautiful section with modern homes, schools, churches and good roads, our stopping place being a small fruit ranch near Lindsay, Calif. People of the east usually regard a ranch as a tract of many acres. Such is not the case, especially in the more fertile sections.

Los Angeles was the next city visited. We liked this section, including the Imperial Valley, very much. The city commercially and industrially is very much like other cities, but the residential sections are more to our liking. The homes for the most part are of the colonial and Spanish type; streets are wide and edged with date palms. Lawns are well kept and flowers grow in profusion. In the urban districts tropical fruits and nuts are found in abundance. A few days spent at Long Beach, the beach being the only added attraction to this resort. A trip to Los Angeles could scarcely be considered complete without a trip to Catalina Islands. Here we find the homes of Wm. Wrigley, the chewing gum manufacturer; Gene Stratton Porter and Zane Grey. A trip on the glass bottom boat giving a view of the submarine gardens, a guide explaining the plant and fish life, is well worth braving the ocean to witness. Only one member—a small child—of our party of seven was troubled with seasickness while crossing the ocean. Water comparatively smooth and strong wind on our return sent us all to the lower deck.

Arrived at Salt Lake City on Monday, May 17. Have spent two interesting days at this place learning much of pioneer life and the faith of the Latter Day Saints. Visited the Bingham copper mines this morning and learned of mining in the open. The State Capitol and the Temple Museums are, we believe, equal to or better than anything of their class to be found in the United States. The Temple grounds, excepting the Temple itself, are free to the public at any time and a guide conducts visitors through the grounds giving instructions and any desired information in regard to the buildings or the faith of the organization. They are very humble in their attestations and wholly considerate of the faith of others. The cool drinking water of this city is very commendable. We forgot to state that at the Grand Canyon the drinking water is transported, by rail, in steel tanks similar to the oil tanks so frequently seen, from a distance of 80 miles. There are many things we have failed to state in this letter, but we will be glad to give any further information on our return.

Our next stop is Omaha, Neb., then on to Chicago and home. Do we like the west? Central Ohio is good enough for us yet.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Ditrick.

Automatic exit doors are being installed on some Chicago street cars to promote safety. The system is operated by compressed air. The doors do not open until the car comes to a stop, and they cannot be closed until the passengers are off the steps. The weight of the passenger in the vestibule opens the door, but not until the car is at a standstill. Then the removal of the weight causes the door to close.

Jesus Christ has a message for today, and happy are they who hear it and heed it.

Culture is measured by the ability to see interesting things wherever we are.

Not long ago the Egyptian Government directed its department of Antiquities to repair the Great Sphinx. Scaffolding was erected and the huge stone face was carefully inspected and repaired.

The decisions that youth makes are vital. The ways you choose grow into habits, and habits speedily become bands that hold you fast.

The greatest quest: seeking the truth. The greatest reward: finding the truth.

It is a good thing to stop harping on our own achievements and to play second fiddle sometimes.

The hope of the world rests upon those whose hope of Christ's triumph over the world does not waver.

When we are in trouble it is always a source of encouragement to know that others have come through like experiences. What has been borne can be endured again; where victories have been won they are still possible.

The future will take care of itself if we take care to make the most of the present.

We cannot always keep from trouble, but in trouble we can take refuge in God.

God puts no limits on our spiritual growth; we limit ourselves.

A green brakeman on the Colorado Midland was making his first trip up Ute Pass. They were going up a very steep grade, and with unusual difficulty the engineer succeeded in reaching the top. At the station, looking out of his cab, the engineer saw the new brakeman and said with a sigh of relief, "I tell you what, my lad, we had a job to get up there, didn' twe?"

"We certainly did," said the new man, "and if I hadn't put on the brakes, we'd have slipped back."

MISS ELIZABETH GORDON of the Hilltop School of Expression, 2393½ W. Broad St., will rent her studio out for recitals or parties. Rent will be very reasonable.

Meeting his pet enemy on Main street one day, Jim observed affably, "I was sayin' some good things about you to a man this mornin'."

"You were?"

"Yes, I said you had the best cattle an' sheep of any farmer I know. An', what was more, I said that pair o' hosses o' yourn was the finest in Franklin County—wuth at least $900."

"Who'd you say it to?" queried the flattered foe.

"The tax assessor!"

Life is a series of stories without an end unless there is a heaven to complete them. It is not religion and revelation only that point toward immortality, but the happenings of earth also. We cannot believe that the great Creator of the universe made human life a riddle without an answer.

Miss Elizabeth Gordon of the Hilltop School of Expression, 2393½ W. Broad St., will open a six weeks' summer term June 12. Registrations can now be made at the studio or by calling Ra. 1967-W.

Be sure you are right, begin right, and go right ahead until you finish.

When we neglect the house of God we neglect our own deepest needs.

Avoid criticism not by ceasing to act, but by trying to do better.

The Eye-Sight Conservation Council of America reports, after a two years' survey, that defective eyesight is affecting the country's industrial output, handicapping education, and menacing human welfare. According to the report, twenty-five per cent of the children in the public schools "have manifest defects of vision and symptoms of eyestrain." Among industrial workers data was gathered from forty companies, and on this data was based the estimate that the prevalence of defective vision averages fifty-four per cent among the 42,000,000 "gainfully employed persons in the United States."

LARGEST CLASS AT WEST HIGH

Seniors Also Have Highest Percentage of Any of West's Graduating Classes.

This year's class is the largest to be graduated thus far from West High school. The seniors have the highest percentage in scholarship of all West's graduating classes. There are not just a few individuals with high grades, but the majority of the class have made fine records and won for themselves the distinction of being excellent students.

This fact became known early in the year when the list was made of those eligible for the Rotary club luncheon. Indeed there was such excellent material that it became a difficult matter to choose the quota allowed from West. The activities of the school have been largely in the hands of these pupils. Their acknowledged sucess has been due to the type of those who directed and planned.

Anna Jones, 140 Brehl Ave., who had perfect grades, with 40 E's to her credit, was chosen valedictorian of the class of 1926. This is a higher record than that of any former valedictorian.

The names of those students who have 20 E's or more are added below: Mildred Mathew, Mary Virginia Hewitt, Mary Rudolph, Bonibel Simmons, Bernois Woodyard, George Goodrich, Esther Geyer, Faye Latham, Catherine Gilliland, Frank Himebrook, Jeanne Kenderick, Evelyn Rupe, Martha Demavent, Gladys Johnson, Brunson Sloan, Edith Williams, Pauline Miller, Thelma Ansel, Thelma Nassano, Eunice Scott, Virginia Hollister, Rita Gee, Harriett Fisher, Martha Francis, Alice McCreary, Elizabeth Hunt, Hollis Barber, Ona Butler, Elizabeth Craft, Geraldine Phillips, Virginia Bostwick, Edythe Gatton, Floyd Kemper, Martha Stuart, Catherine Southworth and Edna Keefer.

West Broad St. School Notes

The children of the school had as their guests Friday morning, Rev. Gilbert Cox and Mr. Harvey, a veteran of the Civil war. The pupils of the 3B presented the assembly program, assisted by the Girls' chorus, after which all were dismissed but the fifth and sixth grades. Patriotic songs were sung and the "Gettysburg Speech" and "Old Guard" recited by the sixth grades.

Mr. Harvey and Rev. Cox made short and interesting addresses, explaining the meaning of Memorial Day and what love for the flag really is.

County Commissioner Milton W. Westlake, 2499 W. Broad St., received word from Philadelphia late Tuesday evening of the death of Al. P. Gibbs of Wapakoneta, who had been making his home in Columbus. Mr. Gibbs left here last Thursday with young Westlake driving his car for him on a trip to New York and Atlantic City. On Monday Mr. Gibbs went to Philadelphia to be there when Alladin Temple Shriners arrived. He was a member of Alladin Temple. The body will be sent to Wapakoneta.

West High Senior Writes Class Song

For hopes and dreams that never fade,
For precious thoughts that never die,
For wholesome ways, these years have made,
We'll ever love you, Dear West High.
Oh! these years all too swiftly have passed away.
And the time of our parting has come,
And the treasures you gave us are dearer than gold,
With your memories, our hearts o'er will glow.
The bonds you have woven will keep us at one,
In honor and loyalty true—
And when life's victory at last we have won—
We'll pay all the glory, Dear West Hi, to you.

The above tribute to West High was written by Robert T. Weller, 253 Midland Ave., better known as "Bob," and dedicated to the class of 1926. So far as we are able to find out, this is the first time in the history of the schools of Columbus, that words, music and orchestrations for a class song have ever been written by a member of the graduating class.

Weller is only 17 years of age and is an accomplished cornet soloist. He has played in the West High orchestra for two years and has been affiliated with several professional organizations. He is cornet instructor at the Hilltop School of Music and has done very creditable work with his pupils.

Herbert E. Hutchinson has published the song for solo voice and piano accompaniment. It may be procured at the Cooper Music store.

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS?

Why have people a right to destroy the shrubbery around a public building, because that building is a school?

Why have they a right to break windows with slingshots and B. B. rifles?

Why have they the right to tell children to mind their own business when the children politely ask them to refrain from destroying the school property?

What credit is it to a community to have such things and worse one, being of nightly occurrence?

Where does the responsibility for these occurrences rest?

REV. R. E. SHIELDS ACCEPTS CALL

To Mountain Lake, New Jersey, Community Church—Will Leave July 1.

Rev. R. E. Shields, pastor of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church since 1919, resigned his pastorate here last week and will leave July 1 for Mountain Lake, New Jersey, where he will become pastor of the Mountain Lake Community church.

Mr. Shield's pastorate here has been one of marked success. Coming here from a Detroit church when Hoge Memorial had about 275 members, he has seen the membership grow to more than 600. A new church-house, with chapel, individual class rooms, gymnasium and parlors has been built on to the original building, more than doubling the space for activities, and making the church one of the best equipped in the city for community service.

He has been very active in the Daily Vacation Bible school work and all community affairs. He is president of the board of trustees of the Holmes Hilltop Library and national treasurer of the Merator club.

THE BEAVER—WOODSMAN AND ARCHITECT

Thousands of years before the first stone hatch, bound with rawhide to a branch and wielded by some lusty fellow of long ago, chipped out a deep scar in the base of some lofty tree until it fell, the beaver with his chisel-shaped incisors had found out how it should be done.

And ages before men with walls of rock and concrete had built ponds and canals, the same wise animal had dammed his streams and was rafting the timber, which he had felled to the point where he wished to use it.

By raising the level of his tiny stream until it became deep enough for his winter house of sticks and mud, and afforded him a clear entrance beneath the thick ice of the northern winter, the beaver often flooded great stretches of lowlands.

The forest was flooded and killed. As time went on this lake grew shallow for the sediment brought down by the spring floods, and from the growth and decay of many generations of water plants.

Some calamity wiped out the busy community, or the site was abandoned for some other reason. The stream flowing as the elements dictated, once more carved out for itself a course through its filled up valley.

In the rich soil on its borders grew a crop of rich meadow grass, with cranberry and leather leaf over-topping pink orchid and pitcher plants. The face of the landscape was entirely changed.

Perhaps, ere this, came the trapper braving wild beasts and wilder people of the wilderness to harvest the rich brown coat so prized by men. Sooner, or later, the last of the brave race of beavers gave up their lives to man's greed. Only their dams and ruined ponds were left to mark the vanished kingdom.

Then came the settler planting his home beside the rill where ages before the beaver had built his lowly citadel. The broad level meadow which once was a beaver pond became the mowing field of the newer owner.

In the older settled regions, the beaver whose patient toil had made possible the fair project, is forgotten save where tradition has marked some stream where once he lived.

HEALTH HINTS

By DR. G. E. McFADON

Why not live a hundred years. Others have done it. It is often accomplished and those who do it might have lived still longer. We all shorten our lives by our carelessness. And those who live temperate lives have life "more abundantly" and enjoy their latter days better than the so-called "good timers" and "high livers," if those terms mean excesses. Mother Nature gives good dividends and is not deceived.

To gain in flesh after 40—even one pound a year—ought to be taken as a danger signal; it would be safer to lose a pound a year.

You may have the overeating habit and don't know it. It grows on one insiduously and leads to disease, sooner or later. When food is tempting and you are urged to take more, is it your habit to ask yourself "How much can I take care of?" If so, you may be sure you have the over-eating habit. Better ask "How little can I get along with?" and be safe. Then your habitual craving for food will soon be replaced by normal hunger, which is a pleasure as compared with unnatural craving.

As we cannot appreciate our hands until after we have had a sort thumb, so we cannot fully appreciate how much we are served by all our five senses until, from some cause, we may be denied our hearing or sight for a day. It is possible to be intemperate by the way of any special sense, but the abuse of the sense of taste is the one which by reason of our weak wills and judgment will most likely lead us into sensuality and excesses. Extreme cases we call addicts. A question for all of us is: "To what extent am I an addict?"

If the soil from which you expect a crop fails you, you send a sample of it to the university. The chemists there analyse it and advise you what nutrients and minerals to "feed" it. If you follow the advice and the plant life proceeds to get said nutrients and minerals from the soil and accordingly yields you a good crop.

Your body has 16 minerals which must be replenished. If your food does not furnish these minerals you cannot live. You may be feeble and anemic for a time and do half service, as your soil did, but your food must contain those minerals if you would be normal.

FINISH ONE SHADE FIRST

A CLEANER LOOK

If the top of your kitchen table is of wood, cover it with white oilcloth, stretch tightly and tack on the underneath side. You will be surprised how much cleaner and brighter the kitchen will seem.

PACKED LUNCHES

If you are in the habit of packing lunches every day, keep all the things pertaining to them in the same place and pack the lunches right where the oiled paper, paper napkins, etc., are convenient. It means much speedier work.

EASIER THAN POLISHING

Table silver will rarely need more strenuous cleaning if it is washed once a week in warm water to which a little ammonia and whiting have been added. Rinse in clear hot water and dry on a clean towel.

WHAT TO DO

Burned food means a careless cook. Cheap kitchen utensils are poor economy.

Silver packed away in dry flour will not tarnish.

A bag of salt heated fairly hot and placed on the face will often cure toothache.

It will shrink woolens to rub soap directly on them. Wash them in soapy water.

A flour dredge is an absolute necessity in the kitchen if you want your gravies to be smooth.

Brief Bootmaker

It was Thackeray who, when visiting Ireland misunderstood the letters G.P.O. to mean "God Preserve O'Connell." But even in this age of letters, when newspaper readers are accustomed to decipher abbreviated form in news and advertisement columns, mistakes are easily made. A notice on a certain street door, for example, always excites interest. It runs: "J. K., B.B.M." Some rare university degree? No; merely an intimation that the occupant was a boot and shoe mender.

Hot Comeback!

The famous animal painter Verboeckhoven, who painted principally sheep and goats, once visited an English manufacturer. The pompous Briton said, with condescension:

"Are you the man who paints only stupid animals?"

"Yes," said Verboeckhoven, "why do you ask? Did you want someone to paint your portrait?"

RECIPES OF WORTH WHILE VALUE

EGG CUTLETS

Chop 3 hard boiled eggs very fine, add tablespoons of fine bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons of grated cheese, a pinch of curry powder, salt and pepper to taste; mix well with a beaten egg, form into cutlet shapes, dip into batter and fry a delicate brown in deep hot fat. Sprinkle with grated cheese and serve hot.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

Two squares of chocolate, three-fourths cup of light brown sugar and one-half cup of water. Boil until thick and smooth. Take one-half cup of butter, one cup of light brown sugar, mix together until smooth and add to first mixture. Take one and one-half cups of flour, one-half cup of water, one teaspoon of soda and add alternately, three eggs, well beaten, one teaspoon of vanilla, one pinch of salt and one large teaspoon of baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven with greased paper in the cake pan. This will make two thick layers.

To frost use three cups of light brown sugar, one and one-half cups of water, 2 squares chocolate and 2 tablespoons of butter. Boil together until thick, beat; add nuts if desired and one teaspoon of cream. The cream keeps the frosting moist and keeps it from turning sugary.

CREAM SCONES

Sift together 2 cups of flour, 2 table spoons of sugar, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Chop in 4 tablespoons of butter, add 2 eggs, well beaten, and about 1-3 cup of cream. Mix well and turn on floured board. Roll about ¾-inch thick and cut in 2-inch squares. Brush with egg, sprinkle with sugar and bake in hot oven about 15 minutes.

ENGLISH SALAD DRESSING

The yolks of three hard-boiled eggs, 4 tablespoons of salad oil, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 1 teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Put the yolks through a fine sieve, mix with them the salt, pepper and mustard. Stir in vigorously the salad oil, Worcestershire sauce and vinegar. The boiled whites of the eggs can be used for garnishing the salad. Excellent for cold meat salads.

CELERY AND CUCUMBER SALAD

Trim and wash one bunch of celery, shred lengthwise into fine strips; peel one cucumber and cut it into shreds of about 2-inch lengths; 3 bunches of red radishes, ½ teaspoon of finely chopped gherkin, ½ teaspoon of chopped parsley, 2 hard-boiled eggs, French dressing.

Mix the dressing, celery, cucumber and a seasoning of salt and pepper in a bowl; surround with the radishes, garnish with slices of hard-boiled eggs, sprinkle over the gherkin and parsley.

HOT WATER SPONGE CAKE

The hot water pie crust and the hot water sponge cake are both noted for their lightness and the unusual success which those who try them seem to have. Just as pie crust may serve as a basis for many desserts, so may sponge cake undergo a variety of treatment which uses it in everything from ice box pudding to the accompaniment of a simple dessert. Or it may be served with hot chocolate sauce, and with hot fruit sauces.

Beat 4 eggs until they are light, beat in 2 cups of sugar and 1 cup of flour, a little at a time, then add another cup of flour with 2 teaspoons of baking powder mixed with it, and lastly, 1 small cup of nearly boiling water. Bake in a moderately hot oven.

POTATOES WITH MARSHMALLOWS

Wash and boil six good-sized sweet potatoes and when done pare and mash them. Season with pepper, salt, a half gill of heavy cream and a generous lump of butter. Beat lightly and stir in a quarter cupful of finely chopped nuts. Arrange in a buttered baking dish and cover the top with halved fresh marshmallows. Put in the oven long enough to toast the marshmallows to a delicate brown.

POTATOES ON THE HALF SHELL

Scrub and boil with their jackets on six potatoes of uniform size. When done, but not soft, cut lengthwise and scoop out the pulp, leaving a thin wall. Mash the pulp, season with butter, pepper and salt, and a tablespoonful of cream to each potato. Fill the shells lightly and sprinkle with finely chopped nuts and cover the tops with a meringue of the beaten white of the egg with a little sugar in it. Set into the oven for a few minutes to lightly brown the meringue and heat through. Sweet potatoes may be done in the same way.

RUSSIAN POTATO CAKES

Boil and mash six potatoes, seasoning with a generous lump of butter, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley and a little celery salt. Beat in a large fresh egg and sift in enough flour to mould into cakes a half-inch thick. Drop the cakes into fast-boiling salted water and when they rise to the top cook three minutes then lift them with a skimmer to a hot plate. Butter well and turn over a little thick sour cream.

Transfusion operations similar to those performed on human beings have been successfully used on diseased trees in California. A solution of ferrous sulphate is placed in a bottle reservoir at the top of the tree and flows into the trunk through a hose which is connected with a glass tube that is inserted nearly through the tree. The treatment, it is hoped, will eliminate certain insect and blight diseases.

A bulletin just issued by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse university states that one of the best ways of promoting state forest conservation is to make the timber last longer through proper drying and seasoning practices. Kiln drying, the first step in mill manufacture, is most important as improper drying is the cause of as high as fifteen per cent of timber losses. Great indirect losses in manufacture and later use of the finished products are often caused by improper drying methods.

JUST A SUGGESTION

Put your large pieces of silver that you do not keep on display in cotton flannel bags.

TESTING CAKES

A clean wooden toothpick is much more sanitary as an instrument for testing cakes or fruits than a broom-splint.

Old Copper Pipe

At Giza, Egypt, a piece of copper pipe has been found near an ancient tomb which it is believed was used for plumbing purposes at least 5,000 years ago. Popular Mechanics Magazine points out that this is only another bit of evidence that copper is practically indestructible. Under the lava and debris thrown out by Mt. Vesuvius in 79 A. D., was found a bronze bathtub which is still in such good condition that it will hold water.

Rattlesnakes and Young

Rattlesnakes, of which there are some 12 species in the United States, are viviparous; that is, they do not lay eggs but bring forth living young. The United States biological survey says that in the early fall the female rattlesnake brings forth from six to nine young of about five inches in length. The young display all the traits of the adults and will try to rattle and bite as soon as they are born.—Exchange.

CANDY MAKING

To make good candy you need good materials. To make either creamy fudge or fondant after cooking you must let it cool before beating it. Otherwise it will be coarse-grained. You must not stir candy when cooking, either, except just to keep it from sticking. The stirring while cooking causes a grainy consistency when cooking either fudge or fondant. A wet cloth, used to wipe down the sides of the candy kettle will keep those sugary bubbles from making the candy sugar, or be coarse in texture. Above all things do not stir caramels, butter scotch or taffy while cooking.

Stir the mixture well before putting on the fire. This helps dissolve the sugar. Then let it boil gently. Stir only when necessary.

When using brown sugar in fudge or penoche a pinch of soda will prevent its curdling or becoming lumpy while cooking. It is the excessive acid in the sugar, mixing with the fat and protein of the milk that makes it coagulate. In boiling just brown sugar and water for a fondant frosting or fee see foam you notice, this never happens.

In making your fudge, let it stand until cold enough to put your finger in before beating and see how creamy it will be, first cooking of course to the boiling point and the soft ball stage.

Across the Sinai desert, where Moses and Aaron led the Children of Israel, telephone wires now stretch, and long-distance service is available between Egypt and Palestine. From cities of the Holy Land one may now talk to cities in the land of the Pharaohs.

Robert Fulton, the American inventor of the steamboat, is to have a monument erected in his honor in the town of Ptombiers, France. Ptombiers is on the Augronne river, and it is on this river that Fulton made his first tests with the steamboat in 1802.

An American exploring expedition, under Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, which was "digging into the past of Asia," has made some interesting discoveries. Dr. Andrews found forty dinosaur eggs. He also found the petrified remains of a great redwood forest, which may be the source of the California redwoods, since at one time Asia and America were connected by land. The expedition also proved, says Dr. Andrews, that central Asia was never touched by the ice sheet which at one time covered much of Europe and North America.

Character in Mythology

Phaon depicted in "A Reading From Homer," was a deformed boatman of Mytilene. He was famed for his chivalry. Once an old woman asked him to ferry her across the sea, although she could not pay her fare. When safely across the sea the woman gave the kind ferryman a box of ointment, telling him to rub the contents on his misshapen shoulders. When he did so, Phaon was changed to a handsome young man. Venus, in the guise of the old woman, had wrought the miracle. Soon Phaon and Sappho became lovers.

Origin of "Tabloid"

The word "tabloid" was arbitrarily coined by Burroughs, Wellcome and company of London, England, and applied to a preparation of drugs in a concentrated and condensed form. Although the term is a copyright trademark of this firm it is now widely used to designate anything concise or condensed, as tabloid newspapers.—Exchange.

WILL AWARD 83 ROAD CONTRACTS

Expenditure of $3,415,000 Involved in Contracts to Be Awarded June 11.

Eighty-three contracts totaling an approximate expenditure of $3,415,000 will awarded by the state highway department June 11, for new roadways, according to George F. Schlesinger, state highway director.

Only one Franklin county job is included in the list, that being for improvement of 2411 feet of the Columbus-Millersburg road, state route No. 23, with concrete. The total mileage of the June letting is 283 miles, and will be the final large letting of the season.

May Building Permits

Building permits issued during May showed an increase of over $100,000 in valuation over those issued a year ago. Permits for the month just passed had a valuation of $2,188,800 against $2,087,700 for the same month last year. Permits included 281 dwellings and 229 garages as compared with 286 dwellings and 220 garages in May a year ago.

Woman's Rights Well Established in Tibet

Marriage in Tibet is not the least interesting of the customs of that remarkable country, writes an exploring globe-trotter in a British paper, reported by the Atlanta Constitution. As a rule it takes place only in families possessed of wealth and social position. According to the laws of Tibet, the eldest brother has the first right to marry, since he alone inherits the ancestral property. But if there are brothers the bride is shared by them as by so many junior husbands. On the day of the wedding the bride is barricaded in her home. Long arguments, in which the whole village takes a part, over the profitableness of the marriage are indulged in through a hole in the door. Finally a scarf is waved, as a sign of surrender and the gates are opened. The bridegroom's mother then hands out sour milk and cakes to the guests and the ceremonies begin. The Tibetan woman is very much the head of the household. The men must bring their earnings to her. When they need money they must ask for it. A husband who is idle too long is liable to be reprimanded or even divorced and driven away.

Time to Demonstrate Claim to Efficiency

A sarcastic old Irishman, the president of a small but well-known industrial company, was anxious to show production figures and he sent word for a brand-new efficiency expert who had succeeded in talking him into the ways of ultra modern business administration. The expert had succeeded in worming his way into a vice presidency as "vice president in charge of personnel." A messenger came from the expert:

"Mr. Jones says he is tied up and cannot get away."

The president drew a breath of satisfaction that the new executive had begun so industriously. He talked 20 minutes and again sent for the expert.

"Mr. Jones says he is tied up but is trying to get away."

The president didn't like this, but waited 15 minutes before trying again. The same answer came back, so he penned this note:

"Houdini gets out of a straight-jacket and handcuffs under water in 40 seconds. I don't expect this from you but would appreciate your getting untied very soon or not claiming you're such a tremendously efficient guy!"

Evarts Scored on Depew

Sir Theodore A. Cook in his book, "The Sunlit Hours," tells this story concerning the two American wits, Chauncey Depew and William Evarts: "At a large dinner Chauncey Depew was once very much annoyed to find that he was expected to make his oration before Evarts instead of speaking later on. So he went and sat down at the end of the room with the idea of chaffing his rival when the opportunity should serve. Evarts, whose eloquence was as easy as his wit, began his speech with a bird's-eye view of American history from Noah to Narragansett pier, without a single semicolon. Depew sprang up, at the first pause, and cried out: 'Mr. Chairman, I ask whether we are supposed to sit here and listen to such sentences all night.' 'I am sorry,' replied Evarts, instantly, that my friend, Chauncey Depew, has now joined the criminal classes in deploring long sentences.'"

Ears on the Increase

Are your ears larger than your grandfather's? This is a problem to which you have probably never given any thought; but, if you compare your own photograph with some of those in the family album, you will probably find that your ears are larger than those of the last generation.

A prominent ear specialist has proved by measurement that the tendency of the human ear is to grow even larger. The reason, he suggests, is the increased number and volume of sounds, which is a feature of modern life, especially in cities, and the more complicated demands which are thus made upon our hearing.

Early Silver

Artistic silver work was wrought in America long before the Declaration of Independence, and some dextrous examples of the skill of early silver designers are still extant. Daniel Henchman advertised in the Boston Evening Post in 1778 that "He makes with his own hands all kinds of large and small plate work, in the genteelest taste and newest fashion, and of the purest silver." Jacobus Van der Spiegel and Garrett Onclebagh were both experts at handling silver in New York. There exists a chalice, presented to the First Reformed Dutch church of Kingston, N. Y., devised by Jacob Boelen in 1682.

She Was Surprised

The schoolgirl was a very gentle, sweet creature. Her teacher always thought of her as most refined, as a girl who always spoke softly, and thought delicately. She was not a good student, neither was she a very poor one. Her marks were apt to be just below passing. Finally came a crucial test. The girl just passed it, but this result had not yet been given to her. Seeing her teacher alone at the desk at recess time, she stuck her head in the door to ask fearfully, "Did I pass?"

"Yes, you did," said the teacher.

"My gosh!" said the girl.—Springfield Union.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation and heartfelt thanks to our many relatives and friends for their many kindnesses and loving sympathy during our sad bereavement and especially to the minister for his consoling words, to the undertakers for their kind services and to the choir for their beautiful singing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Thomas and Family.

LAWN FETE

Given by Group 2, Ladies' Aid Society of Hope Memorial Presbyterian church, Saturday, June 5, on church lawn. Ice cream and cake, 15c. Everybody invited.

Pictures on Doors

Often in bedrooms there are so many doors that the effect is not particularly attractive. In such a case it is possible to select a series of pictures which may be mounted on the doors, in the upper panels. Subjects which are related to each other should be chosen, such as a number of flower prints, or architectural scenes, or silhouettes, or something else attractive.

The picture should fit the panel or else be of the general proportions of it. It may be carefully and smoothly mounted, and then a coat of colorless shellac applied, to protect it.

Why, to Be Sure

It was raining terribly. The playing field was a sea of mud. The players came up out of every scrimmage like pulling a flivver out of a mudhole. Everything was a mess. The football jerseys had lost their brilliant hues and the white pants of the officials were a dark gray shade.

"Isn't it terrible that they should get so dirty! Look at that fellow's shirt. How will they ever get them all clean?"

"Say, what do you suppose they got the scrub team for?"—Gatanell Mailmaker.

Popular Fairy Tales

"Grimm's Fairy Tales," including Tom Thumb, Hans and Gretel, the Frog Prince, Rumpelstiltskin and hundreds of others, are actually folk tales of Germany which were collected from the peasants and compiled in the first half of the Nineteenth century by two brothers, professors at the University of Berlin. Jacob Grimm was born at Hanau, January 4, 1785, and his brother, Wilhelm, February 24, 1786.

Loyalty of Highest Order

True loyalty requires no consideration, accepts none. It springs from honest acknowledgment of obligation and is sustained by frank recognition of right. It is the highest possible expression of independent manhood in its relations with man, community and nation.—Grit.

DECORATE GRAVES AT CAMP CHASE

Confederate Soldiers Remembered at Services Last Saturday.

Under the auspices of Robert B. Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, 2260 graves of Confederate soldiers, at the Camp Chase cemetery, were decorated at memorial services held last Saturday afternoon. Invocation was pronounced by Rev. P. E. Smoke and taps were sounded by a soldier from Fort Hayes.

The cemetery contains the graves of Confederate soldiers who died while captives of the Union armies in or near Camp Chase. Virginia has 387 men buried there; Kentucky, 158; Tennessee, 289; Alabama, 431; Texas, 22; Georgia, 295; South Carolina, 85; North Carolina, 85; Arkansas, 25; Mississippi, 202; Florida, 62; Maryland, 9; Missouri 8, and Louisiana, 52.

Presented Watch Chain and Emblem

In appreciation of his untiring work in directing the Hillcrest Baptist choir, the church organist and choir presented W. H. Knox, director, with a gold watch chain and Masonic emblem, Sunday evening.

Twenty years ago Mr. Knox received a gold watch for his work with the Columbus Oratorio Society.

WILL CELEBRATE 10th ANNIVERSARY

Fifth Anniversary of Dedication of New Building and Home Coming.

Rev. Russel S. Showers, D.D., of Dayton, will be the speaker of the day at the tenth anniversary of the founding of Burgess Avenue U. B. church next Sunday, giving sermons both morning and evening, and having part in the afternoon meeting. This will not only be the tenth anniversary of the founding of the church, but also the fifth anniversary of the dedication of the new building.

Rev. J. H. Harris, conference superintendent, will preside in the afternoon and give an address. Rev. E. B. White, the first pastor of the church, will give an historical sketch in the evening.

Special music will be a solo by Floyd Ellison in the morning, a duet by Mrs. Bartha Price and Mrs. Carrie Riebel in the evening, special numbers by the women's chorus, morning and evening, by the girls' chorus at Sunday school and the male quartet of Washington Avenue U. B. church in the afternoon.

HIGHLAND AVE. SCHOOL PICNIC

The Highland Avenue school picnic will be held Monday evening at Glenwood park. This is for all families whose children are enrolled in Highland and it is hoped all will be out who can. Each family is to bring its own picnic lunch. There will be a program of sports and games which everyone will enjoy. Geo. Benton has charge of arrangements for this affair. In case of rain the picnic will be held in the shelter house.

VACATION SCHOOL WILL OPEN JUNE 28

Sessions in Hillcrest Baptist and English Lutheran Churches —Miss Sperry Principal.

The Hilltop Daily Vacation Bible school will open this year on Monday, June 28, and will continue five weeks through the month of July.

Miss Bess Sperry has again been chosen principal of the school. Other teachers thus far selected include Miss Evelyn Knox, Miss Catherine Sperry, Miss Helen Cunningham, Miss Margaret Huffman, Miss Frieda Schaefer and Miss Mary Porter.

The school was so large last year that Hillcrest Baptist church used all their space in order to house them, so this year the school will be held in two churches, the Hillcrest Baptist and the English Lutheran.

Last year's Hilltop school was the largest in the city, having registered around 400 children, with a teaching force of only seven teachers. The school will be conducted on the same plan as other years, in that the school is free of charge to any child in the community, of any denomination.

Children, plan to attend. Parents, see that your child gets in this school. Help them to pass the summer days in something worthwhile.

R. G. Haantz, returned Sunday evening from Atlanta, Ga., where he was called last week by the death of an aunt, who was killed in an automobile accident.

Special Meeting of Business Men's Ass'n

A special meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's Association will be held this (Thursday) evening at 8 p. m. at the office of the Rodgers Realty Co., 2854 W. Broad St. This is a very special meeting and a good attendance is desired. Let every member of the association be present.

Guarantors Meet

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Chautauqua guarantors at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. The tickets are now on sale and from appearances the big tent on West Broad school grounds will be crowded.

HOGE MEMORIAL CHILDREN'S DAY

Children's Day will be observed at Hoge Memorial church at the morning service, 10:30 o'clock, next Sunday. The church school will present the program, a springtime pageant, entitled "The Secret Whisper to Children." The pastor, Rev. Richard E. Shields, will administer baptism to infants at this service, this being the last public baptism to be conducted in Hoge Memorial by Rev. Shields.

At the close of the pageant given by the school, he will give a brief sermonette to the children, but one which will be of interest to both the young and old.

Those taking the principal parts in the program are:

Children's Day Fairy—Mary Eleanor Price.
Spring—Grace Belle Day.
Summer—Sarah Hoffman.
Autumn—Betty Benton.
Winter—Jean Armor
Flowers—Helen Sliney, Edna Corcoran, Ruth Mueller, Mildred Sayre, Audrey Sherburn.

USEFUL HOUSEHOLD HINTS

SAFER

Put the pudding made of milk into a cool oven and let the oven heat with the pudding. If put into a hot oven the intense heat is likely to curdle it.

BERRY STAINS GONE

Berry and other fruit stains are prevalent at this time, and here is where mother gets out her embroidery hoops, encircles the stains, places the hoops over an open bowl and pours boiling hot water through the stains until the disappear.

THIEF PROTECTION

Never leave doors or windows unlocked.

Strange men and women who come to the door seeking work should never be engaged; they may be thieves.

Fix the loose window catches. A knife will open an insecurely-locked window.

Never trust the coal driver to lock your cellar window for you after putting in the coal. See that it is done yourself.

Do not leave a peddler standing at the open door while you go to another part of the house for your pocketbook. Shut him out first.

SUBDUED CABBAGE

If cabbage is soaked for an hour in salted water and then boiled uncovered there will be scarcely any odor and the cabbage will keep its fresh green color.

INEXPENSIVE LUNCH CLOTH

A good-looking, yet inexpensive, lunch cloth for everyday use is made of unbleached muslin, with a broad band of plain blue gingham around the border, finished with a black buttonhole stitch.

IN AN EMERGENCY

If you should cut the tip of your finger when busy in the kitchen, put a small piece of linen over the cut and then put your thimble on until you have time to give the matter better attention.

CLEAN PUFF, CLEANER FACE

There is nothing so detrimental to the appearance of a well-groomed woman as to see her bring out a soiled, gray-looking powder puff when she applies that needed touch of powder. A puff can be washed perfectly in very soapy water and, if rinsed in more of the same water, will remain soft and fluffy.

An eastern college graduate applied for work in a Michigan lumber camp and was assigned to one end of a crosscut saw, the other end being in charge of an old and experienced lumberman. At the end of an hour the veteran stopped sawing and regarded his weary partner with pitying eyes. One hundred years ago the first omnibus was seen in Nantes, France. At first women never rode on the top of the bus, and the stairs to the top were small iron steps. The last horse-drawn bus in London made its farewell journey between London Bridge and Moorgate Street on October 25, 1911. Today there are 36,200 motor busses in London alone.

The War Office is withdrawing the white spats formerly worn by the kilted regiments of the Highlanders as a measure of economy. These spats first came under official recognition as a sign of endurance in the Peninsular wars. During a retreat under Sir John Moore, the Highlanders wore their shoes into holes in a long march which was made more difficult by the deep snow. They tore up their shirts and wrapped their feet to protect them. This resourceful measure was recognised officially by an issue of white spats.

Miss Emma Cushman has been given a medal by the Near East Relief for bravery under fire. During the revolution in Greece, the grounds of the relief school at Corinth, which sheltered 1500 orphaned children, were made the parking place for five rebel aeroplanes, which of course drew fire from the enemy. Miss Cushman, who was in charge, with some of the children, succeeded in moving the planes a little distance away; then she wrote to the commander of the opposing forces requesting them to confine their fighting to other fields than those near the school.

EXAMINATION FOR MANAGER

Large Class Expected to Compete for Orient Hospital Appointment.

Indications are that a large class will participate in the examination of the state civil service commission to be held June 18 for the position of superintendent of the Orient State hospital for feeble-minded.

The appointment carries with it a salary of $3600 with full maintenance and is one of the most desirable of institutional positions. At the last examination, in November, only two persons passed the examination, and as the law provides that the appointing head may demand a list of three names, Director Harper declined to make an appointment and this second examination has been called.

GOOD THINGS YOU LIKE TO EAT

PEPPERMINT ICE CREAM

Something cooling for this summer. Put ½ pound peppermint sticks through the meat grinder. Add them to 1 pint of scalded cream, and when dissolved, chill. Add 1 pint of cream and freeze. A chocolate sauce may be served with this cream, making a most unusual and delicious confection.

PRESERVED STRAWBERRIES

A way that never fails to produce rich, luscious preserves. Never do more than 3 quarts at a time, 1 quart being preferable. Wash and hull berries, using only perfect berries. Add their weight in sugar and cook for 10 minutes, skimming occasionally. Let them remain in the same saucepan over night. In the morning, when cold, pour into glass jars and seal.

SUGAR COOKIES

Vacation time is here and there is nothing so refreshing as a cooling drink and homemade cookies. Two cups sugar, 1 cup butter, 2 eggs, 3 tablespoons milk, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 3 cups flour. Cream butter and sugar, add other ingredients. Roll out on a floured board to a thin sheet. Cut in cookie shape, sift granulated sugar over the top of each and bake in a hot oven.

QUICK COFFE CAKE

One pint flour (sifted twice), 1-3 cup sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon 1 egg, ½ cup sweet milk, 3 table spoons melted butter. Spread in a shallow pan, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven.

LINCOLN CAKE

Two cups granulated sugar, ½ cup butter, 2 eggs, 1 cup sweet milk, 3 cups flour (sift 3 times), 2 teaspoons baking powder. Bake either in layers or loaf cake. Ice with carmel icing.

OHIO CAMP AT EXPOSITION

Conducted Under Auspices of Ohio Society of Philadelphia —Not for Profit.

Camp Ohio, one of the largest automobile tourist camps in the east, is being conducted under the auspices of the Ohio Society of Philadelphia, for the accommodation of motorists who attend the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. While primarily for Ohio tourists the camp will accommodate visitors from other states.

The camp occupies 100 acres of the most beautiful farm land in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and is not conducted for profit, but merely with a view to meeting its own expenses.

The tract is laid out in 500-car units and the first unit will be ready to receive tourists by June 15.

Camp Ohio is 11 miles, or 30 minutes from the center of Philadelphia by automobile, and within 30 minutes ride of the exposition grounds, which may be entered without entering the congested section of the city. The camp is located on Chester Road or Sproul Boulevard, which intersects the Lincoln highway.

HEALTH HINTS

By DR. O. E. McFADON

Some of the experiences of some banks are anything but conducive to calmness and serenity among its officers, but the results of those experiences affect, for weal or woe, the stamina and standing of those banks up to date, and at the close of business each day, a bank's balance and condition are known and shown and there is no recourse from it.

Your character, and mine, though not so graphically shown, are sensibly and, steadfastly, affected by our daily experiences as is a bank. And just as surely as our character and personality are brought down to date, as are we, physically, the result of heredity and environment up to the present moment, whether we would have it so or not. Yes, there is no evading it. To the extent that Nature has been trifled with, she will demand reparation as inexorably as Shylock with the pound of flesh.

If you were once the victim of an accident, you came out of it as whole as possible, but whether whole or not, you accepted the result, took an inventory of the remains and built thereon thereafter. If you caught a disease, you did likewise, and gave Nature the best help you knew until she put you on your feet again.

Do we "catch" diseases, or do we allow diseases to catch us? I dare say that most of us would suggest that we are passive in the matter, for that implies less guilt on our part. But let us see: If a wild beast were known to be in the neighborhood, we would not be passive and indifferent in that fact; neither would we "catch" it, only to destroy or control it. That would be the business of the public health authorities, in the case of the animal or the disease. But our selfish part would be first to keep out of the way of it, which, in the case of the animal we would surely do. But are we as careful to keep out of the way of disease?

There are no wild animals in the neighborhoods in which we live. This was not always so; they vanish with advancing civilization until we need have no fears of them. Likewise, public sanitation may be so far advanced that diseases are not thought to be present; but still some have them while others do not.

A wild beast, escaped from a circus, would follow the line of least resistance until he found the jungle, where he could reign supreme. So also, when not repelled by public sanitation, disease germs will assemble where there is least resistance, namely, in an already unhealthy soil where they can propagate most rapidly. They cannot get a foothold in healthy tissue and will pass on. Any person who has great resistance—is in good health—will not "take" or be "caught" by disease.

The above applies especially to germ diseases, such as tuberculosis, pneumonia, typhoid fever, etc.

The question arises: "Why are large, healthy looking people often stricken suddenly with apoplexy, heart failure, etc.? It is because they have, by their high living, overworked the heart to the breaking point. Oftener than from other causes, their appetite and digestion, in which they glory, deceive them, and so lead them to excesses which overwork the heart. The life insurance companies know better than to insure them; they allow the disease to "catch" them.

A new form of winter sport was invented and successfully tried out by a Colorado mining engineer and a friend of his. It was that of tobogganing. An ordinary toboggan was fitted with a pair of wings made of a pine framework, covered with strips of muslin painted with hot paraffin to make them air-tight. The speed attained by this contraption was almost unbelievable and the sport proved to be very dangerous. The tobogganing rose for jumps from 10 to 15 feet off the ground in its numerous trips before the rider miscalculated the breeze one day and sat too far forward. About halfway down the hill he tried to slide back, but was too late and was landed unceremoniously in a snow bank, while the toboggoplane went on to its [illegible]

NATURE STORY—MOLE A CHAMPION DIGGER

The scientists have gathered many interesting facts about the mole. One investigator conceived the idea of finding out how much work a mole could do in a given time, and so he turned a large mole loose in the middle of a five-acre clover field. Five seconds after the mole received its freedom it had burrowed out of sight, and the observer, after driving a stake at the starting point, retired, and left the digger hard at work.

The start was made at noon, and the mole had started toward the east. By evening, the mole had dug twenty-three feet in a zigzag line, but keeping all the time the same general direction, and not attempting any side galleries. By noon the next day the tunnel had been driven thirty-one feet further, with numerous side galleries, and four feet had been added at the end next to the starting point. In another hour ten feet had been added at the extremity, making sixty-eight feet of branches.

The bottom of the tunnels ran very evenly, about four inches below the surface. The surface of the ground was usually cracked and raised about an inch along the course of the tunnel.

To watch a mole starting his drill is exceedingly interesting. His nose sinks into the soil as if it were a bradawl, with a half-boring and half-pushing motion, and in an instant the mole's head is buried from view. Up comes his powerful right foot, sliding close along the side of his head, straight forward edgewise to the end of his nose. His foot, that fine-pointed chisel, cuts the earth vertically until it extends as far forward as his short reach will let it go. Then with a quick flirt from his nose, and so making an opposite motion he pries the earth sidewise ing. Instantly the left foot does the same thing on the other side, and meanwhile the gimlet-pointed nose has gone on boring. In five second by the clock his body is entirely out of sight, and only his funny little tail can be seen.

Peptimist Tells How to Vanquish Personal Hoodoo

SAM GRATHWELL

Anyone not posted on the true definition of a "Peptimist" should tune in when Sam Grathwell has the boards on chautauqua's second day. His "Getting By Your Hoodoo" is a virile, challenging lecture that stimulates courage and community betterment.

He used to sell papers on a busy street corner in Cincinnati, or shine shoes, or run errands—anything that a small boy could do to help support a family whose father had been taken from them. Later he spent many years as a factory hand, barrel painter, ditch digger, porter, waiter, elevator boy and salesman.

Grathwell started to night school at the age of 19 years, after a chance word of appreciation. He entered Berea College in Kentucky, when he was 21, making his own way, and nine years later received his A. B. degree at Leland Stanford university. There, in his senior year, he won highest honors. Previous to this, while at Pacific University, he won three State and one Inter-State Oratorical contests. He holds membership in three honorary debating fraternities, Delta Sigma Rho, Pi Kappa Delta and Phi Alpha Tau, a record perhaps not held by any other man in America.

His lectures emphasize individual possibility. They are born of great experience—he was often knocked down but never knocked out. They might be termed "courage talks." But while his lectures are filled with epigram and rapier thrust, they are lighted throughout with humor, now sparkling and convulsive, playful and rippling. He not only lectures but entertains.

The Canadian government has completed plans for a new game preserve, almost within the Arctic circle, in northern Alberta, between the Peace and Slave rivers and the Great Slave Lake. Up to [illegible] time the greatest buffalo preserve has been in Wainright National park, consisting of 160 square miles of fenced-in prairie. The buffalo heard increased so rapidly that in order to provide forage for them, the government permitted the killing of buffalo each season. Now, with the opening of the new reservation, these extra animals will be shipped north.

BAD FOR CLUTCH

The practice of keeping the car in gear and using the engine to keep the car from coasting backward when halted in traffic on an upgrade is particularly trying on the clutch, which in slipping, has to act as brake for the time being. Wise drivers avoid the annoyance of a long wait on a hill with brake and clutch depressed by climbing it a little slower when all indications point to the fact that traffic is scheduled for a halt—just a matter of looking ahead, literally.

Mass Singing to Be Featured at Chautauqua Tent

HOWARD WADE KIMSEY

Community singing at chautauqua this year will be introduced by Mr. Kimsey, who in recent years has been song director for the New York City Kiwanis club. He was the original song leader for the great Easter dawn services in New York. With Mrs. Kimsey at the piano, he conducts the singing at Bedford Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, where Dr. S. Parkes Cadman addresses what is considered to be the greatest Sunday afternoon men's meeting in the United States. These weekly services are broadcast by WEAF and associate stations.

On Sunday evenings, except through summer months, Mr. Kimsey's choruses are heard from Station WHN in connection with Dr. John Roach Straton's services at Calvary Baptist Church in New York. He directs the recreational singing periods for employees of the Western Electric Company and is director of music for the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. of New York.

During the 1924 Democratic convention in New York City Mr. Kimsey was song and cheer leader for the William G. McAdoo forces. When the late President Harding spoke in Convention Hall, Kansas City, in June, 1923, Mr. Kimsey led the audience of 15,000 in an hour of song, preceding the address.

EASY TO MOUNT BALLOON TIRE

A simple way to mount a ballon tire and rim on a wheel is to insert the valve stem through the wheel hole while the wheel is around to one side instead of at the top. Once the stem is in the hole, the tire can be lifted up and on the wheel by simply turning the latter a quarter turn. This saves actually lifting the tire. The wheel should not be too high off the ground.

PERIL IN STOP LIGHT

A stop signal that is out of order or that fails to work properly is more dangerous than none at all. When the driver of a car sees a stop light on the car ahead, he watches it and, should it be out of order, a collision might result in case of an emergency stop. If the stop signal is working properly, the ammeter will show discharge when the brakes are applied.

CHAUTAUQUA DATES JULY 9-15

Unusually Good Program For This Year's Hilltop Meeting.

Chautauqua season tickets have been delivered to the local committee and early advertising has been placed by Mr. Robert S. Miller, first advance representative of the Redpath program, scheduled for the Hilltop, July 9 to 15 inclusive. With the annual event less than four weeks distant, there is being planned a systematic campaign that should put the chautauqua over the top, "bigger and better than ever."

Never have there been so many outstanding features on a Redpath program, as this year, according to Mr. Miller. Perhaps the headline musical event will be the Moscow Artists Ensemble—a large chorus of Russians, who present their native songs to balalaika accompaniment. Unique Russian dances will be interpreted by Mlle. Sergeyeva, who also is something of a comedy artist. Costuming, scenery and lighting for this Russian extravaganza will be on an elaborate scale, especially in their presentiion of "The Wedding Feast."

Two remarkably fine plays—Channing Pollock's drama, "The Fool," and Barry Conner's comedy, "Applesauce," are slated for chautauqua. Another production is the Tyrolean Yodler specialty, "Echoes of the Alps." Harold Lewis and his Symphony Players also will delight the musically inclined.

Howard Wade Kimsey, probably the foremost song director in America, will launch community singing on chautauqua's third day. Anne Campbell, who writes a daily poem for the Detroit News, will entertain with her verses. Harrison Crofford, dramatic artist, will present a miscellaneous program. Al Baker, magician and ventriloquist, will delight the youngsters on the closing afternoon.

From a lecture standpoint chautauqua is to be an instructive week of enjoyment. Charles H. Plattenburg, on the opening night, will discuss "The Modern Tale of Two Cities." Sam Grathwell, on the second afternoon, will describe the art of "Getting By Your Heedo." John H. Dickason will have two popular lectures on the third day, while Thomas Curtin, international newspaper correspondent, will answer interestingly "What Is Ahead for Europe?"

Junior chautauqua will present an historical pageant, "The Quil," based on the 150th anniversary of American Independence.

Announcement

Effective June 12, R. D. Hastings became sole owner of the Hilltop Record and will devote his time exclusively to its welfare.

Mr. S. J. Westlake, who has been associated with the Record since its founding, will devote his time to job and commercial printing.

The Record will have a distinct plant of its own, new type faces and equipment have been ordered and will be installed just as soon as it arrives. Both plants will be located at the same address, 2354 W. Broad street.

In relinquishing my interests in the Hilltop Record I take this means of expressing my sincerest appreciation and thanks to all Hilltop citizens and business firms for their good will and favors during my connection with the Record. I will still be at the old location, 2354 W. Broad St., engaged in the job printing business. Any future favors in that line will be appreciated and promptly taken care of by me.

Respectfully,
S. J. Westlake.

CLASS DAY HELD AT WEST HIGH

This Year's Class the Largest to Be Graduated in the History of the School.

The largest class ever graduated from West High school held their class day program Tuesday night. The class, totaling 176, held their ceremonies before parents and friends who gathered to see them bid farewell to their alma mater.

After the processional and a song by the seniors, the address of welcome was given by Harold Mason, the class president. The class history, which dealt with the incidents during the preceding four years, was given by Mildred Mather, Mary Virginia Hewitt, Gladys Johnson, Joanne Kendrick, Edith Williams and Frank Himebrook.

Mary Rudolph, Catherine Gilliland, Pauline Miller, Eunice Scott, Bernola Woodyard and Brunson Sloan took part in the class prophecy. This was very interesting as it told what different members would be doing later in life. A few were to be employed in running an airplane passenger line to Mars, while others were working at the North Pole.

The class will, in which members of the senior class bequeathed their faults, traits or some personal quality, to members of the junior class, was given by Rita Gee, Faye Lathem, Thelma Nassano, Bonibel Simmons and George Goodrich.

Anna Jones was well received in her roll as valedictorian.

The class song, written by Robert Weiler, was sung by the senior class, after which came the recessional.

The music was under the direction of Herbert E. Hutchinson. The music for the processional and recessional was rendered by the school orchestra. Harriet Fiaher and Evelyn Rupe sang two songs accompanied by Frances Smith on the violin and Esther Guyer on the piano. The senior quartet composed of Thelma Ansel, Martha Dunavent, Lawrence Upperman and Robert Weiler also sang two songs. They were accompanied by Grace Wheeler playing the violin and Lillian Born the piano.

This is the last class to hold their program in the present auditorium as the new addition is nearing completion.

Rehearse Music for Chautauqua Sunday

A very interesting rehearsal was held Tuesday night at the St. John's Lutheran church on the music for the Sunday during chautauqua week. The "Negro Spirituals," "I Feel a Spirit," "Deep River," "Dig My Grave," and "Listen to the Lambs" proved to be very interesting to the singers. Voix Celestes by Alcock, an imitation of pipe organ, will be one of the features for the next rehearsal as well as the "Heavens Are Telling." The list of membership will close at the next rehearsal.

W. T. Chaffin of Orlando, Fla., is visiting for a few days at the home of F. W. Casey, 86 S. Hague Ave.

Edwin Millbarger, the bugler, blew the "assembly," after which pupils sang the "Star Spangled Banner."

The flag was carried to the staff by four sixth grade pupils, and as soon as it reached the top of the staff the salute and Pledge of Alegiance were given. After singing "While the Flag Is Floating O'er Us," the pupils marched back to their classes.

Tuesday morning the Girls' Glee club gave a concert in the auditorium, to which the pupils of the school were invited. The girls have done excellent work and real service under the direction of Mrs. Clark.

On Tuesday afternoon, pupils of Mrs. Grey's 5th grade English classes presented a playlet, "The Minotaur," written by them, and well acted.

Also on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Walton's class presented in the auditorium a program consisting of music and a health play.

Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Craig and Miss Davies sever their connection with the school Friday. Mrs. Clark returns to her home in Pittsburgh, Mrs. Grey to her home in Clyde, Ohio, and Mrs. Craig goes to her new home in California. Miss Davies will have charge of the kindergarten at East Main Street school, which is much nearer her home.

The principal and teachers take this opportunity to wish all of the parents and friends of the school a very happy and profitable vacation.

All members of the Hilltop Gun club (in good standing) please take notice of the shoot between the Dublin and Hilltop clubs Thursday evening, June 24, and report to H. H. Herron soon as possible, at Adams 3131.

HEALTH HINTS

By DR. O. E. McFADON

slings and arrows of outrageous torts
To breathe or not to breathe, that is the question;
Whether 'tis nobler to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous torture, the poisonings of air, the insidious approaches of disease,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And, by opposing, end the ills
That flesh is heir to—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished.
For who would bear the aches and pains of time,
The twinges of gout, the agony of asthma,
The pangs of diabetes, a wobbly heart,
The duodenal ulcer and the groans,
The burdens of the obese doth make,
When he himself might his quietus make
With gas or shotgun?
To grunt and sweat under a weary life;
But that the dread of something after death paralyses the will;
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Such conjurings doth make cowards of us all
And we lose the name of action.

EASILY IDENTIFIED

Before starting on a journey it is wise to see if you have some sort of identification fastened on your clothing. A visiting card in your handbag is not enough, as in an accident the bag may be separated from you. Have your name and address right on you.

BUY IT IN QUANTITIES

Buy soap by the quantity. First of all it will be found much more reasonable in larger lots and then it lasts longer when older and dryer.

WHEN IT CURDLES

There is only the infallible way of getting curdled mayonnaise to "come back." Start all over again with another egg yolk, add a little oil to it and when it has thickened very gradually beat in the curdled dressing until it is all blended into the new.

GOOD THINGS YOU LIKE TO EAT

SCALLOPED POTATO CASSEROLE

Four large potatoes, 3 onions, ¼ pound sliced bacon, flour, salt, pepper and milk. Peel potatoes and onions and cut into thin slices. Cook bacon until brown. Place a layer of potatoes in a greased casserole, then one of onions, then bacon and a sprinkling of salt, pepper and flour. Continue until all ingredients are used. Pour in milk until it shows through the top. Sprinkle buttered crumbs over the top. Bake in a moderate oven for an hour. Serve piping hot. No other meat would be necessary for the meal.

JOHNNYCAKE

Mix 1 cup rye flour, 1¼ cups cornmeal, ¼ cup cornstarch, ¼ cup brown sugar, 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add 1½ cups milk, 1 tablespoon molasses and 1 tablespoon melted butter. Bake in shallow greased pans from 20 to 25 minutes and serve with plenty of butter.

Hilltop School of Music opens for the season on September 10th. For infomation regarding course of study, communicate with Miss Edith L. Robbins, Fair Haven, New York.

Under the auspices of the Hilltop W. C. T. U., Lee J. Champman, M. D., of Lancaster, Ohio, will speak at Glenwood M. E. church Sunday evening, June 20 at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. Chapman's talk will be interesting and instructive to young and old. Totally blinded last December by a dynamite explosion, he is a lesson in carrying your cross with a smile.

Wedding Feast Plays Part in Russian Production

MOSCOW ARTISTS ENSEMBLE AT CHAUTAUQUA

This notable group of Russian artists will offer a scenic production at chautauqua which will include balalaika quartets, vocal ensembles, comic specialties and typical native dances by Mlle. Nina Sergoyeva.

One of the scenes to be presented is a wedding feast. It takes place on a Russian estate with neighbors and serfs gathered as guests for song and jollity. It concludes with a bridal dance that is distinctly out of the ordinary. In the final scene the merry-making of the villagers is portrayed in song and dance, with the village fool trying in vain to find a dancing partner. He finally secures one, only to be deserted after the first dance, amidst the good-natured raillery of the entire party.

The Moscow Artists—ten in number—are to appear at Chautauqua under the personal direction of Frank S. Samuels.

A TRIP TO WASHINGTON

The writer, together with Mrs. Drumm, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Speckman and two children, left Columbus Monday morning May 31, about 9:30 and arrived at the Capital, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Our route was the old National Highway, and, by the way, the road is exceptionally fine, with no detours and not more than a mile of rough road, caused by repairs at different points. We had never traveled that road farther east than Zanesville, and we were surprised to know that eastern Ohio was so hilly. The scenery, however, was fine and we enjoyed the wonderful views, the finest of which are in western Pennsylvania and Maryland. The first day we drove to Washington, Pa., and found good accomodations at the William Henry Hotel. We spoke to someone of the rough country we had come through, and was very much encouraged (?) by being informed that the "heights" were before us. Tuesday morning we were rested, but a drizzling rain set in, as we started, which continued all forenoon, and at times it rained very hard, so we had the pleasure of our first mountain climb in the rain. We went over numerous mountains, ranging in altitude from 1200 ft. to 2900 ft. The first high one was 2418 ft., the next 2493 ft., and then 2990 ft.

While the road was wet and slippery, with careful driving we experienced no trouble whatever. It seemed to make no difference to our Buick, whether she was on the mountain side or in the valley. By evening we had crossed the picturesque Alleghenies and on the top of Town Hill mountain, Md., with an elevation of about 1600 ft. we found a new hotel, equipped with all the modern conveniences, where we stopped for the night.

From this point the view is magnificent. One can see into West Virginia south, Maryland straight ahead and Pennsylvania to the north-east. It is about 125 miles from here to the Capital, the way leading over historic ground. We had but three or four more mountains of the Blue Ridge range to pass over.

The scenery between here and Cumberland is indescribable for its wondrous beauty. The latter city, however, is anything but beautiful, narrow streets, crooked and steep is characteristic of all the Maryland cities. Hagerstown, noted for its "Almanack" is ugly and Brownsville is worse, the streets resemble a letter S and so steep you can scarcely park your machine.

We took dinner at the Barbara Fritchie restaurant in Frederick, Md., and the only good thing about this house that we saw was Barbara's picture and Lowell's poem, displayed on the wall. The town is historic of war times, it being the scene of skirmishes and battles. Along the way are many tablets, descriptive of the different engagements between the Union and confederate armies.

From here to Washington city the country is very pretty and fertile, and is indicative of prosperity and happiness among the farmers.

All along the whole route may be seen little villages, sleepily nestling in the hollows or perching on the hillsides, each having an over supply of "Rooms for Tourists," which seems to be their leading industry.

Beautiful Washington, wide avenues, massive and magnificent buildings.

The plan of this city is unique, and perhaps cannot be compared to any other city in the world. To a stranger the plan is complex, and one can be easily lost among its streets, but when carefully studied, it is indeed a great work of engineering. We cannot take the space to give a description of more than a very few points of interest. We stopped at the Potomac Hotel, just a block from the Capitol. This is a convenient place from which to take in the sights. Every one going to Washington, wants to see the White House, which is indeed a beauty spot.

No one should miss seeing the Congressional Library. It contains 4 million volumes, with other thousands of pictures of fine arts. The building was more than eight years in construction and cost 6½ million dollars. It is said to be one of the finest buildings in the world. The dome is finished in black copper, with panels gilded with coatings of gold leaf, and the crest terminates in a gilded finial representing the torch of science ever burning. The mosaics are beautiful, and the whole building presents a marvelous and bewildering mass of artistic beauty.

We visited the Capitol, and looked down into the Senate chamber, but the session had just adjourned. We then went to the House, and they were having the roll call on some resolution the nature of which we did not learn. We were not much impressed with the personel of that important body. Nobody seemed to be paying any attention to the business, they were lolling around and holding conversation apparently heedless of what it was all about.

Of course we saw the monument of Washington, a great shaft 55 ft. at base and 555 ft. and 5½ in. high. The Lincoln monument is said to be the finest ever erected to the memory of a man.

We saw many other great buildings and interesting things which must pass in this article. On our way to Mt. Vernon, we stopped at the beautiful Arlington Cemetery, and visited the grave of the unknown soldier. This grave, is guarded continually by soldiers, it was covered with flowers, as remembrances of grateful people.

Mt. Vernon is the great point of interest to tourists. The old Washington homestead is a wonderfl place situated on a high knoll with a magnificent river view. The house is large, containing some fifteen or twenty rooms, and is beautifully furnished in the old colonial style.

The tomb is a plain brick structure festooned by vines and flowers, and here is the resting place of the dust of George and Martha Washington.

We sat in the Washington pew, in the old Episcopal Church, Alexandria Va., where the family worshiped. The structure is in good repair, and it is still in use. On Friday, after visiting the White House, we started home by way of Gettysburg, where we visited the historic battle ground of the Civil War. It is doted by scores of monuments telling of the valor of the great generals, but the memory of the men, who laid down their lives on that bloody field, in the private ranks, is nearest to our hearts. Leaving there we drove to Chambersburg, over 25 miles of as fine a road as can be made. Saturday morning we crossed the beautiful Shenadoah valley, and again struck the old National trail at Hagerstown, Md., we stayed all night at Brownsville, Pa., and drove home Sunday. The trip was a most enjoyable one but when we reached Columbus, we feel that we are back again, in the center of the beauty and loveliness of the universe.

KITCHEN CUT-UPS

Honey is one of the most digestible forms of food.

Just before serving the sirloin steak and onions, squeeze the juice of a lemon over it.

Don't spoil the preserve by using fruits that are not whole or very firm. Separate these and make them into jam.

When making pastry, don't forget to add a little lemon juice to the water. It will make the pastry light and remove all trace of fat or lard.

SCENT YOUR OWN

So frequently the compact powder boxes, so popular with milady, are not scented as she would like them. So she dampens the powder puff with the perfume she affects and places it back in her powder box. By the next time the lid is raised the powder has taken up the perfume and the result is to her fancy.

LOW SCORES AT GUN CLUB SHOOT

Dublin Gun Club Challenges Hilltop Club—Match Next Thursday Evening.

A dark, windy Tuesday evening kept the scores of the Hilltop Gun club quite low, only one shooter, the old veteran, "Web" Jones, weathered the gale for a score of 94 out of 100, which is a very good score any time.

The Hilltop club was greatly surprised and felt quite honored in receiving a challenge from W. W. Coffman, representing the Dublin Gun club, for a 50-target match between the two clubs, the 10 high scores from each club to decide the winner. A flip of a coin by Herron and Coffman brought the match to the Hilltop grounds and the date was set for Thursday evening, June 24, at 5 p. m.

The Dublin team is a fast and accurate bunch of shooters and have won all their matches to date, consequently the Hilltop nimrods are up against a tough proposition, but are going in to win. Parking space is provided for 100 autos.

Tuesday evening scores:

	Broke	Shot At
"Web" Jones	94	100
Groff	84	100

Next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be a special service at St. Luke's Lutheran church, High street and Norwich avenue, in connection with the dedication of their new church edifice, at which Rev. G. W. Lose will preach, and St. John's choir will present two anthems of praise.

John Burroughs School

An enjoyable outing was given on the Andrix farm at Big Darby, Wednesday evening, June 16, in honor of Miss Edna Robinson, one of the season's brides, by Miss Charters and the teachers of John Burroughs school.

Chautauqua Rehearsal Next Tuesday Night

On account of a recital to be given at St. Johns Lutheran church next Tuesday night, the rehearsal of the chautauqua chorus will be held at the Hillcrest Baptist next Tuesday night. The list of members closed at the last rehearsal. The chorus shows a beautiful body of tone having the pick voices of the several churches from the Scioto river to the Big Four tracks. The chautauqua patrons may expect a treat on Sunday night, July 11th.

A VISIT WITH TROOP 21 BOY SCOUTS

On Sunday afternoon, June 20, the writer and family visited the camp of Troop 21, B. S. A. This camp is located near Sugar Grove, Ohio, midway between Lancaster and Logan. Under the able leadership of their scoutmaster, Ray C. Kadel, assisted by J. W. Montgomery and C. W. Finley, the camp is a success. The parents of these boys should be proud of the interest taken in their sons by these sterling men.

A small city of tents in one of Nature's beauty spots is the camp. An ice-cold spring, bubbling out of the mountain at the rear of the camp furnishes the comfort of cold water for drinking and for refrigerator. All sanitary precautions are observed, and about the camp a sort of army discipline prevails.

A radio brings civilization to the camp, and many a highbrow minister and opera singer has unwittingly filled this lonely gorge with eloquence and harmony. As we drove up, a Victrola was rendering "The Stars and Stripes Forever." So that the boys have canned music as well as ether-wave harmony, and books and games, in their camp.

The mountain at the rear of the camp is covered by huge sandstone cliffs, gigantic trees; and, what took the wife's eye, a profusion of ferns, mountain laurel and rhododendrons. The latter were at their best. Mr. Montgomery informed us that this is one of the few spots in Ohio where rhododendrons thrive, and Ohio is one of the few states where they will grow. So that troop 21 is fortunate again in the choice of its camp site.

Reluctantly, with a huge bouquet of rhododendrons, and the camp's mail for the day, we turned toward Columbus just as the purple shades were stealing down from the mountain and crushing the camp. Troop 21, we envy you your outing!

Phil Cunningham.

FAREWELL RECEPTION

Tendered Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Shields by Members of Hoge Memorial Church.

About 300 people attended the farewell reception Wednesday evening, June 16, tendered Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Shields and family at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church-house, by various organizations of the church.

One of the interesting features of the evening was a playlet given by several members of the Young Married People's Bible class, depicting incidents in the life of Mr. and Mrs. Shields.

W. Hayds Jones, director of Hoge Memorial choir, sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Jones on the piano; Mrs. Daniel Jerman and Mrs. C. C. Cook sang a duet, accompanied by Mrs. H. G. Deems, and Allan Shields rendered a violin solo.

Following the program, Mr. and Mrs. Shields were called forward and H. G. Deems presented Mr. Shields with a check for $100, a gift from members of the congregation, and gave Mrs. Shields a leather hand bag, a gift from members of the senior choir, and a linen tea set from the junior choir, of which Mrs. Shields was director. Refreshments were served by the young ladies of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Shields will leave June 28 for their future home at Mountain Lakes, N. J., where Mr. Shields will become pastor of the Mountain Lakes Community church. En route they will visit friends at Cleveland and Buffalo.

NEW CAR LINE READY BY FALL

Work on Tracks for Mound St. Car Line From High to Central Being Rushed.

The new West Mound Street car line, High street to Central avenue, is expected to be finished and ready for cars by early fall. The concrete foundation slab has been laid from High street to the Mound street viaduct, with provisions for both north and south turnouts at High street.

Work on the concrete slab foundation between Glenwood and Central avenues is expected to be completed Saturday.

Double track will be laid all the way except over the Mound street viaduct, which is wide enough only for a single track. It was said that possibilities are that the company will use the track as a route for East and West Mound street cars and eventually route Camp Chase cars over these tracks, replacing the present Sullivant avenue route.

Magician and Ventriloquist at Chautauqua

AL BAKER AND "COMPANY"

Meet "Dummy Dennis!" He belongs to Al Baker, the entertaining magician and ventriloquist, who appears on the closing day of the local chautauqua. The fact that Dennis is known in a lot of places as a "sassy little rascal" doesn't seem to bother him a bit. The more Dennis misbehaves, the more it seems to amuse the genial Mr. Baker, whose love for youngsters is common knowledge.

To let the cat out of the bag, the reason Dennis is allowed to do pretty much as he pleases is all because he's no flesh and blood relation of Al Baker. In fact, he's not flesh and blood at all. He's just the pretend-to-be boy who helps Mr. Baker in his program. That is why Dennis, with his turned-up nose, round rosy cheeks and "hard-boiled" manners gets to leave his New York home every summer and go out on a long chautauqua trip.

REDPATH ATTRACTIONS THROUGHOUT

HEALTH HINTS

By DR. G. E. McFADON

To Breathe or Not to Breathe That Is the Question

We breathe, naturally. Nature keeps us alive. The laziest man on earth has that much done for him. And many people (if they think about it all) reason like this: "If Nature keeps us alive by doing our breathing for us, then why should I bother about it?"

Thus, because of our carelessness and indifference, we use, actively, only one-tenth to one-eighth of our lung capacity.

The lungs are our blood "refinery." The crude blood, as manufactured by the stomach, liver, etc., is being pumped, by the heart, to the lungs, all the time.

It becomes, then, a case of "buried talents," for the greater part of the "refinery" can be used, only by our helping the lungs to receive this impure product, that it (the blood) may exchangee ALL its impurities for oxygen, the life-giver. In connection with correct eating, herein lies the whole problem of pure blood. The "floor space" is there—in the lungs—but the door must be opened. The constant question to ourselves is "Shall we push the door of the lungs wider open and admit more of the life-giving air?" It can be done by simply breathing more deeply.

Our inhalations carry life-giving oxygen to the blood, and our exhalations are laden with poison from the blood, and the exchange is made in the lungs, at every breath we take. The more oxygen inhaled, and the more poison exhaled, the purer is the blood, and therefore the greater our resistance to disease.

Shall we be satisfied by keeping near danger point? Or shall we make ourselves immune from all disease, and so "have life more abundantly" by making the blood pure and keeping it so, in the only way it can be done, namely, by habitually breathing deeply.

If short breaths take away a little poison, deep breaths will take away correspondingly more, and leave their loads of oxygen. Oxygen is the best blood medicine and deep breathing is the only way to apply it and the cost is absolutelyy nothing.

Those who exercise vigorously must breathe deeply while they exercise. They gain in health, not because of the exercise, as such, but because of the deep breathing which they must do if they exercise vigorously.

The question then arises: "Must we take strenuous exercise to get the necessary oxygene and vitality for the blood?" No, not necessarily.

Reasonable exercise is here recommended for all, but a habit of deep breathing can be formed which will go on as naturally as walking, while doing office work, reading or sleeping.

Breath-holding extremes are ineffective for satisfactory results and "breathe deeply," as a precept, is too indefinite. A better practice for all persons of any age and at all times is: Note your breath rate (which you may imagine to be natural), then double the length of each breath. Keep up this slow rate. If you lapse—and you will lapse—double it again. And as often as you lapse, double it again. Doing it again is the thing to be remembered. Persistent repetition will form the habit.

The inhalation should be steady, to pull in the greatest amount of oxygen. The exhalation should be steady, to expel the greatest amount of poison. Our bodies manufacture vitality and poison from food. The poison, if not expelled, is a draft on vitality and the greatest source of disease, and the out-going breath must expel a great part of our body poison. Eternal vigilance is the price of good health.

STREET PLAYING IS DANGEROUS

Chief French Warns Parents to Keep Children Off Streets

An appeal to the parents of Columbus to warn their children against playing in the streets, was issued, Friday, by Chief of Police Harry B. French, in view of the numerous accidents within the past few months.

"Now that school vacation has started," the police executive said, "it behooves all parents to keep their children in the yards and on the sidewalks. There is an ordinance, which prohibits ball playing in the streets, and I have instructed my men to enforce the measure. Many children have been injured by running into the streets, where they have been struck by machines."

GOOD THINGS YOU LIKE TO EAT

PLAIN MUFFINS

One egg well-beaten, 2½ cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Beat until light. Bake in greased muffin pans in a quick oven.

SODA BISCUITS

Easily made and a wonderful help to the menu when unexpected company arrives. Two cups flour, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup sour milk, 4 tablespoons lard and butter mixed. Sift salt, flour and soda and blend in fat. Add milk gradually and knead the dough on a floured board until well mixed. Roll to ½ inch thickness. Cut with a round cutter and bake on tins in a hot oven for 15 minutes.

CREAMED EGGS ON TOAST

Four cups boiled rice, 4 hard-boiled eggs, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons grated cheese, salt and a little cayenne. Make a cream sauce of milk, flour and butter, and season with salt and cayenne. Add eggs cut into small pieces. Make a nest of hot rice on a warm platter. Pour the sauce into the nest and sprinkle grated cheese over the top of all. Dust with a little paprika and serve. Awfully pretty and mighty good to eat.

CREAMED NEW POTATOES

Use the small sized new potatoes. Scrape and boil in salted water until done. Drain and pour over them a white sauce. Let cook a few minutes. Then serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

"But it isn't cold."

"No mum. How could it be? I had to take the ice out to get it in."

"What is your occupation?"

"I used to be an organist."

"And why did you give it up?"

"The monkey died."

Lantern slides instead of textbooks have been introduced in a Wisconsin school. For an elementary arithmetic class, as an example, the teacher showed a picture of a grocery-store window, each article bearing a price mark; then she asked a pupil what he could buy for dinner with one dollar. To another child the teacher put the question of how much change he would receive after buying certain articles and giving the storekeeper a definite amount of money.

VACATION SCHOOL WILL OPEN JULY 6

Pupils Must Have Made Good Grades During Preceding to Enroll

Approximately 1700 pupils are expected to enroll in the Columbus public vacation schools this summer, according to Superintendent J. G. Collicott. The vacation schools will begin July 6 and continue until August.

Classes will be held in the North, South, Central and East High school buildings, and in the Champion Ave. Junior High school building. Only junior and senior high school courses will be held.

To enroll in the vacation school, pupils must have made good grades during the preceding winter, and must prove that they are physically fit to spend the majority of their vacation in study. Also pupils must present good reasons for wishing to attend the vacation school. To attend to merely make up work that has been failed through negligence is not permitted.

The most credit that may be secured during the summer is two units. The classes will probably be held five days a week, from 8 to 12 in the morning. The courses that will be given will be arranged according to demand. Every course that at least ten pupils sign for will be given. The tuition fee for the term will probably be $2, the same as last year.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Unusual Program of Lectures, Comedy, Drama and Musical Numbers

Hilltop chautauqua will open Friday, July 9, with an unusual program of entertainment with two sessions each day, afternoon and evening, except Sunday. This year's program does not include any regular Sunday chautauqua program. However the big tent will not be vacant that day, as it will be used by the churches of the Hilltop for union services, both afternoon and evening.

The course this year is unusually attractive consisting of comedy, drama, scenic production, and musical numbers.

The local committee in charge of the chautauqua, of which S. E. Pool is chairman, reports the outlook unusually bright for the most successful session ever held on the Hilltop. Season tickets are now on sale by various residents of the Hilltop.

World History Discussed by Newspaper Man

D. THOMAS CURTIN

Kings, prime ministers, generals, admirals, cabinet members, international czars of big business mean nothing in the young life of Mr. Curtain, formerly Lord Northcliffe's secretary and later described by the great Englishman as "the ace of war correspondents."

Mr. Curtain, who is to deliver a featured address at the coming chautauqua, has been referred to as "the Mark Sullivan of Europe" and "the William Jenings Bryan of current events." Under the theme, "What is Ahead of Europe?" he gives a crisp, accurate, yet dramatic picture of world history in the making, and epitomizes brilliantly the trend of the times.

Curtain saw fighting on 18 battlefronts during the war and since that time has commuted back and forth across the Atlantic between European capitals and American editorial rooms and lecture halls. He is as much at home in the maze of European highways and courts and languages as the ordinary American motorist is familiar with the trails of his home state.

This little town, 4100 feet above sea level, is situated in the foothills of the Himalayas. Rain laden clouds condense rapidly when they are forced upon the mountain sides, resulting in a rainfall of 426 inches a year. Research has recently found however, that on the summit of Mount Waialeale, in the Hawaiian Islands, [illegible] there is an average rainfall of 600 inches a year.

Mr. and Mrs. Shields, with their family, left Monday morning for Mountain Lakes, N. J., their future home.

LOW WATER PRESSURE ON HILLTOP DUE TO MANY SPRINKLING

Many residents of the Hilltop especially in the Broadview and Westgate additions were without water Tuesday evening, a condition, waterworks officials said was due to the fact that so many people were sprinkling to obtain relief from the heat, at the same time. Because this section of the city is so high a drain of the pressure is felt here first. Many Hilltop homes were without any water for several hours during the evening.

A steak roast and picnic was given in the ravine above Fishinger's bridge last Saturday afternoon and evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Glen L. Wigton and family of Penco City, Okla. Pittsburgh is planning its skyscraper university upon the impetus of New York City's skyscraper church, and now New York City proposes a skyscraper opera house. The architecture of skyscrapers, at first distasteful to so many people, has developed into as unique and characteristic a product of the American era as the Gothic cathedral of the Dark Ages. A new note is to be introduced into the building of this new opera house—the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, one of the eight wonders of the ancient world.

During the panic of 1873, a bank in Springfield, Illinois, was driven to the wall with liabilities of $800,000. A settlement was made which satisfied all legal requirements, but in order that he might satisfy his own sense of financial honor, the owner determined to pay back to his depositors the $220,000 which was still due them. He worked hard until his death, saving every dollar which was not actually needed. After his death the work was taken up by his children. More than fifty years after the panic the entire debt, with five per cent interest, was paid off.

HEALTH HINTS

MILK

Milk is a popular food which agrees with most people. Many use it because it does "agree" and may not know its real value. There is no fruit, vegetable or cereal that contains all the nutrients and most minerals as milk does. As a nutrient a quart of milk is equal in heat and energy, to a half dozen eggs, or a pound of meat. (Note milk's comparative cheapness). If limited to one kind of food, milk would be more satisfying than any other. "The scientific discoveries of the last 10 years prove that milk is the one food that can transform the physical life of any community." (McCann.)

Milk is too often regarded as a mere beverage, to be used in lieu of a glass of water, when it is as truly a food as are eggs or meat, and he who adds a "milk shake" or other milk drink, to an already full meal, is overeating. A "malted milk" alone is as much lunch as many stomachs should have, and not the best lunch, either, on account of its richness. It is better taken near some other food but NOT after a full meal.

Many have an unjust prejudice against "turned" milk—as if it were useless after the souring, but it has its food value just the same and a therapeutic value as well. The bacteria of clabbered milk and buttermilk are considered "friendly germs," because, if rightly used, they knock out many unfriendly germs which abound in the intestines—especially in the colon.

A method of using sour or clabbered or buttermilk for Colitis or other colon troubles is to use it, instead of other food, in quart quantities for flushing, that it may reach the colon sufficiently intact to have power to destroy the unfriendly bacteria there. A real taste for sour milk can be acquired. It is a safe habit for anybody.

The public should know what the United States government is doing by way of illumination as to the relative value of milk as well as all other foods. And the information can be had for the asking. A postal card addressed to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, is all that is necessary to bring reliable information about milk or any other food mentioned. "While you're a gittin," get a list of Farmers' Bulletins, which I think have an unfortunate name, since they are meant for all people and they contain a liberal education on a multitude of practical subjects. We people don't use our government enough.

In 1925 Herbert Hoover gave an address in which he reported 86 cities between 40,000 and 70,000; 63 have no health directors in schools, 20 have no organized instruction in health, 16 no boards of health, 65 no milk inspection, that one-fifth of the 11-year-old children drink no milk, that we lose 76 babies of every 1000, while New Zealand loses only 42. With all our boasted progress, we are still behind in matters of public health.

STATE MAY DIVIDE HIGHWAY CONTROL

Legislature May Apportion Authority Among State, Counties and Townships

The department of state highways and public works will be separated if the general assembly next winter complies with recommendations to be submitted by the Hempel State Legislative Highway committee, which has been investigating the road situation in Ohio since the adjournment of the legislature a year ago.

It is reported also, that the Hempel committee will propose that the state highway system be placed under the state highway department, the secondary system under the county commissioners and the remainder of the roads under the control of the township trustees.

There are approximately 85,000 miles of highways in Ohio, of which 40,248 are improved. Of the improved highways, 10,000 are bituminous and waterbound macadam; 25,000 traffic bound stone and gravel and the remaining 5000 are of the various other types of highway surfaces. The macadam road meets the general requirements of highway traffic better than any other type, it is asserted. There are 44,634 miles of earth road in the state, upon which no improvements have been made.

California women are enabled by wireless to "keep up" with Parisian styles. Twenty-four hours after a new model has been created in Paris, manufacturer of silk materials are making the same thing in their factories in Los Angeles. In the ten years that silkworms have been growing and spinning in California, more than 220,000 mulberry trees have been set out for their habitation. Only six hundred yards of silk are secured from a cocoon in China and Japan, while in California the amount is from one to two thousand yards.

The new bridge at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, is destined to take its place among the engineering triumphs of the world. This bridge was erected at a cost of $3,000,000 to take the place of an old covered bridge which was built in 1841 and rebuilt in 1862. The new bridge is of concrete and has 26 spans; the longest of these is 170 feet. It furnishes a driveway over four different railroads, and it crosses the Lehigh River and a canal. There are eight approaches to the bridge; these take up 4000 of the 60,000 feet of its length. The broadest part of the bridge is 91 feet.

Channing Pollock's Great Drama at Chautauqua

SCENE FROM CHAUTAUQUA'S GREAT PLAY, "THE FOOL"

Channing Pollock dared to write for the stage a play, "The Fool," in which the principal character endeavors to follow rigidly and without compromise the teachings of the Master, and yet make an interesting play for all patrons. He worked on the play for ten years. When it was finished he took it to various theatrical managers. Everywhere he met pessimism.

"It will never go," they said. Finally the Selwyns, with another manager in association, decided to take a chance. Pollock worked day and night with the play. Just as it was about to reach New York the associated manager withdrew his money. Pollock put his own funds into it.

The play opened. Its first few performances left its success doubtful. Then, of a sudden, people discovered it, and for a year there was difficulty in buying a seat for it two months in advance. "The Fool" ran thirteen months in New York, one year in London, six months in Boston, and six in Chicago. And behind it all is the simplest story ever told—the story told in the world's best seller—the Bible.

The play is to be presented in its entirety by a notable New York cast, as one of chautauqua's headline events.

GOOD THINGS YOU LIKE TO EAT

RICE AND CHEESE CROQUETTES

Make a white sauce of 2 tablespoons butter, 2½ tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk and when smooth stir in 1 cup grated cheese. Stir until cheese is melted and season with salt and paprika. Cool and mix with 2 cups boiled rice. Shape into cones. Roll in crumbs, then beaten egg and then again in crumbs. Fry until a nice brown in deep fat.

LEMON MINT FRAPPE

A delightfully cooling touch to the large dinner for the sherbet entree. One quart water, 2 cups sugar, ¾ cup lemon juice, 2 bunches of mint, ½ tablespoon granulated gelatine. Add mint leaves to the water and sugar and boil 10 minutes. Strain, add gelatine softened in cold water, cool and add lemon juice. Freeze in equal parts of ice and salt.

PEA, ONION AND CUCUMBER SALAD

Take 1½ cups of well cooked, drained and cold small green peas, 1½ cups of thinly sliced fresh young cucumbers that have small and tender seeds, and 1 cup thinly sliced spring onions. Mix and heap in lettuce leaves, dusting with paprika and a little salt. Make a dressing of ½ cup double cream, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ saltspoon red pepper. Mix well and pour enough over the salad to moisten it well. Garnish with radishes cut rose fashion and a few sprays of crisp watercress.

LIMA BEANS AND CELERY SALAD

Take 2 cups boiled and drained, cold lima beans. Add to them 1 cup carefully washed and sliced green celery, unbleached, and 2 teaspoons grated onion. Make a boiled dressing of ¾ cup water, ¼ cup vinegar, 2 heaping tablespoons sugar, 1 level teaspoon salt and 1 saltspoon red pepper. Dissolve a heaping teaspoon cornstarch in water, add it to the mixture with 1 tablespoon butter. Cook gently, stirring constantly until the sauce is thickened to the consistency of cold honey, then turn it into the yolk of a fresh egg and beat until cold and smooth. When cold, add the sauce, or enough to moisten well and arrange the salad on crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with hard boiled eggs cut in thin eighths and crisp cress.

QUICK COLD SLAW

If in a hurry and wish just the added touch of cold slaw for your luncheon or dinner, just shred your cabbage on the cabbage cutter and mix with either homemade or prepared mayonnaise. If not hot enough, add a little mustard mixed with water.

HILLTOP SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Will open a special summer course in their voice department. Registration can now be made at the school by calling Ra. 0985 or Ra. 2462-W.

STILL PUZZLES SCIENCE

The aurora borealis intrigues scientists for they have by no means solved its riddles. It is supposed that the electric current that discharges itself as the "northern lights" and which has disarranged telephonic and telegraphic systems by attaining momentary foreign potentials as high as 500 volts comes from the sun, but this is by no means proved. Observers in Norway proved that the luminosity sometimes reaches 375 miles above the earth thus showing the earth's atmosphere to be sensible even at that great height.

ALUMINUM WARE

There is nothing prettier than the kitchen pantry fully equipped with all the necessary kitchen articles in bright, shiny aluminum. But it is not much credit to the woman who has aluminum vessels and allows them to become tarnished and blackened.

La Rue Still Strong With Rivoli Patrons

The people of the Hilltop have come to look forward to every Tuesday night at the Rivoli for they enjoy George La Rue's repartee along with his gifts from merchants of the Hilltop.

George has been coming to the Rivoli every Tuesday night for the past two years, and instead of his popularity waning as one would suppose, it is on the increase, for the house is always full to enjoy George's comedy.

One hundred years ago this Fourth of July John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, second and third presidents of the United States, and both signers of the Declaration of Independance died; just fifty years after the adoption of that great document.

The white ant, or termite, a dreaded insect in the United States, has been found of great value to the inhabitants of the former German colony of East Africa. These insects loosen the earth about the plants much as the earthworms do in our own latitude. They build little mounds which greatly improve the soil, because these mounds consist chiefly of rich and fertile loam.

HOUSING BILL BECOMES LAW

The housing law of New York state has been signed by the governor. It sets up a state housing board to study housing conditions and gives the board power to obtain by condemnation real estate for the use of "limited dividend houses." The law sets up a maximum limit for the rental per room in such houses, specifies the dividends which the corporation may pay and prescribes its organization and financial structure in detail.

CHICAGO FIRM GETS MEDAL

Ninety four per cent of all homes in Chicago, the second largest city in America, now use electricity. This achievement in a city of 3,000,000 population was one of the outstanding accomplishments of the Commonwealth Edison company during the past year and one of the reasons for which it was awarded the Charles A. Coffin Foundation gold medal, the most coveted honor to be granted electric light and power companies of the United States.

DICKENS ON BROADWAY

When Charles Dickens visited New York about 80 years ago, Broadway was a wide, bustling street about four miles long. The number of omnibuses surprised him—"half a dozen have gone by in as many minutes"—and he was also impressed by the signs, the pianofortes, and the hackney coaches, by which the upper classes were carried about the city.

But when Dickens crossed the wide and bustling street called Broadway, he found it necessary to look out for the pigs which trotted clumsily behind the carriages and acted as the city scavengers.

CHARLES H. PLATTENBURG

This speaker on chautauqua's first night is one of the most interesting men in the platform profession. He graduated from old Bethany college in West Virginia, homesteaded in Wyoming, and traveled for many years in Canada, Mexico and Europe. For 15 years he has been engaged in lyceum and chautauqua work, at the same time devoting any leisure moments to editorial duties.

In addition to his regular platform engagements last year Mr. Plattenburg spoke before civic organizations in such cities as Columbus, Ohio; Shreveport, Louisiana; Wichita Falls, Texas; Pueblo, Colorado; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Des Moines, Iowa, and Springfield, Illinois. He is always willing to boost any worthwhile improvements in the towns he visits. His articles on community subjects have appeared in many papers and trade journals and altogether have had a circulation of more than a million.

LAWN FETE

The Young Married People's Bible class of Hope Memorial church will hold a lawn fete Saturday night, July 10, at the corner of N. Park Ave. and Broad street.

BETTER THAN NO THANKS

If not to say 'Thank you' is a sign of good breeding, we can congratulate ourselves on being the best bred of all nations," says a contributor to The Forum, writing on "Our Democracy of Bad Manners." "In the leisurely days of an unprogressive past, 'Thank you' was one of the first phrases taught to the young. Who of my generation does not remember the gentle, reproachful voice asking, "And what do you say, my dear?" for the gift received, or the grownup's condescension kindly meant if abhorrent to a healthy child. True, it is a convention that can be driven to an extreme, as in England I first knew, where you were thanked for what you did not do or want as well as for what you did. I used to laugh at the 'None to-day, Madam? Thank you, Madam!' On the whole, however, I like it better than the other extreme of no thanks at all."—Forward.

Sea creatures are protected by the sound of waves dashed on the shore. Bubbles breaking against one another in rapid succession—the process which takes place when waves break on the shore—give forth a high-pitched, hissing sound. The ears of whales, porpoises, dolphins, and many other fish are keen in hearing this sound. Being disturbed by it, they remain far under the surface, and quite a distance from the shore. During storms the noise increase, and creatures who normally live near the shore are warned to go farther down and farther out from the coast.

VARIED PROGRAM FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Two Plays Are Among Headline Events—Russian Artists Featured.

Two effectively contrasted plays—Channing Pollock's great drama, "The Fool," and Barry Conners' painstable comedy, "Applesauce," are among the outstanding events of this season's Redpath chautauqua. Likewise, the Russian extravaganza by the Moscow Artists Ensemble, and the scenic production, "Echoes of the Alps,' by the Fischtl Tyrolean Yodlers, are sure to impress themselves indelibly upon the memories of chautauqua patrons.

Harold Lewis and his Symphony Players, a quality instrumental company from New York city, will open the program. Their afternoon concert will be followed by an evening program preliminary to the address of Charles Howard Plattenburg on "The Modern Tale of Two Cities."

A large cast will present the drama, "The Fool," on chautauqua's second night. This play was by far the most popular play on Broadway last winter. It has been used as text material for over 50000 ministers. It is the greatest drama of its nature since "Ben Hur."

Howard Wade Kimsey song leader for the New York City Kiwanis club and for the S. Parkes Cadman Sunday afternoon meeting at the Bedford Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, will introduce community singing on chautauqua's third day. Associated with Mr. and Mrs. Kimsey on chautauqua's third day are John H. Dickason, in morning and afternoon lectures, and D. Thomas Curtin, international newspaper correspondent, answering the question, "What Is Ahead for Europe?"

While the Moscow Artists ensemble is the highly featured attraction on chautauqua's fourth day, patrons are sure to be delighted with Anne Campbell, "the poet of the home." For several years Miss Campbell has been writing daily verse for the Detroit News and her clientele has been greatly enlarged by her radio broadcasting.

On Wednesday evening chaptauqua patrons will enjoy the rare comedy of the modern three-act play, "Applesauce." Advance notices are correct when they state that after this performance "Applesauce" will be "on every league."

Thursday evening will be the presentation of the scenic production, "Echoes of the Alps," in which the art of yodling will be delightfully demonstrated by an augmented group including the international favorites, Jack Jost and Constantin Wunderle.

As in previous years, morning and afternoon junior chautauqua sessions will be conducted by a trained supervisor. Stories, games and preparation for the historical pageant, "The Quill," will occupy the time of the boys and girls each day. Junior Town officers will be elected and wil have an important part in the events of chautauqua week.

Boy Scouts of Troop 21 will police the chautauqua grounds and tents at each period.

BOBBY SHIELDS FRACTURES BONE

Rev. Richard E. Shields and family greatly enjoyed the first two days of their journey. The roads were fine, weather perfect, and scenery beautiful. They arrived Tuesday evening at Fair Haven, N. Y., prepared to spend the next day with the Misses Robbins and Greiser of the Hilltop, in their summer home.

The two families went swimming in Lake Ontario Wednesday morning, where the children were having the time of their lives. Bobby Dick was running along the sand, when he stubbed his left foot and fell, twisting his leg under him in such a way that he fractured the front large bone two inches above the ankle. The doctor took him 16 miles to Oswego, where 4 X-rays were taken and then placed the limb in a plaster cast to insure safety in traveling. The family found it impossible to carry him in the machine so Mr. Shields left early Thursday morning with Dorothy, Allan and Carolyn Ann, to complete the trip, driving, omitting all side stops, and Mrs. Shields and Bobby Dick took the night train from Oswego, arriving in New York Friday morning, where they were met by Mrs. Shields' father and brother-in-law. Mr. Shields and the three children joined them safely Friday morning.

Suffers Minor Bruises When Auto Overturns

Miss Ora Baird, aged 24, 60 North Park Ave., suffered minor bruises Monday evening, when the automobile in which she was riding with J. C. Cornwell, 1096 Leonard Ave., skidded and overturned in East Broad street. Miss Baird was attended at Mt. Carmel hospital.

Westwood to Picnic Saturday Afternoon

Westwood Lodge, K. of P., will hold their annual picnic Saturday, July 10, at Clifton-Mac camp grounds, two miles south of Georgesville.

The affair will be an old-fashioned picnic and the committee in charge have arranged plenty of amusement and games for all. A pilot car will leave the lodge hall, Burgess and W. Broad, at 2:30, going west in Broad street to the first road west of Rome. From this point the way is marked with signs at each turn in the road, reading "Westwood" and an arrow pointing the direction picnicers should take to reach the grounds.

The picnic is for members of Westwood lodge, Westwood temple, their families and friends.

MASS CHOIR TO SING JULY 11th

Community Program Planned in Chautauqua Tent Evening of July 11.

A massed choir of 60 voices, composed of singers selected from Hilltop churches, will give a program, July 11 at 8 p. m., in the Redpath Chautauqua tent, Broad and Hague.

The chorus is under the direction of W. E. Knox, music director of Hillcrest church. Mrs. Margaret Carter Moore, Hillcrest organist, will accompany the chorus on the piano.

Solos and quartets will vary the program. Negro spirituals in chorus also will be a feature.

Eugene Schneider will play a cello solo and John More will sing a group of tenor solos with violin obligato by Hubbard Jones.

Churches on the Hilltop will not hold services that evening. Members of the various churches will assemble for the community service.

SCHOOL BOARD APPROVE BUDGET

Ten Per Cent Increase in Salaries Granted to 205 Janitors and Engineers.

Public hearing on the tentative 1927 school budget, approved by the board of education last Thursday will be held at the administration office, July 12.

The budget calls for a total of $5,968,351.53 during the year, an increase of $429,069.64 over that of last year.

The amount necessary for levy, however, is $5,558,187.53, or $1,128,117.40 more than the amount obtained by levy a year ago. The increase is due to a smaller unexpended balance this year.

The board by a shift of items in the budget, granted pay increase of 10 per cent to 205 school janitors and engineers, the increase, however, depending on how the budget is cut. The minimum monthly wage of janitors is now $116.80. The highest wages paid engineers is $148 a month.

Epworth Leaguers Meet at Granville

The Zanesville District Epworth Leaguers have been in a two-day convention at Granville, July 6 and 7. Miss Ruth Merriman, secretary of Hope Memorial church, was the speaker for the afternoon session of Wednesday, her subject being "A Fourth Department That Is Different." Miss Merriman is also the fourth vice president of the Columbus District Epworth Leagues. Other speakers were Dr. Emanuel Breese, Miss Mabel Wall, missionary from China; Rev. H. H. Wilbur, general secretary of White Cross hospital, and Dr. L. E. Linnell. Around eight hundred or more young people attended the convention.

S. P. I. Sunday school class of Glenwood church will have a picnic Monday evening, July 12, at Westgate park. They will eat promptly at 6:30. In case of rain call your group leader and she will tell you what to do.

Columbus vs. Bucyrus

The Columbus New York Central Athletic Association baseball team will play the Bucyrus N. Y. C. team at Bucyrus. This game will decide the championship team in the Ohio division league of the N. Y. C. A. A. After this game, Joe Schwartz, catcher for the Columbus team and a West Side boy is to report to Manager Geo. McQuillan of the Columbus Senators.

Mrs. Eva Baker, Helen and Marguerite Donahue, Mr. Henry and Edward Whittle, Mr. Johyle Tedrick and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clark were among those who enjoyed a camping trip on the Fourth.

Kiddies Enjoy Themselves at Glenwood and Holton Playgrounds

Indeed it is a difficult job to get the enthusiastic kiddies at the various city playgrounds to stop their playing long enough to have their pictures taken. Sights like the accompanying picture can be seen daily at the Hilltop playgrounds, Holton and Glenwood parks, as well as all other West-side parks.

And then, too, kid's baseball games are going on continually from early morn until shades of darkness overtake them. And the games are as interesting as big league games even if no peanuts are won. The small boys play ball safe from the danger of broken windows and rushing automobiles. If the people on the Hilltop want to see a fast and furious game come to Holton or Glenwood any day, any time—there are double headers daily.

Recreation Director Raymond and his assistants, Charles Seddon and Miss Alma Morris have not forgotten that adults need recreation, too. They are making greater plans for adult activities than ever before. Tennis matches and tournaments are now taking shape. Volley ball and baseball teams are now being organized. Lovers of barnyard golf, horseshoes, are now getting in trim. There will be contests between various playground teams, contests between street teams and various neighborhood groups.

The city playground director has as his slogan this year, "More and better playground activities for both young and old."

People of the Hilltop, you owe yourself some recreation; visit your playgrounds.

WANT WESTGATE PARK IMPROVED

Publicity for Hilltop and Coming Picnic Discussed at Business Men's Meeting.

Immediate improvement of Westgate park by the city, publicity for the Hilltop and the coming Hilltop picnic in August were among the topics discussed by members of the Hilltop Business Men's Association at a dinner meeting at Hope Memorial church last Thursday evening.

Westgate park is a beautiful spot of 50 acres covered with virgin trees and with a few facilities would make a delightful spot for picnics, and attract people from all parts of the city. However, the park in its present condition is practically useless for the accommodation of any large number of people and the association feels that some improvements should be made immediately.

Arrangements were made for publicity for the Hilltop, which will be carried out in the very near future.

The picnic committee reported everything going along fine and arrangements are being made to care for the largest crowd ever attending a Hilltop picnic. Full plans for this affair will be announced very soon.

CHANGE TRAFFIC LIGHT SYSTEM

Every Other Light, Instead of Two Lights, Flash Same Color at Same Time.

Changes in operation of Columbus traffic lights will again be put into effect Thursday, in an effort to speed up traffic in the light controlled area. As operated now, every other light, instead of every two lights, will flash the same color at the same time.

This change was decided at a conference between Safety Director McCune and Chief of Police French.

Thorough study of the traffic situation in the light-controlled area has been completed by Chief French and he is convinced that the every-other-light alternating plan will enable an autoist, traveling at the legal speed of 18 miles an hour, will be enabled to get from the Union station to Main street, in High street, without stopping.

He is the son of a Civil war veteran and a lawyer. He wants to make the jurisdiction of the municipal court uniform throughout the state, and wants to establish a court of domestic relations in Columbus. All divorce cases would be tried in that court and is one that directly concerns the home and family.

Bill's "Applesauce" Saves the Day

INTERESTING SCENE FROM CHAUTAUQUA PLAY

The play scheduled for chautauqua's fourth night is the story of a likable young Irishman, Bill McAllister, who is much given to what is known as "applesauce." With his excess of blarney, Bill steps in and steals the heart of Hazel Robinson from the "town [illegible]," Rollo Jenkins. The match is not to the liking of Pa and Ma Robinson. They become so exasperated that for once in all their married life they almost agree. Matt McAllister, Bill's hard-boiled old political uncle, also enters his protest. For a time things look bad, but Bill's "applesauce" saves the day.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

Commencement day at Stanton University had arrived, and with it a number of proud fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, who were seated in the auditorium of the college waiting for the exercises to begin.

Marjorie Duncan, her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Duncan, were seated near the entrance; and noticed everyone who entered the auditorium. There were young men and women, and middle aged folk, from different stations of life—those who had deprived themselves of many luxuries and even necessities, in order that their sons and daughters should receive the education which they, themselves, had been denied; and those who, without any of the sacrifice and self-denial necessary in the above mentioned class, had given their children a handsome allowance, with which to meet their expenses.

Marjorie's eyes watched the procession, noting every detail of each person's attire, and wondering who they were. Although, as yet, she had not met her brother's class chums, from the correspondence engaged in between herself and her brother, she felt as though almost the entire graduation class were old friends to herself, as well as to the young Mr. Howard Duncan, Jr. For a few minutes, she withdrew her attention from the door and became interested in a subject of conversation taking place in the row of seats in front of her.

"I certainly hope Ralph changes his mind about enlisting in the Army," a woman was saying to her husband, in very low tones which were meant for the husband's ear only. "If this country becomes involved in the war I can say with a few others 'I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier.'"

"Sh-sh, Mamie, we won't talk about it now. War will likely be averted, and even if it is not, money talks, you know."

In imagination, Marjorie could again see the headlines of a newspaper "extra" dated May 7, 1916—"Lusitania Sunk; Many American Lives Lost." Her mind dwelt on the gravity of the situation. As far back as she could remember, she had been taught to love the Stars and Stripes, and to be loyal to the land of her birth. She now hoped that the neutrality of the United States could be maintained, and that war would be unnecessary.

Further thought on the matter was interrupted by a commotion outside the entrance-way at the top of a flight of stairs leading from the first to the second floor. A loud "plop" which shook the building, and the sound of suppress d laughter reached her ears, and as a person, at first obstructing her view from the hall, changed position, she could see what had happened An elderly man, a little below the standard height, and a few degrees above the usual weight, had accidently stumbled on the top step, promptly introducing his nose to the floor.

Someone asked, "Are you hurt?"

The old man, with the unmistakable brogue of the "Fatherland" promptly replied. "Not mooch: but I broke mine pipe, vich vas sent to me by mine cousin vot in Chermany lives."

A High School student enthusiastic bout the state of affairs could not refrain from informing the man that it would be a good idea to purchase pipes marked "Made in U. S. A.," in the future, as anything coming from a certain country across the Atlantic would not last long in this country, if the present state of affairs continued, after which speech, the boy was told to "mind his own bizness."

The owner of the broken pipe, Mr. William Schreibner, was seated by an usher in the row of seats back of Marjorie. The curtain of the stage was lifted, and the commencement exercises were begun. Mrs. Duncan and Marjorie felt very proud of Howard, the valedictorian, and Mr. William Schreibner was no less elated than they when his son read the class history, but was filled with intense indignation when the class prophecy was read and the prophet had the audacity to say that Richard Schreibner would become a machine gun operator in the United States Army. Not if he could help it, no son of his should so disgrace the name of Schreibner!

Each student did his part well, and the diplomas were conferred to each graduate as he or she marched from the stage. Many introductions afterward took place on the campus, as the students and graduates intermingled with the visitors. Howard Duncan, nearly dragging the future machine gun operator, Richard Schreibner, by the arm, finally succeeded in presenting the bashful youth to his sister, Marjorie. Noticing his timidness, Marjorie took the initiative, and managed to draw him into a conversation; and by exercising her tact to the utmost made him feel undisturbed by her presence. Before the evening was over, Howard Duncan was thinking about what a nice looking pair of lovers his sister and favorite college chum would make.

Quite different was the opinion of Mr. William Schreibner, who had the scene of his son's future laid out on German soil, after Germany should greatly increase her population and territory by annexing Belgium and northern France to her own territory Young Richard, himself, had not given the matter of love, courtship, marriage or anything pertaining to the opposite sex, much thought or consideration but other matters had traveled through every fiber of his brain, and he could not arrive at a very satisfactory conclusion regarding the plans his father had made for him.

Why should he—a citizen of the United States, born under the protection of the American Flag, educated by American teachers and professors—be expected to get all from, and give nothing to the land and nationality that was his birthright?

From the beginning of the World war, he had not neglected to keep himself posted on news from the front. As he read accounts of awful measures taken by the German army in Belgium to force an entrance into northern France, he was, for the first time in his life, ashamed of his nationality. Far more humiliating was the thought that his father, when the United States first became affected by the results of Germany's submarine warfare, should favor the land of his birth, rather than the country of his adoption. He had come to Uncle Sam in trouble, but could not accommodate Uncle Sam enough to even keep his opinions regarding the freedom of the seas to himself.

The day after the commencement, Mr. Schreibner and his son rented a room at a hotel, as Mr. Schreibner had expressed a desire to remain in the city for a week or two to see the sights. Richard left his father alone in their room, and went down to the business district on an errand. He returned in the course of two hours, and as he arrived just in time to miss the elevator, he started up the stairs taking two steps at a time. As he started up the stairs leading from the second to the third floor, the stairway being partially dark and of the winding type, instead of a straight flight, he heard voices, and knew someone or several someones were descending the stairs from the third floor. He was standing on a landing in the stairway. At his left, the stairs went up; to the right, three steps down led to the entrance of a little room where janitors' supplies and a fire extinguisher were kept. Something seemed to tell Richard to make a right hand turn, which he did none too soon. The room was unoccupied: no one would question him. The voices were very low, but Richard heard enough to make him feel glad that he was in that room instead of on the stairway. The men spoke in German to this effect:

"Wish that Schreibner would get that kid busy to helping us. He is smart, and could be of valuable service to us," one said.

"Personally, I wouldn't trust that boy very much. His college education will never help us."

Richard could hear no more. He waited in the small room until he thought the conspirators had left the building, then cautiously opened the door, and put one foot forward when his ear detected more footsteps on the stairway. As the men passed the doorway, he could hear them whispering in German, but as they were more cautious than the first party, what they said was inaudible. Then he heard something drop, and a small coin rolled under the large crack below the door of the room he was in.

"Oh, come on," one said, speaking in English. "It was only a small coin. I can afford to lose that."

"You think you can, but you can't," mumbled the other. "If somebody should find that coin and notice it was German money, they might make things hum for us. We are fast losing our reputation in this country anyway."

"Well, go in that room and get it, if you want it; but hurry, I would rather that they find the coin than me."

Poor Richard! He looked for a hiding place, but it would be rather hard for a boy of his dimensions to hide behind a broom handle. He heard a slight movement of the door knob. He must find them some way, but how? He quickly turned to the window, ran his hand over the rather dirty sill and rubbed his face, pulled his cap over his ear and tried hard to look like an illiterate. The door opened. A huge form walked into the room. Richard turned leisurely around and surveyed the spy. In English, the intruder, not knowing Richard from Adam, hundered out.

"What you doing in here?"

Richard looked blank. The question was repeated. Richard still feigned a look of blank amazement, and finally answered his questioner with:

"Mee no speekee da Engleesh."

This seemed to satisfy the plotter and he went out, following his companion down the stairs. More cautiously than before, if possible, Richard left the little room, but instead of going upstairs, he immediately left the building, and as the street was comparatively quiet, looked in both directions for his friend of a few minutes previous. He just caught a glimpse of one of them entering a building about a block to the south. He followed the direction they had taken and entered the building just in time to see the particular kind of shoes he had noticed on the foot of the wearer a few minutes previous go out of sight in the elevator shaft.

MORE BUILDING IN JUNE, 1926

Columbus building permits for June, 1926, slightly exceeded, both in number and value, those issued during the same month in 1925.

Seven hundred and two permits were issued during June, for a valuation of $2,276,160.

Two hundred and thirty-four of these permits were for dwellings, against 261 in the same month last year. Permits were issued for 301 garages in June, against 361 last year.

H. E. Bon Durant, 2511 Ridge Ave., was at home over the Fourth from his work with the state department of health of West Virginia. Mr. Bon Durant is meeting with great success in his work and the department has recently asked him to continue his work for another year at an increased salary. On last Sunday night he lectured to over 700 men and boys at Welch, W. Va.

He stepped into another elevator which happened to be going up, telling the operator "Top floor, please." As the car he was on stopped at the third floor, he saw the man he was looking for pass the elevator going toward the rear of the building. One dropped something that looked like a bill fold from his pocket and stooped to pick it up.

"That man nearly lost his pocketbook," Richard remarked to the elevator boy, thinking he could perhaps get some information from that source.

"That wouldn't break him up," remarked the boy. "He gives away lots of money. Hands me a tip every once in a while."

"I have seen those men some place. Seems to me it was a business man's meeting. Let me see," and he pretended to study hard. "They are connected with the Northern Insurance Company, if I remember right."

"Believe you are mistaken, mister," said the boy, unaware of the fact that he was expected to say that very thing. Then he added:

"That oldest guy is president of the Middleton Toy Manufacturing Company, and the young feller is his assistant."

"Guess I made a mistake," Richard remarked as carelessly as possible.

He stepped from the elevator on the eleventh floor, and, after aimlessly walking to the end of the hall and back, descended the stairs to the third floor, his object being to take a look at the office of the Middleton Toy Manufacturing Company. He located the office but did not venture in, as no change had been made in his appearance since his encounter in the janitors' room at the hotel. He decided to go back to his room and let the matter rest for the present.

Chapter II

"Wanted: young girl with good personality for general office work. Must be able to operate typewriter and take care of phone calls. Address Box 51, care Daily News.

So ran the advertisement, which, on the night after the event of the previous chapter, appeared in the evening paper. Ellen Bartlett called her father's attention to the advertisement.

"Father, I believe I shall answer this immediately," she said.

"My little girl, I am afraid you will find it very disagreeable to be compelled to remain in an office from eight in the morning until five at night, working steadily all day long with no time to call your own."

"But at the end of each week I should have some money to call my own, and by working, myself, could lift some of the burden from your shoulders. I have gone through college at your expense, and now, I would like to do something for you. I may teach when the school term opens next autumn, but I would like to work in an office this summer."

"My daughter, you are no longer a child, and if you insist, you may apply for this position. If you ever regret having accepted it, remember that I will take care of you when you are ready to quit."

GREAT INTEREST AT PLAYGROUND

Baseball and Volley Ball Teams Organized at Glenwood and Holton Parks.

Bobby Jones and his national golf tournament added new play activities to the playgrounds on the Hilltop this past week. Continually here and there youngsters have been batting baseballs, tennis balls, golf balls and everything else that looked like golf balls, over the green to imitate the world's champion golf player.

Some of the boys under 12 years of age are now turning from golf and using their energies in making the kid's baseball teams which are being developed at Glenwood and Holton parks. The following boys are on Glenwood's 12-year-old baseball squad:

Woodrow Owens, 40 Clarendon Ave.; Louis Cramer, 2077 W. Broad St.; Howard Boyer, 38 Whitethorne Ave.; Roy Krause, 121 Midland Ave.; Richard Francis, 241 Clarendon Ave.; Robert Green, 2039 Floral Ave.; Paul Glidersleeve, 94 Belvidere Ave.; Paul Swaney, 185 Lechner Ave.; Donald Reed, 2001 Floral Ave.; John Gent, 231 Whitethorne Ave.; Robert Putnam, 43 Clarendon Ave., and John Lathem, 87 Belvidere Ave.

The 12-year-old Babe Ruth's of Glenwood were defeated Tuesday by McKinley playgrounds in a very closely and hotly contested battle, 11 to 10, which was decided in the tenth inning.

Following are the members of the McKinley 12-year-old team:
Robert McClain, Robert Sauls, Charles Tee, Ed McFadden, Fred Swank, David Tarpy, William Stickman, Clifton Bowman, Chester Bennett, Jack Sherman, James Lewis.

The adult volley ball team of Glenwood playgrounds is composed of Gordon Parret, 181 N. Oakley Ave.; Burdett Bryant, 81 Stevens Ave.; Herman and Herbert Slagle, 131 Stevens Ave.; George Graver, 128 S. Wheatland Ave.; "Dods" Gafferty, 235 Hague Ave., and Marvin Yerke, 184 S. Wheatland Ave.

This team plays McKinley playgrounds Thursday evening at 6:30, and will be the first game since their organization, but their practices of the last week indicate they will give a good account of themselves.

Glenwood Girls' baseball team, winners of last year's city playground championship, bids fair to repeat again this year as most of last year's team is again on the firing line in addition to several new promising recruits.

For the younger boys and girls, Glenwood is organizing a boat regatta which will take place next week. Headed by Harold Gray, 221 Columbian Ave., who has already a dandy home made boat, the regatta promises to create a great deal of interest.

H. T. RAMBLERS LOST FIRST GAME

Eighteen-Year-Old League Has Opening Game at Hospital Grounds Monday Eve.

The Hilltop boys lost their first start in the eighteen-year-old league Monday at the state hospital diamond, but they showed promise of potential power.

Cole, who has not pitched for some time, could not locate the plate, and walked several men, continually keeping himself in the hole. Frederick, who relieved him, pitched good ball. Ballard, shortstop for the Ramblers, garnered three hits, and did some pretty fielding. Cox, the diminutive second basemen, played an excellent game in the field. With Henry on third and McCrea at the bat, the Ramblers worked one of the prettiest squeeze plays ever seen. Henry was across the plate by the time the ball was hit and McCrea reached first safely.

Games are played every Monday at 5:30, so come out and root for the boys. Two full teams have been organized and they practice Tuesdays and Thursdays under the instruction of "Duffy" Friend, Plain City outfielder.

Score by innings:

H. T. Ramblers	0 1 0 2 0 0 0—3
Parrott Pets	1 0 4 0 3 1 x—9

Batteries—Pets: Kline and Harris; Ramblers: Cole, Frederick, Friend and Larkin. Umpire—Merritt.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

Regular Attendance Much Better Than Last Year—Work Started on Pageant.

The Daily Vacation Bible school last Friday had a registration of over 210 pupils with an average regular attendance of 160.

While the registration is not so great as last year, the regular attendance is much better. The children are bringing Bibles and take great pleasure in showing how they can use them.

Much handwork has been completed and other things are nearing that point. All of this work will be on display at the close of the school the latter part of the month.

Work on the pageant to be given at the end of the school has been started and will go forward rapidly next week.

Regular attendance by the pupils of the school is much desired for the best work and parents are urged to see that their children attend as regularly as possible until the close of the school.

Visitors are welcome and are invited to drop in at the school any time.

Miss Frances Jane Smith, 27 South Ogden Ave., was guest of honor at a party July 14, celebrating her fourteenth birthday anniversary. Guests at the party included Mildred Schuman, Helen Hastings, Ruth Robb, Corrine and Helen Miller, Mary Mider, Mary Hunter, Mary Alice Dorsey, Cless Butler, Edith Temple and Marjory Smith.

Fewer Detours for Ohio Motorists

Under the new policy adopted by the State Highway Department, Ohio motorists will have fewer detours to contend with in the future.

State Highway Director Schlesinger has instructed all division engineers to avoid setting up detours except when it is absolutely necessary. This will mean elimination of detours on roads under repair by having the workmen maintain an open road along the regular route while repairing one side at a time.

On new construction jobs where detours are essential, they must be kept in perfect repair, Schlesinger says.

Mrs. Margaret Larger and baby daughter of Lancaster, Ohio, is visiting with her sister, Mrs. R. E. Wynn and family, 148 N. Warren Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregg Dellinger of La Salle, Ill., are visiting at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. C. H. Nowell and family, 147 N. Warren Ave.

At the first meeting officers were elected: Harry Butler being chosen mayor of Junior Town; Helen Myers, news reporter; Margaret Hungleman, clerk; law and order commissioners, Susan Barrell, Cless Butler, Nellie Phillips and Norma Gibson.

The pageant, "The Quill," was cast in the time of the revolutionary war, and was the biggest event ever put over by the Hilltop Chautauqua Junior Town. Miss Marion Rupe, 244 N. Hague Ave., assisted at the piano. Evelyn Rupe, 52 N. Princeton Ave., and Helen Myers, 78 N. Burgess Ave., had the two leading parts, Miss Rupe as Betsy Ross and Miss Myers as Columbia.

Carter were called to Roseville, Ohio, last week by the death of their aunt, Miss Alice Carey Wigton. NEAR RACE RIOT SUNDAY NIGHT

Police Called to Sandusky and Broad Streets to Disperse Crowd.

Police were called to Sandusky and Broad streets Sunday night to disperse a near riot between negroes and white people, who were about to attack each other with stones and sticks.

The trouble started, police said, when a colored boy struck an 8-year-old white girl with a baby in her arms. The girl's 15-year-old brother, it was said, interfered and struck his sister's assailant and in turn struck the attacker's sister.

The colored boy ran to his home, where he summoned relatives and neighbors for help. They returned to the scene of the quarrel where they were met by friends of the young girl. For a short time numerous calls for help were sent to police headquarters.

Farmers to Picnic

Annual picnic of the Farmer's Protective Association of Prairie township will be held August 6 at Alton, Ohio. One of the largest gatherings ever assembled at this annual affair is expected to attend.

Special displays will be upon exhibition including the latest in motor-driven farm machinery as well as a complete program of athletic events. Plans for the gathering are in charge of Mason Sealock, president and W. S. Anderson, secretary.

Hilltop School of Music opens for the season on September 10th. For infomation regarding course of study, communicate with Miss Edith L. Robbins, Fair Haven, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Graham of 46 S. Harris Ave. entertained on Wednesday evening, July 7, with a garden party in honor of their daughter Mildred, it being her fourteenth birthday. Those present were: the Misses Elizabeth Ryan, Mary Rose Ryan, Adaline Gardine, Dorothy Moss, Ella Marie McGonagle, Christine Murnane, Evelyn Pancake, Gertrude Gaffney, Mary Ansel, Mary Fulcher, Marion Ogden, Jane Kennedy, Mary Martin, Ruth Lyons, Ann, Ruth, Jane and Mary Graham and Kathryn Rice.

A unique birthday party was held Thursday afternoon, July 1, at the home of little Mary Jane Sheron, 67 S. Eureka Ave., celebrating her fivth anniversary. A color scheme was carried out in rainbow colors. Each guest was given a cap and ribbon necklace when they arrived. After many old fashioned games were played in the yard and a lollypop hunt the children went in the house for a candy stick hunt. Then all gathered around the table where sat a huge imitation pink and white cake with treamers of rainbow colors running to the table ends. On top of this cake was a smaller one with five pink and white candles. Each boy and girl then pulled their streamers and received their favors, boys drawing whistles and girls drawing dolls.. Then came the big surprise the huge cake was lifted and behold there was Mary Jane's beautiful decorated birthday cake of which all received a piece. Many pretty gifts were received by the honored guest which was a great surprise as this was Mary Jane's first birthday party and she wasn't expecting a Santa Claus this time of the year. Noah's Ark was on display and the guests devoured his animals along with ice cream cones. About 6 o'clock the little ones departed wishing Mary Jane many more happy birthdays. Among those present were: Martha, Helen and Buddy Kline, Rebekka Snider, Winifred Limmons, Lucile and Dorine Summers, Louise Kellar, Vivian Eckles, Dorothy, Howard, Mary and Jean Staly, Donald Bishop, Donald Jewell, Billy Lind, Emajean Church, Jancie Buttler, Bobby Sheron, Junior Courtny, Jean and Jane Stroup, Lois Jane and Madline Wheller, Mrs. Warren Church, Mrs. William Lind, Mrs. Claude Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. John Wheller, Mrs. J. Bishop, Mary Jane, her mother and daddy.

RECIPES

COOL DESSERT

Peach mist makes a delectable warm summer evening dish. Made from two egg whites, 2 cups of small cut peaches 3 tablespoons of powdered sugar, and 3 tablespoons of some berry jelly or jam. Chill the eggs before breaking them, whip whites until stiff, add powdered sugar and jelly before whipping. Mix in peaches, chill and serve in sherbet glasses.

FROZEN GRAPE MINT

Several long-stemmed sprays of fresh mint, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 pint grape juice, 1 pint strong lemonade, 1 pint plain or sparkling water.

Pinch stems of the mint between thumb and finger until the bruised sprigs give out the utmost of their flavor, and thrust stems into a deep pitcher half-filled with cracked ice. Over them sprinkle the sugar and let it stand for half an hour. Then add grape juice, the lemonade and water. If sparkling water is used, add it just before serving.

FRUIT, SALAD DRESSING

A delicious dressing for fruit salads is made with:

2 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon scant) dry mustard
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon olive oil
⅛ teaspoon paprika
⅝ cup whipped cream

Beat yolks of eggs, add butter and sugar creamed together, vinegar, lemon juice, oil mustard, salt, and paprika. Cook in a double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Cool and add cream. Pour over salad and serve.

A VEAL AND CUCUMBER SALAD

Take enough cold roast veal and chop it fine, after freeing fat and fiber. There should be two cupfuls. Then chop and add the fleshy part of two cucumbers (not the seeds) pepper, salt, a teaspoonful each of minced red pepper and mint leaves. Add enough good, sharp tarter sauce to bind the ingredients. Heap in lettuce leaves and garnish with stuffed olive and hard boiled eggs.

CHERRY BREAD PUDDING

One cup stale bread crumbs, 2 cups hot milk, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg, 1 cup stoned cherries.

Pour milk over crumbs and let stand until cool. Add sugar, butter and egg slightly beaten. Mix well and add cherries. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve warm or cold with or without sugar and cream.

THE MONTH OF LITTLE FOOD

The Eskimos of Greenland cannot count above 20 and so in Denmark they say that all who desire perpetual youth and detest telling their age should live in Greenland, where they will never be more than 20. Very often the scarcity or abundance of rations serves to measure the year. In Alaska one month is called "people gnaw belts," because at that time they are often starving. In Dahomey they divide the year into the time of planting and eating maize, of planting again and of harvest. The Polynesians have a "month of grumbles," the time of little food, bad weather, smoking houses, watering eyes and constant quarrels. Among primitive races the measurement of time is very vauge. The chief on a Pacific island may reply, when asked how long his house has been standing, that it has existed only for two small-pox epidemics.

Over a hundred years ago there existed a body of artists known as the Society of Scottish Artists. The organization had deteriorated until 1826 when the members decided to take a new lease on life and become a real academy. They were therefore incorporated as the Royal Scottish Society, modeled after the Royal Academy of London. During the hundred years of its existance, this organization has accomplished much in producing works of art and inspiring in the lives of the Scottish people a taste for art. The centenary exhibition to be held during the year of 1926 will be made up of works by past and present artists, and will illustrate the progress of pictorial art in that country from the time of Raeburn to the present day.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

"But I am not a quitter, daddy, unless for a very good reason, and my little sisters and my mother must not deprive themselves of things they need in order that I can enjoy a lazy existance."

Ellen replied to the advertisement, sending her answer to the Daily News office by her father the following day, after which she went out on the lawn and enjoyed a few hours with her sisters, playing croquet and tennis. Then she entered the house and helped he mother with the weeks mending. The last garment was just finished when the telephone rang. Ellen removed the receiver from the book, and was informed that Mr. Carl Middleton of the Middleton Toy Manufacturing Company requested a personal interview with Miss Bartlett immediately.

Within thirty minutes Ellen was ascending the elevator to the third floor of the Grant Building. As she neared the entrance to room 317 the intent gase of the janitor attracted her attention. When she looked directly at him, he turned his head away.

Something about him made her feel as though she had met him before, but at a second glance, she was convinced that she probably had not. She entered the office rooms and was immediately directed to Mr. Middleton's private office by the office boy.

Ellen was a very observant person, and had only been seated about five minutes when she found herself wondering what Mr. Middleton looked like before pasting those whiskers on his chin. To her, also, occurred the words burned on her mind—"Lusitania Sunk; 114 American Lives Lost," but she gave no sign of her thoughts. By this time she had convinced Mr. Middleton, whom, she felt confident, was not Mr. Middleton at all, but alias Mr. Middleton instead, that she could type at the rate of sixty per minute, could take dictation twice as fast, and answer phones as good as anyone; also, could swallow her curiosity and not inquire to too great an extent into any secrets between members of her firm. She was told to come in at nine o'clock the next morning. Her hours would be from nine to four-thirty. Mr. Middleton treated his employees as he would expect his daughter to be treated. He did not believe in girls being required to work too long in one day (because if they did, when could he find time for the crooked work?)

Ellen was on duty the next morning at nine o'clock, and aside from trying to ascertain the real nature of the business of this company, her tasks were very light. The first month rolled by without any unusual occurrences. Ellen continued to write letters about the manufacture of toys which Mr. Middleton told her not to mail. He would attend to stamping and mailing. Secretaries so often neglected to mail their correspondence, and when they did accidently drop it in the letter box, half of the letters were sure to come back with notation "Returned for postage" stamped across the address. Ellen pretended to believe all such stories, but knew that a part of the fruits of each day's labor was mailed in the furnace.

One morning she was detained at home, and arrived at the Grant Building at three minutes past nine. Ellen had a perfect horror of being late; so she hurried up the stairs instead of waiting for the elevator. Before she reached the second floor, in making an abrupt turn at the landing, she bumped into the janitor coming down the stairs and very unceremoniously knocked a bucket of Water from his grasp.

"Oh, I'm so sorry," she said; but the remainder of her apology was never finished. In front of her stood a boy who had graduated from college a few weeks before, she, too, receiving a diploma at that same commencement. But the boy had aged some and looked very different from the clean-cut young man at Stanton University. He saw that she recognized him, and knew the name of the firm for whom she was working. That same company was the cause of his present occupation, for his name was Richard Schreibner.

"Please promise me that you will not disclose my identity to anyone, Ellen. Some day, I may give you the reason."

Ellen promised, as she felt sure his purpose was an honorable one. When she reached her office, no one was there, so no one would know she was late; but the phone was ringing. She answered it.

"Hello, "Is Mr. Middleton there?" a voice asked. It was a long distance call.

"No, he isn't; but he will probably be here very shortly," she answered.

Just then Mr. Middleton entered the office and took the instrument from her hands. The voice at the other end of the line was inaudible to her as she began her daily routine. What she heard Mr. Middleton say would not have had any influence on the opinions of any ordinary listener; but Ellen was different.

"Hello—Yes—Yes—In a letter like that, important words should be underscored—You will learn—Yes—Warm it a little—Sure—Goodby."

Mr. Middleton hung up the receiver and gave Ellen a searching look, to satisfy himself that she had failed to suspicion a hidden meaning for the conversation.. Ellen betrayed no outward sign that she had, but being a good guesser, had rightly surmised that Mr. Middleton had a way of sending messages that would give an ordinary reader the impression that the construction of toys was the subject, but when rightly interpreted only the part undercored with invisible ink, which necessitated the warming of the note paper, would be of any interest to the receiver of the message. No wonder Middleton insisted that she transcribe her letters exactly as they were dictated to her.

Ellen was in a quandry as to the right course to pursue. Should she leave the employ of the Middleton Company or continue to assist with their underhanded work? Should she go on as formerly, and perhaps be the instrument of righting a great wrong? If she should resign her position, there would be others to take her place who would never notice what she had observed.

Although she knew that this company was not engaged in legitimate business, as yet, she did not know exactly what object they had in view. She finally decided to remain in their employ for the present at least.

Chapter III

The commencement exercises in which Ellen Bartlett, Richard Schreibner, and Howard Duncan had taken part, took place in the middle of June. Since then a month's time had elapsed, the middle of July finding Richard Schreibner apparently making use of his education with a broom and scrubbing equipment, meanwhile noticing certain moves of the occupants of room 317.

He wanted to advise Ellen to leave the employ of these men, but was afraid she would resent his interference. He did not know that Ellen knew almost as much about them as he did. On the evening of his first encounter with the alias Mr. Middleton and his assistant, the latter now being away on business, Richard had returned to his room and found a note on the table informing him that his father had been suddenly called away. No further information was given in the note; but a few weeks later, he received a letter from Mr. Schreibner saying that the writer would be back to the city soon, with some plans made for Richard's future. Richard saw that he could accomplish nothing more by remaining at the Grant Building, and discontinued his work in the capacity of janitor, as the tasks allotted to him were anything but pleasant. The fact that Ellen had recognized him instantly disturbed him greatly. By acting as janitor these few weeks, he had made sure that the men with whom his father was in league were already prying deep into affairs which should not have concerned them. He had followed Ellen up the stairs that morning, having first mopped up the water spilled from his bucket; and passed the door of room 317. He overheard Mr. Middleton's side of the phone conversation, and could arrive at only one conclusion regarding the meaning, having previously heard another conversation from the same source.

Richard loved his father dearly, and seriously hoped that Mr. Schreibner would not become deeply involved in the affairs of the Middleton Company. He determined to have a talk with his father on the subject, when the latter returned to the city.

The next morning, Mr. Schreibner returned to his room at the hotel, just as his son was preparing to go in search of another occupation. The two men met with a warm hand shake.

"Dick, my boy, how vould you like to go downd to the coundry for a vile dis summer vedt? You haf been vorking hardt, and the coundry vould do us good, both."

"Why do you want to go to the country, father?" Richard asked suspiciously.

"I vonce told you,—for a resdt, boy."

"Is that all?" Richard asked almost sharply. "I should like a rest myself, if I were sure you were locating in the country for that purpose.

"Talk Cherman, boy. I don't kvite unterstant haf of vot you says."

"But father, you should try to speak English and learn to understand it. We live among English speaking people and should become accustomed to our surroundings."

"Vell," responded William, "Haf you own vay." Then after a few minutes of silence, he again asked Richard.

"Vant to go along mit me?"

Richard promised that he would, and the next day found them traveling rapidly southward into the open country.

Chapter IV

Howard Duncan was a young man in his twenties, and much sought after by more than one aristocratic young lady and her match making mother; but in Howard's mind, girls were decidedly a side line, their presence being endured by him only when courtesy made it compulsory. With the exception of one girl, all of the admiring glances cast in his direction met with merely a polite look or word of greeting, and that girl was Marjorie Duncan, his sister, some two years his junior, who, after completing the high school course several years before, had taken up music as her vocation in life.

Their home was located in a little village, a "one-horse town" as it was frequently alluded to, boasting of one bank, a department store, a post office, several grocery stores, the town hall, and a little frame church, which was always crowded on Sundays, both morning and evening. The home of the Duncans was near the outskirts of the little village, the distance to the business district being about eight blocks. The streets were bordered with maple trees and beautiful lawns which were the pride of the community. Those who sneeringly remarked that it was a "country-jakes burg," might well have envied the inhabitants, as they cheerfully went about doing their daily duties, unspoiled by such monsters as hate, greed, envy, and malice. While those in large cities were trying to dishonestly outwit their neighbors or business associates, and could find nothing to interest them less than "wild parties," etc., these home-loving people in the little country villages were leading noble lives, and were guiding their children in the path that would lead to true womanhood and manhood. The products of these small hamlets have made wonderful presidents and statesmen.

The old Capitol Hotel on Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, which has been there since the capital was a muddy village, is being torn down to make room for a more modern structure. The building is said by some to have been one of the two oldest hostelries still existing in the country. At any rate, it has many historical associations, for it was there that Andrew Jackson is said to have uttered his famous words about the preservation of the Union, and one of the rooms was called the Clay Room, because it was once occupied by Henry Clay. Other famous men who lived in the same block include Daniel Webster, John Calhoun, Francis Scott Key, Robert Hayne, Henry Wise and Henry Wilson.

"FOR FREEDOM"

As one leaves the little railway station at Weston, they follow the street leading to the central part of the town, passing the post office and the department store. They turn to their left at the next corner, where the bank is located and walk through a lane of trees along an old-fashioned stone sidewalk. The street crossings for pedestrians are paved with brick. Having walked across two of these crossings, one passes the little frame church and, if they are bound for the home of the Duncans, they continue along this street several blocks further, until they arrive at a pretty little bungalow on the corner, which seems to be a paradise of birds, flowers, and cheerful voices.

On this particular morning in July, Howard Duncan and his father leave the house and walk toward the business district. Ten minutes later they may be seen entering a little office room upstairs over the bank, which has a sign placed in the window: "Howard Duncan & Son, Attorneys" which proves that the people of Weston are somewhat human after all.

They begin their daily work and before many hours, several business transactions have taken place, one being the transfer of a piece of property from the heirs of a man who had recently entered the great beyond, to Mr. William Schreibner. The property was located about two miles from the limits of the little town of Weston, and consisted of one acre of ground and a five room house.

"Why, that must be Richard Screibner's father," remarked Howard, jr enthusiastically, just before Mr Schreibner arrived in person, in company with a younger man who was quite likely the meanest person that ever stepped on the soil of Weston The administrator of the small estate with his attorney were present, also

When the transaction was completed Howard jr. ventured to ask Mr Schreibner if he had a son named Richard. The old man replied that he had, but felt that he would be better pleased if no one in this particular part of the country knew either himself or his son; but he had replied before thinking, and had given Howard the desired information.

In the meantime, Marjorie was conversing with her mother. She had been away from home for two years, attending a Conservatory of Music and Art in the east, and both mother and daughter enjoyed these little moments when they could be alone to talk over plans for the present and future. Their plans for the present were not halted in any way, but how little they knew of the future.

Marjorie was twenty years old, possessed a pair of beautiful blue eyes that bestowed a tender loving look on everything and everybody, unless a person included under the term "everybody" should be guilty of a grave misdemeanor which, in some way, should affect Marjorie or anyone she cared for. In that case, her loving gaze changed to one of another description, and the blue eyes, if observed by the offender, would haunt them for a short or long length of time, according to the disposition of that particular person.

Marjorie's hair was light brown, with a little golden tinge that everyone admired, especially her brother, Howard. Marjorie could truthfully say that she had fallen in love, but could not remember the exact date. Probably it was the first time her blue eyes had looked up from her cradle into the brown eyes of her two year old brother, who might have insisted that she play with his favorite toy or eat a huge piece of his candy.

As to complexion, any screen beauty might have envied Marjorie. Nature had done more for her skin than all of the cosmetics money could buy. Her graceful form was the result of plenty of healthful exercise; her mind, the product of an inherited refinement, and much study and cultivation on her part.

The following Sunday, Howard, Marjorie, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan attended the little white church. Just as Howard, jr. rang the church bell and Marjorie struck the first chord of the first hymn on the new piano, Richard Schreibner was on his way from the house recently purchased by his father, to the village. He had no particular destination in view, but just wanted a little exercise. The peal of the bell from the direction of the church reached his ears, and he quickened his step as though he had received a summons that must be obeyed.

The second song was being finished as he entered the vestibule. The first person he saw was Howard Duncan, who welcomed him with outstretched hand. The morning services were over, and everyone of the villagers present welcomed the young man and cordially invited him to come again. Howard and Richard were standing in the rear of the room near the middle isle, when Marjorie came toward them from the front of the church.

She warmly greeted Howard's friend, and insisted that he go home with them. Howard seconded the invitation and it was accepted. As to Richard, the girl who walked between himself and her brother along the sidewalk though the young man was not aware of the fact, he was fast falling in love. Marjorie found his company delightful, but at the close of the day, could still say that no man on earth was one-half as nice as Howard; but next is important ance to him, she did believe Richard Schreibner ranked next. That night after Richard left, Howard teasingly remarked:

"Well, sis, the summer is not over yet. When it is I'm afraid your single bliss will be over, too, followed by a trial at matrimony."

"Now, Howard, you no doubt have matrimonial intentions toward somebody, but you mustn't judge me by you. I know who my best beau is," she exclaimed, and quickly kissed him goodnight, and retired to her room.

Chapter V

Ellen Bartlett, her work for the day completed, was preparing to leave the office. She took the last letter out of her typewriter, closed and locked her desk, donned her hat and coat, and was soon out of the building.

The sky was very cloudy, and it had begun to rain. She must hurry home before the storm came, as peals of thunder could be heard in the distance. As she neared the corner of West State and Second Street, a familiar figure advanced toward the mail box on the corner. In the man's haste, he dropped a letter on the pavement, which he supposed had dropped in the box with the others. Ellen was filled with a determination to read that letter. As this was the corner where she usually waited for the street car, she walked to the mail-box, and to all appearances, accidently dropped a package, which she intended to pick up, taking the letter with it. Before she could reach for the package, a gallant young man quickly picked it up for her, but left the coveted letter lying on the pavement.

Ellen thanked him, but truthfully wished he was at the North Pole, that is, until she recognized who he was.

"Why, Ralph Dalton, I thought you had gone east for the summer," she

"No, I changed my mind. This city suits me, for the present. Now that college days are over, I suppose I should get down to business and make a future for myself."

Changing the subject, he asked:

"Do you want me to drive you home? A storm is coming, so you had better say 'yes.'"

Ellen wanted that letter, and again dropped the package, this time picking it up herself and taking the letter with it.

WADING POOLS VERY POPULAR

Volley Ball and Tennis Also Come in for Their Share at Hilltop Playgrounds.

The hundreds of youngsters that have visited Glenwood's wading pool the last few days of this sweltering weather are much tickled over the good turn that John Brobst and Albert Livingstone of the Standard Paving Co. did for them when they so graciously and generously cemented over the several bad holes in the bottom of the pool, which have caused many stubbed toes and scarred feet.

Volley ball, which ordinarily is considered by quite a few as an inside game, is being played by an increasingly large number on the outside courts at both Hilltop playgrounds.

Glenwood has a real formidable adult volley ball team, and if the form they showed against McKinley playground is any indication of their strength, they should bring the city championship in volley ball to the Hilltop. Glenwood defeated McKinley four straight games, 21-1, 21-4, 21-1 and 21-5.

Arrangements have been made for a game with Carl Spangler's crack Northwood team Thursday, today, at 7 o'clock, at Glenwood park. This promises to be a battle royal.

Tentative plans are being developed for a tumbling and mat team at Glenwood playgrounds. If satisfactory arrangements with other playgrounds can be made, these teams will give public exhibitions at various stated periods. Leroy Patzer, Eugene Hayes, Herman and Herbert Slagle and John Adair all have had some experience along these lines and give promise of some good team work.

To stimulate greater interest in tennis and to develop greater skill in serving and playing various types of drives, Mr. Dyer, supervisor of Glenwood, has made arrangements for Carl Wirthwein of Ohio State fame and one of the foremost players in Columbus, to visit Glenwood some day next week to demonstrate a few of the skills used in tennis.

Miss Moler's girl's baseball team, last year's city champions, play their initial game Friday against the playground team at Nineteenth and Rich streets. The following girls compose Glenwood's team: Catherine Fay, Mary Cartmell, Rose Mahoney, Alice Adair, Edith Murray, Ruth Whipple, Bessie Whitt, Esther Jones, Louise Compton and Lucile Compton. Miss Ruth Whipple will play the part Mrs. Walter Johnson and perform the pitching duties for Glenwood. She has great speed and control.

Rev. G. W. Lose and Mrs. Lose, accompanied by Mr. Clarence Renner, are spending this week at Lakeside, attending a chautauqua that is held there annually in the interests of the Sunday school work of the Lutheran church. Dr. Lose conducts a primary Sunday school class on five different occasions.

"Seder Ward" will be presented by the Moderners Players Club of the Coyle School of the Spoken Word at West Park Avenue church on Thursday, July 29, at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the W. F. M. S. A good attendance is desired in appreciation of Miss Coyle and her staff.

HE APPEARED VERSATILE

A microphone skipper, as the announcer of a radio broadcasting station has been called, is said to have had difficulty in getting a famous man to talk over the radio. But he thought up a whimsical idea. He wrote out what the celebrity was to say.

The person of importance began by telling how people thought of him only as an artist possessing a single talent; and that it probably would be a surprise to them to know that he could play on practically every known musical instrument. To show how accomplished he was he would first render a piano solo.

The radio announcer had arranged with a good pianist to play a difficult selection. Then the famous man said he hoped that his audience had enjoyed his performance on the piano, and that he would next show them his mastery of the violin. There was a violinist to play a piece. And so the celebrity went on with half a dozen other musical instruments.

Then the man of importance announced that it had been such a pleasure to him to play the instruments seperately that he would play all of them at once! Whereupon, the orchestra, which have been provided, played a number; and the radio audience had a good laugh when they saw the joke.

MURNAN SPECIALS DEFEAT RAMBLERS

In a loosely played game Monday evening Murnan Specials were victorious over the Hilltop Ramblers, in the 18-year-old league. Featured by the pitching of Crishbaum and Frederick, along with erratic fielding, the Ramblers lost their second start, 7 to 1. Crishbaum struck out eight men, while Frederick fanned five. Four consecutive batters were forced to bow to Frederick. Eleven errors contributed to the Hilltoppers' defeat. Score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Specials	0 3 0 1 1 0 2—7	9	3
Ramblers	0 0 0 0 1 0 0—1	4	11

INJURIES FATAL TO L. BURKETT

Dies Friday Morning in Akron Hospital—Funeral Services Held Monday.

Injuries received in an automobile race at Akron Sunday, July 11, proved fatal to Louis Burkett, 90 N. Chase Ave., last Friday morning.

The stone was originally set up at lost control of his machine, which crashed into the fence, his right arm being caught between the fence and the seat of the car, and mangled in such a manner that amuptation was necessary. The operation was performed at an Akron hospital, where he was removed immediately following the accident.

Burkett was associated with his father in the garage business in the rear of South Terrace and West Broad streets. He is survived by his wife, two children and his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Burkett, 2627 West Broad St., all of whom were at the hospital when he died.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the residence of his father. Burial was made in Green Lawn cemetery in charge of C. J. Kohn.

French Addressed World Police Chiefs

Chief of Police Harry E. French addressed the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, in Chicago Tuesday. Safety Director McCune also attended the convention. The sociological aspect of police work and how it fits into the picture in Columbus was discussed by French.

Mrs. Cubbage, mite box woman of the Women's Foreign Missionary society of West Park Avenue M. E. church, urges all to fill their mite boxes and turn them in by the middle of August, as this report must be in by Sept. 1.

Wheat Crop Good

This year's wheat crop in Ohio may reach 32,900,000 bushels, almost 50 per cent more than last year, according to C. J. West of the State-Federal Crop Reporting Service.

Wheat conditions have improved as much as a bushel to the acre in the past month. Wheat acreage is 200,000 acres more than it was a year ago.

Corn crop, however, will be only about three-fourths of the average, he said, altho corn is now free from cut worms and with the advent of favorable weather has shown much improvement.

Monday, July 5, R. S. DeVault and family of Beechwold entertained friends and relatives at "Sleepy Hollow," their beautiful country home near Delaware. The day was spent in playing such games as croquet, horse shoe pitching and crochinole. There was, also, swimming, boating and horseback riding. A pony and cart amused the children. An elaborate dinner and supper was served under the shade trees. After supper a grand display of fireworks furnished the amusement for the evening. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Glick, Misses Ethel and Lucille Glick, Rose Glick, Mr. George Peters, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Glick and daughters, Helen and Leona, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Glick, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Hain and family, Mrs. Jesse Hain and children, Mrs. Baker of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Haffey and daughter Maryella of Bexley, Mrs. Mary Bailey of Huntington, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hain of Ashville, and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Glick and E. S. Glick of Canal Winchester.

Surviving Mrs. Gill are three sons, Arthur H. of Columbus, Albert W. of Los Angeles, and Wallace E. of Bellingham, Wash., and a sister, Mrs. Lucy Higgins, and three brothers, Ogden, Philip and Charles Nadenbush, all of Pana, Ill.

Westwood 20—Westgate 4

In a game which furnished much fun and bantering on the part of both teams, Westwood K. of P. recreation ball club defeated Westgate Masonic team by a score of 20 to 4. Nickell and Barnhart were the batteries for Westwood and Ward and Williams did the mound work for Westgate.

No record was kept of the home runs, two base hits and stolen bases. No [illegible].

Will Extend Course

"A real estate educational course in every Ohio real estate board" is the goal which has been set by the committee on real estate education of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards.

Although an attempt will be made to improve the effectiveness of real estate courses now being conducted in 14 Ohio cities, the committee's main effort will be directed towards helping the smaller board solve its educational problem.

Dr. J. T. Craddock has recently opened offices at Broad St. and Hague Ave.

The Amity Embroidery club met at the home of Mrs. Harry Bright, 473 Catherine St. Those present were: Mrs. Park, Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Ditrick, Mrs. Brant and Mrs. Shields.

Long Service in Highway Department

The department of state highways claims the record for employees with long service records. A tabulation of these employees show that E. E. Bootan, engineer, leads the list. BARRELL HEADS CHAUTAUQUA

One Hundred and Fifty Signers Guarantee Next Year's Program.

The Hilltop chautauqua program, closed last week, was the best all around edtertainment the people of the Hilltop have enjoyed since chautauqua became a regular yearly event in this community.

While the success of an undertaking of this character is largely due to the company putting on the entertainment, yet the local committee in charge of the advance work deserve unlimited praise for their untiring efforts to provide the Hilltop with a chautaqua of the caliber we have just had.

Much credit is due S. E. Pool and his co-workers for their efforts and amount of time spent in rounding out the details of the entertainment.

At the meeting of the guarantors, C. W. Barrell of the B.-B. Hardware Co., was chosen president for the ensuing year; J. Howard Young of the West Side Lumber Co., was chosen treasurer, and H. C. Ellison, secretary.

These men will need your hold next year, and it is the duty of each Hilltop top citizen to give them their unlimited support.

The contract for next year's chautauqua has been signed, and so far 150 people have signed as guarantors.

HEADSTONE IS REMOVED

From Grave of War Prisoner Who Died at Camp Chase During Rebellion.

A headstone which marked the resting place of a Virginia cavalryman, in Camp Chase cemetery, was recently unearthed at Neilston and Buckingham streets, several miles distant from the grave of the former Southern soldier.

The stone was originally set up at the grave of John McCoy, Co. D, 62d Virginia (Mounted) Infantry, at Camp Chase, and lately was brought to light by Virgil K. Evans, 540 Grove St., on the site of a razed building on the northeast corner of Buckingham and Neilston streets.

Records disclose that McCoy enlisted in Highland county, Va., Sept. 1, 1864, and the muster roll for November and December, of the same year, shows that he was "absent, a prisoner of war, since 1st Nov."

That the stone is old is indicated not only through its worn appearance, but also, from the fact that such stones in Camp Chase largely have given way to those of smaller type, that are not so easily affected by the elements nor topple over through the years.

The inscription it bears reads: "1837—Henry McCoy, Co. D., 62 Va. Reg. C. S. A."

TO CONFER KNIGHT RANK

Westwood K. of P., No. 770, will confer the Knight Rank at their meeting next Monday night at their hall.

THE TALES THEY TOLD

It is the fashion these days to dig up stories of the Centennial Exposition of 1876 which appeared in print in post-Centennial years. The Philadelphia Public Ledger has brought to light the following anecdotes:

In Agriculture Hall, were two immense hogs, stuffed. Each bore a placard with age and weight and with the name of the expert who had prepared them for exhibition, followed by the word "Taxidermist."

A man and his wife passed by. They paused and regarded the display with manifest interest.

"Why, these are taxidermists. I thought they were hogs," said the woman.

The husband regarded the placard with a puzzled look and then replied: "They're hogs. Taxidermist is the name of the place they came from."

Another story concerned a firm which had a number of small signs printed, "Take One."

They were intended to be placed above receptacles on the walls in the Agriculture Building, containing their business advertisements, inviting the public to help themselves to the latter.

"Some graceless variet," writes the narrator, "passing by, stole the package and, looking around, saw a fine display of preserved fruits, pickles, and jams.

"The owner was absent for the moment. He placed a 'take One' sign on each bottle, glass, and can.

"An old lady came along, saw the sign, and helped herself to a bottle of pickles.

"A woman with four children next appeared and each appropriated a jar or can.

"The news spread like wildfire, and in a few minutes scores of persons were rushing like mad toward the stand.

"The place was entirely stripped, and when the owner finally appeared all that remained were empty shelves, over which were scattered cards, 'Take One,' which told the story of ruin."

First rehearsal of the chorus that is to feature the 1926 state fair pageant was held Sunday afternoon. Three hundred and fifty voices are to comprise this chorus which will be under the direction of Karl H. "Pop" Hoenig.

This is the first time the Ohio state fair has entered the musical field on such a scale and this chorus, as planned, will round out an already excellent musical program featured by a 300 piece band, composed of the best musicians from the leading high school bands in the state.

"By starting rehearsal in our chorus so early," Director Trnax states, "we feel certain the rendition of the difficult numbers will be of professional quality by the week of August 30th."

Rehearsals will continue under the direction of Mr. Hoenig until fair week, when this chorus will appear each night in conjunction with the spectacular pageant that will be staged for grandstand patrons. songsters has been most encouraging, Director Trnax reports.

MAY LIGHT ROADS OUT OF COLUMBUS

New Safety Measure May Be Used on National Pike and Marysville Road.

A section of each of the two highways leading out of Columbus may be illuminated soon as a demonstration of the safety of traffic on a lighted road.

W. A. Alsdorf, secretary of the Ohio Good Roads federation, said on Saturday that the federation had taken up with the state highway department and power and light companies plans for lighting the Columbus-Marysville road just south-east of Marysville and the National pike just east of Columbus. On both of these highways traffic is exceedingly heavy.

BUS PRODUCTION SHOWS INCREASE

Motor Vehicle Fast Becoming Favorite Means of Transportation.

According to figures compiled by the automotive industry, the production of motor buses in 1925 was 32 per cent greater than the output in 1924, while the increase in the manufacture of passenger cars was only 17 per cent. In 1925, a total of 475,000 buses and trucks were manufactured.

The motor vehicle is fast becoming, according to a statement, the favorite means of transportation. The much talked of desire to 'ride on rubber' is given as the reason. In this connection it is observed, also, that automobile owners are using the bus for trips to the city, this being due, it is said, to traffic congestion and lack of sufficient parking space, which have resulted in more or less of a hazard. Traveling men, who a few years ago, made their trips through the country in their own cars, also are using the bus, the increase in bus lines, number of motor vehicles in service and number of towns served making it more economical and convenient to ride the bus than operate one's own car.

Virtually every section in Ohio is now touched by motor bus service. A survey made in eight states by the United States Bureau of Public Roads shows that motor buses are providing public transportation service over 5000 miles of route in territories which have no rail communication.

C. J. Randall of 88 North Terrace St., is secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Motor Bus Owners Association.

MANY PEOPLE ENJOY GLADIOLI

Blossoms at Triangle Farms Just Coming Into Bloom.

Many Columbus people attended the opening of the gladioli season and display at the Triangle Farms, two miles south of Circleville, Sunday, and enjoyed the beauty of these flowers which are just coming into bloom.

This is said to be the largest farm devoted to the growing and development of the gladiolus in the world, there being more than 10,000,000 bulbs planted in the one field.

The first of these flowers are just coming into bloom, and in order to care for the crowds a reception committee of 20 Circleville young women welcomed the visitors. The new location of Triangle Farms is on State Route No. 4, or straight through from Columbus, two miles south of Circleville.

Each season thousand of people visit these farms to view the display.

State Fair Prizes Are Restored

Prizes amounting to $1260 for garden and flour exhibits by city school boys and girls have been restored by Governor A. V. Donahey through State Director of Agriculture Charles V. Truax to the Ohio State fair list of awards for 1926, upon the appeal of the schools committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and in recognition of their value in the promotion of health and summer activities among the boys and girls living in the cities.

Columbus public schools spend approximately $3000 annually to further the cultivation of gardens by pupils.

Children living in cities of 5000 population or more now will again be able to compete for state fair prizes just as children from the farms of the state.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

"That parcel must be slippery," laughed Ralph. "If you had not been so quick to recover it yourself, I would think you had dropped it purposely. But come, we must hurry," and he fairly shoved her into his roadster.

She slyly slipped the letter into her handbag, as she wanted no one to know it was in her possession. Ralph was the young man who had been the subject of the little conversation which Marjorie had overheard in the auditorium at Stanton University. The Dalton's were fairly wealthy, being the owners of a house that had formerly been the governor's mansion, and Mr. Dalton, Ralph's father, was president of the Union Savings and Trust Company at Stanton.

As Ralph's machine slowed down near the Bartlett residence, he ventured to ask Ellen if she would like to take a drive with him the coming Sunday afternoon. She promised that she would, stepped from his car, thanked him for bringing her home, and was soon apparently enjoying her evening meal. She kept the letter on her person all evening, not even mentioning the incident to her parents.

Upon retiring for the night, she placed the letter under her pillow, and after making sure that there were matches on the little mantel, she snapped off the light, and tried to go to sleep but all in vain. In the middle of the night, she quietly slipped out of bed, made sure everyone was sound asleep, and that the shades in her room were tightly drawn. Then she opened the letter. Mr. Middleton had evidently typed it himself, as she had never seen it before. She lit a match to a candle, and held the candle near enough to the sheet of paper to warm it without catching fire to it. The part underscored with invisible ink could then be read. The entire letter read as follows:

Mr. Fred Zimmer,
New York, N. Y.
Dear Sir:

Your letter making inquiry about our toys received. One of the men at our factory has recently invented an unbreakable toy made of steel, which he has sold to our company. It is the type of toy that will keep children amused for hours at a time. If you want to "strike it lucky" send us your order for this toy tomorrow, a detailed description of which I am sending you in circular.

By searching the world over for a novel toy, you could not beat this offer. Referring to the other matter, any plans you want to adopt will be satisfactory with us.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Mr. G. E. Middleton.

"What steel company? What plans," Ellen wondered. Why should Mr. Middleton be instigating strikes, as was evident from his message. What should she do? Keep the letter in her possession? Should she hide it some place; or turn it over to the authorities? Action must not be delayed, but what to do! She finally decided to tell her father about the incident, and ask his advice. She unlocked a chest in her bedroom, and hid the letter under the paper covering the bottom of the chest, intending to speak to her father in the morning about the matter.

When she awoke the next morning, she learned that her father had left the house a half-hour before, and that he would not return until late that evening. Ellen was very much disappointed, as she had great faith in her father's judgement, and felt sure he would be able to give her some good advice. Now she must act according to her own judgement, and do it quickly. The message said that the men at some steel company were to strike today. Evidently, the plans Mr. Middleton was searching for were in possession of this steel company. Her first duty, she reasoned, was to learn which steel company the note referred to. It was now ten minutes of nine. She never could reach the office on time this morning. Her mother and sisters had already left the house for a little morning walk. Ellen went to the phone about twenty minutes later, and changing her voice, called Mr. Middleton to inform him that Miss Bartlett was not well, and would not be able to come to the office that day.

Then she went to the attic, and found some old clothes, which her mother had cast aside. These she hastily put on, in addition to an old pair of spectacles. No one, not even Ralph, would have recognized Ellen in that attire. She went to the Grant Building, and walked along with a queer little limp on the sidewalk outside the entrance. She rightly guessed that if Mr. Middleton were searching for plans at this steel company mentioned in his message, he would be likely to do his work while the commotion caused by the strikers "walking out" would be at its height. Her plan was to watch for Mr. Middleton to leave the Grant Building, if it took all day, and then, if possible, to follow him to his destination. She did not have long to wait. Mr. Middleton passed through the door of the Grant Building and walked toward the Interurban Terminal Building. As he asked the ticket agent for a ticket to a little suburban town, the "old lady" seated near the agent's window heard every word he said, but pretended to be reading a newspaper, apparently experiencing great difficulty in the attempt. She heard the man at the window tell Mr. Middleton that the car would leave the station in eight minutes. Ellen also, purchased a ticket which would enable her to follow Mr. Middleton. After boarding the car, Mr. Middleton went directly to the smoking room, and Ellen seated herself near enough to the door to enable her to watch his movements. She carried the mysterious message on her person.

Mr. Middleton left the car at the next station, although the ticket he purchased would have taken him further. Ellen also, picked up her bag, in which she had placed a few things to give it weight in case someone should offer to carry it for her. A crowd of picnicers left the car at the same station, and Ellen thought her movements would be unnoticed, but was mistaken.

"Here mother," the conductor called out, as he assisted her down the steps, "this isn't your stop. We have two more stops to make before reaching Hanly."

"Thank you, my boy," Ellen said, making her voice sound as weak as possible. "I have changed my mind about going to Hanly." In her haste to get away from the car and follow Mr. Middleton, who was now entering the station, she almost forgot to assume the little limp which was a part of her disguise. The conductor boarded the car, and rang the bell for the motorman to start, muttering something to himself about "wimmen bein' kinda queer."

Ellen entered the station, and as she limped toward the Ladies' Rest Room, she noticed Mr. Middleton glance at his watch, comparing it with the time indicated by the clock on the wall. Then he lit a cigar and picked up a paper. Evidently he had plenty of time. As the little rest room was empty, Ellen could watch him through the keyhole, without her movement being observed. At eleven o'clock Mr. Middleton abruptly left the depot, crossed the car tracks, and continued on foot along a country road, the greater part of the little town being on the other side of the tracks. Ellen followed him, dodging behind a tree when he chanced to look back, which happened only twice. Evidently his suspicions were not aroused. When Ellen left the station, she could see a group of buildings of different descriptions about a half-mile ahead of her, which she supposed was Mr. Middleton's destination. As she continued to follow her employer, and neared the buildings, she could see the words on the side of the nearest building, "North American Steel Works."

R. H. Dines Wins Suit Against Election Board as Candidate for Coroner.

R. H. Dines, 145 S. Harris Ave., won his suit last Friday, instituted against the county board of election, to compel them to place his name on the Democratic primary ticket, as a candidate for nomination for coroner of Franklin county.

Acting Judge William F. Duncan of Findlay, Ohio, issued a writ of mandamus late Friday requiring the Board of Elections to place his name on the ballot.

The statue requiring each county to have a coroner is of a general nature and should have uniform operation thruout the state, Duncan decided. The Legislature has no right to say that a candidate in one part of the state shall have certain qualifications not required in another part of the state, he ruled.

"FOR FREEDOM"

As she had surmised, Mr. Middleton did not use the front entrance but stealthily crept along the side fence, which he climbed over, immediately dodging ground buildings until she lost sight of him from the road. Ellen went directly to the entrance, passed through the gate, and entered the door of the main office. She asked to see the president of the firm, but was informed that that gentleman was away on business.

"His son," the office boy informed her, "is in his private office, but he is very busy, and cannot see anyone today."

"But I must see him," Ellen insisted. "I have something very important to say to him, and it is necessary that I speak to him immediately."

"Sorry, lady; orders is orders, you know."

Ellen was determined that she should succeed with her undertaking, after going this far. Deliberately walking past the bewildered office boy, she went toward the door marked "George Morin, jr., private." It was unlocked. She entered the private office and closed the door after her. Mr. Morin, jr. looked up with a scowl, but was to well-bred to be rude to an elderly lady, so he kindly offered her a chair, and waited for her to state the object of her visit. Ellen glanced at the clock. It lacked three minutes of being half-past eleven. She guessed that it had been Mr. Middleton's aim to reach this steel plant by eleven-thirty.

Ellen proceeded at once with her story.

"Mr. Morin," she said in a low tone, which he alone could hear. "Are you acquainted with a man by the name of Middleton?"

She looked searchingly at the junior partner of the firm. She knew that the offender in such a case may have enough at stake to bribe a member of the company he is working against, in order to obtain the desired results. She could see that Mr. Morin spoke the truth when he replied that he did not know any such person.

She handed him the letter Mr. Middleton had written the day before, and requested him to read it. Wondering what the old lady had on her mind, young Morin took the letter from the envelope, and unfolded it. Then he read it.

"But what has this to do with our business?" he questioned, not particularly noticing the words underlined.

"Read the underscored words, and see if you can guess what it means," Ellen advised.

He then read: "Men at steel company will strike tomorrow. Am searching for the plans you want."

He looked at the date of the letter, and handed it back to her.

"I believe you have made a mistake, madam, though I thank you for the trouble you have taken in our behalf. A strike is not imminent at this factory. Our men seem to be well satisfied."

"Mr. Morin, please listen to the rest of my story. I am not insane, as you may believe me to be, neither am I an elderly lady. I dressed as one for this occasion. Mr. Middleton, the author of this message, is my employer, I believe he is working for foreign interests. Yesterday evening, he accidently dropped this letter on the sidewalk, and I picked it up. I am his stenographer, and have learned that he sends messages by underscoring words in a letter written on another subject, with invisible ink, the words underlined, only, being important to the receiver of the message. Last night, at home, I held this letter near the flame of a burning candle, which made the lines visible. To be brief, I followed Mr. Middleton to this factory a few minutes ago. He did not enter like a gentleman, but crept along the fence, climbing over it, where a building shadowed his movements. He went around the corner of the building, and then I lost sight of him."

George Morin jumped up from his chair as Ellen finished her story, and as is the habit with business men, paced up and down the room with his eyes glued to the floor, as though he expected to find an answer to his problems written there some place.

A slight noise in the adjoining room caught Ellen's attention, but Morin did not notice it. A few seconds later, the noise was repeated, it sounded like a slight squeak caused by the opening or closing of a desk drawer. Ellen motioned to Morin, and in a low whisper asked him if there was anyone in the room next to his office, indicating with her hand the direction from which she had heard the suspicious noises. Morin answered that no one had a right to be there, with the exception of himself and his father. Ellen told him she believed someone was in there, giving him her reason for so thinking. He felt inclined to laugh at her fears, but promised to take a look at the interior of the room, to convince himself that she was mistaken.

He went out into the hall, and was nearing the door to the next room when the sound of the whistle blowing three times in close succession reached his ears. He glanced at his watch. It was only 11:40, although the regular time for the signal for dinner hour was 12:00. The message he had read a few minutes previous had seemed like fiction then; now it was a grave reality. He suddenly recalled why he was standing in the hall, and before leaving the office building to see if his men were really striking, he decided to take a look at the interior of the room where he kept an old desk filled with papers, some of minor importance, and others of greater value. It suddenly occurred to him that he had not seen the key to this desk for several days. He stooped down to look through the keyhole; and one look was enough to convince him that the woman or girl, whoever she was, in his private office, had done him a great service. Now it was up to him to thwart the conspirator's plans. He hastily re-entered his office, and returned to the hall with a revolver in his hand, and Ellen following to help in any way necessary. To their delight, the door was unlocked.

Ellen remained in the hall, but Morin, after quickly opening the door, lost no time in requesting Mr. Middleton to put up his hands, and Middleton, not thinking it wise to argue the question, did as he was told to do.

"Now, I want to know the object of your visit here," Morin said sharply. "Tell me the whole story, or your soul leaves your body." With his free hand, the young man pointed significantly to the weapon in his right hand.

It took little of such persuasion to make Middleton confess the entire plot. They learned that the man had been ordered by a higher authority to search for certain plans, which someone had reported were being completed by a member of the Northern American Steel Works for a new kind of tank to be used on the battlefields in Europe by the French and British.

"And did you find what you were looking for?" young Morin sneeringly asked.

"No," was the crestfallen reply.

"And you never will. I gave up the idea some time ago, as such work is out of my line. Now, another thing, what was the meaning of that whistle at 11:45? Are you in the business of instigating strikes? If so, what is your reason?"

"I received orders from headquarters to hinder the manufacture of steel in this part of the country, or any article of manufacture which will aid the allies and hinder the German cause."

Meanwhile, the office boy called an officer, and Ellen's former employer was taken to the state penitentiary, where he was held until the necessary steps could be taken for his deportation to Germany. The next morning, the strikers, after reading an account of the affair in the papers, were back on duty, cheerfully going about doing their allotted tasks.

Ellen Bartlett was just as cheerfully contemplating a month of vacation before time to take a teachers' examination the week before the school term opened. As Mr. Middleton skillfully withheld the names of the others working for the foreign interests, no other arrests were made at that time.

Chapter VI.

Richard Schreibner and his father were comfortably situated in the little frame house which the elder man and his associates had purchased. Richard observed his father's movements, but time went on, and nothing out of the ordinary occurred, while Richard was present. A large part of the young man's time was spent at the home of the Duncan's. Every evening, he donned his best suit, and took great pains to properly adjust his collar and tie. The druggist at Weston ordered larger quantities of hair tonic, and a greater supply of fancy candies.

Every evening, the young man's black oxfords were given a few extra swings of the shoe brush, as compared with the previous evening. On this particular night, Mr. Schreibner entered his son's room as the latter was giving his "kicks" the usual attention.

"Vot for iss all dis racket. Gonna use dem boots for a lookin' glass, hey? Ven I vos a poy, I had better sence mit dan do vaste so mooch energhy for noddings. Don dry make yer dad tink yer goin' callin' on a mon. I know it's a pig fib."

"Well, dad, you see it's this way. I am going to see a young man, but in case his sister is accidently at home this evening, I do not want her to take me for a hayseed."

"A vot? Say, my son, if you tink I'm gonna learn to speak Enklish, youse crazy. 'Hayseed' is dot Enklish too?" The old man looked bewildered [illegible] to leave the room.

"That is just English slang dad, you don't have to learn that."

"Vell I hope not," was the reply.

THIEVES TACKLE WRONG JOB

Two Men Placed Under Arrest When They Attempt to Steal Policeman's Tire.

Picking the wrong auto from which to steal a tire, early last Friday morning, landed two young men in the city prison.

Policeman H. E. Wilson, 180 S. Ogden Ave., returned home from duty about 2 o'clock Friday morning and parked his car in front of his home. A few minutes after he retired he heard a noise in front of his house and from a window saw two men taking a spare tire from the rear of his machine. Hastily donning his trousers, Wilson ran out and when they drove off, leaped into his car and pursued them, capturing them at Wheatland and Broad St.

They gave their names as Jake Henry, 27, of 2520 Grace St., and Harry Gray, 18, of 329 Midland Ave. Later they confessed to Acting Chief Dyer that they had also taken a tire from an auto on Oakley Ave., near Broad St. They were charged with petit larceny.

TENNIS MATCHES AT GLENWOOD

Baseball Teams Make Good Showing—Enthusiasm Over Boat Building.

Elimination tennis matches have been in order daily at Glenwood park to determine the player that meets Carl Worthwein, famous Ohio State net star. Mr. Wirthwein, whose brother is the tennis coach at O. S. U., is also one of the best players ever developed in Columbus and his playing ability assures a great deal of interest when he appears at Glenwood courts today, Thursday, at 6 p. m. The leading Glenwood man will be announced today just before the game.

Both the 12 and 16-year-old boys' baseball teams at Glenwood are sailing along undefeated in their respective class. The 12-year-old team, led by their fighting captain and shortstop, Homer Patzer, has not only defeated West Side teams, but they journeyed to the North End last week and trimmed Como playgrounds 20 to 5. The Glenwood boys were not only happy over their victory, but also over the good time and spirit Como showed them. The North End team showed they were in the front ranks when good sportsmanship is considered. After all, that is the finest trait the playgrounds develop. The Glenwood boys congratulate Como on their spirit.

Much interest and enthusiasm in boat building was aroused at the Glenwood wading pool this week when Mr. Grossman, local steamship agent, provided the supervisors with several dozen pamphlets that described and showed many different kinds and sizes of boats. Many of the younger boys have spent their leisure moments this week designing and building small boats. One boy, Ralph Smith, 275 Columbian Ave., went even further and built a navy sea plane, which surely is a very good model. The boats will be on exhibition at the wading pool Friday between 3 and 4 p. m. Judges appointed by the playground supervisors will decide which is the best boat.

POWELL AVE. PAVING LET

Service Director Duffy, Tuesday, awarded the contract for paving Powell avenue from Broad street to Olive street to the Franklin Asphalt Paving Co. on a bid of $10,690.

Five other contracts for paving streets in other parts of the city were awarded at the same time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Swigert and family, 109 N. Ogden Ave., spent last week at the Lancaster Camp Grounds.

The annual reunion and basket picnic of the Brankett and McKinney families will be held on Sunday, August 1, at Glenwood park.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Sullivan (Laura Young) spent the week of July 10th at Estella Cottage, Buckeye Lake. They had as their guests Misses Martha and Wilma Sullivan and Mr. Ray Sullivan, sisters and brother of Mr. Sullivan.

After a visit with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. George Bernhard, 182 Westgate Ave., Dr. John J. Bernhard has returned to his home in Allentown, Pennsylvania. During August, Rev. and Mrs. Bernhard will visit their sons in Allentown and Pittsburgh. Before returning to Columbus they will go to Nunda, N. Y., where Rev. Bernhard formerly held a pastorate.

RAMBLERS LOSE TO Y. M. H. A.

Frederick, Rambler Pitcher, Strikes Out 11 Men in Five-Inning Game.

The Hilltop boys lost their third game in the 18-year-old league Monday, when the hits were few and far between. Frederick, Rambler pitcher, held the opponents to one scratch hit in the fifth inning and pitched air tight ball for the entire five innings.

A walk, coupled with an error, scored a run in the second, while an error allowed a man to reach first, who later scored on a muffed fly in the fourth. Bermen got the only hit for the Jewish lads in the fifth and scored on a low throw to third by Larkin.

The Hilltoppers only scored two bingles, one a screeching single by Larkin, and the other a clean bunt by McCrea. W. Godman struck out eight men, whiffing three Ramblers twice for six of the put outs.

Come out next Monday and see the boys in action at the hospital grounds. Game called at 6 p. m.

Score by innings:							R.	H.	E.
Y. M. H. A.	0	1	0	1	1	—	3	1	1

BIG OX ROAST AUGUST 25TH

10,000 People Expected to Be Guests of Hilltop Business Men's Association.

Would you enjoy an ox roast, dancing and all the other good times that go with it?

Well, that is just the opportunity you will have Wednesday, Aug. 25, when the Hilltop Business Men's Association will put on a free ox roast in the Broadview addition at Sullivant avenue and Binns boulevard.

The picnic committee, headed by the old standby, Fred Sulsberger, has been working on this feature for several months and it is bound to be a big success. In fact, Fred says it will be the biggest thing ever put on on the Hilltop.

Plans are being made to handle an immense crowd—not less than 10,000 people are expected to attend, and the committee are making preparations to feed that many with "ox," for which there will be no charge.

However, the ox roast is not the only feature of the afternoon and evening. Street dancing may be indulged in by any who wish, music for which will be furnished by a band.

Games, contests, etc., will be provided for all who wish to indulge.

Posters have been printed and will be put up throughout the country within the next few days and it is expected people will be there from all sections of the county.

Don't forget the date, August 25, and come prepared to have a good time.

REPORT ON POORFARMS

Results of Investigation Shows Deplorable Conditions in Homes for Needy.

Ohio, the mother of presidents, is also the mother of paupers, and no very tender mother, according to a new book, "The American Poorfarm and Its Inmates," just published by Harry C. Evans. Sixteen fraternal societies, including the American Insurance Union of Columbus, sponsored the investigation.

Three-fourths of the 89 poorfarms in the state are in "shameful condition, unsanitary and filthy, with an environment that contributes to disease and immorality. Straw ticks, unclean bedding, poor lighting and heating, vermin, a contaminated water supply, and no sewerage are the rule rather than the exception. Seventy-five per cent of the inmates are feebleminded or insane. The remaining 25 per cent, who are intelligent, are compelled to live with these mental defectives, using the same living rooms, dining rooms, bedrooms and bath rooms," the report declares.

Similar conditions prevail in other states, the investigators say. The entire system, according to Evans and his collaborators, is "a disgrace to a modern civilization."

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Walling of Detroit, national agent of the A. I. U., made an investigation of Ohio poorfarms last year. This report is included in the book.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Todd and daughter Miss Rhea, of Salem, Ohio, spent Sunday with friends on the Hilltop.

Record advertising columns are becoming more and more popular with both the buyer and advertiser, bringing them together on common grounds.

This week's ads tell of many items of interest and at money-saving prices. A big dress sale starts Friday at one Hilltop store, another calls attention to piece goods, hosiery and shoes; several tell of bargains in tires and accessories for the auto; the coal dealers have a message for the householder; you can find where you can get your roof or furnace repaired; beauty shops tell of their specials for the ladies; 1000 old watches are wanted, and one firm says "We practice what we preach. When in need of garage service, dry cleaning or many other services consult Record ads. Many grocery specials will appeal to you; and you can always find the theater program for the following week.

You have read this little talk. Now read the ads and then go shopping.

Mr. Heath was hauling baled hay. As the wagon entered the barn he stepped and fell backward to the ground, five feet below, striking with his shoulders on the edge of the barn floor. A bale of hay also fell on him. Besides the injuries to his back, Mr. Heath suffered a fracture of several ribs. He is paralyzed from the hips down.

Dr. Gordon was formerly president of Tulsa college, and is now president emeritus of that institution.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOOTS BROTHER

Bullet Enter's Wesley Fenton's Jaw When Brother Pulls Revolver Trigger.

Wesley Fenton, aged 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fenton, 245 Cypress Ave., was accidentally shot in the jaw Tuesday by his brother Arthur, aged 8.

The brothers were playing in the house with a revolver, which belonged to their father, when Arthur, pointing the gun at his brother, pulled the trigger. The bullet entered Wesley's left jaw and came out the left side of his neck. He was taken to White Cross hospital and later to his home.

When we seek happiness at any cost, we seldom find it. When we forget happiness in the higher pursuit of usefulness, it comes and abides at our heartstones.

RESTRICTED USE OF PLAYGROUNDS

Youths More than 16 Years Old Permitted Only After 6 o'Clock.

Recreation Director A. W. Raymond announced Tuesday that due to crowded conditions of all municipal playgrounds throughout the city, restriction of the use of these facilities would be prohibited to persons more than 16 years of age until after 6 o'clock in the evening, after Tuesday evening.

Although the city has 22 such recreation centers, they are proving so popular with children that it is deemed imperative to restrict their use and Raymond has worked out a special program for adults in the evenings.

In order to make the ruling effective, Raymond said that Chief of Police Harry E. French has agreed to cooperate by having members of his department to arrest loitering or using the playgrounds during the day who are not under the specified age limit.

WHAT HAWTHORNE SAW

How much can you see in people? Nathaniel Hawthorne, the New England author, could see a great deal in an old man who sold gingerbread and apples at a railroad station. Hawthorne says that he studied the old apple dealer until he became a citizen of his inner world.

The author watched him arranging his apples in a pyramid. Sometimes he alters them, thinking that a great deal depended on their being placed exactly thus and so. "Then for a moment he gazes out of the window and then he shivers quietly, folds his arms across his breast, as if to draw himself closer within himself, and thus keep a flicker of warmth in his lonesome heart.

"Now he turns again to his merchandise of cakes, apples, and candy, and discovers that this cake or that apple or yonder stick of red-and-white candy has somehow got out of its proper position. And is there not a walnut kernel too many or too few in one of those small tin measures?" Then in a minute or two he sets things right.

As the author thinks of him he feels a touch of pity for the miserable old fellow. Hawthorne wonders if the apple dealer ever had a son, or if he had, if he lost him. How he might have depended on his son, if he had lived!

At last Howthorne says farewell to his old friend, although the old man has little suspected that a student of human life has made his character the theme of a thoughtful hour.

HARRISBURG AND ITS MULBERRY TREE

Harrisburg, the capital of the state of Pennsylvania, is named for two men, both of whom were called John Harris.

The first of these men came from England. He had lived in Chester and Lancaster counties before he finally settled near the present capital of Pennsylvania. He was the first English trader in this section, says Anne Hollingsworth Wharton in "In Old Pennsylvania Towns." He also established a ferry which was so well known that letters from abroad addressed to "John Harris, Harris' Ferry, North America," reached him without any trouble.

John Harris had a trading post surrounded by a number of sheds in which were stored the skins which he had obtained from the Indians. His house was a substantial building surrounded by a stockade as a means of protection against the Indians.

The gate of this stockade was usually guarded by a man who was especially appointed for this task. One night, however, as the Harrises were having dinner in company with the guard, the gate was left open by some mistake. Suddenly a gunshot rang out on the quiet evening air, and in a flash everyone realized that Indians were near. Mrs. Harris, with great presence of mind, quickly extinguished the lights, and the Indians, thinking perhaps that no one was there, left the family unmolested.

For the most part John Harris lived on very good terms with the surrounding Indians. However, there is a tradition concerning one of his experiences with a band of roving Indians from the Carolinas. These savages had been drinking too much rum, but they wanted to buy more. When Mr. Harris refused to sell it to them they became very angry and seizing him, bound him to a near-by mulberry tree. Then they attacked his store, waiting to burn him until they had secured the rum they wanted. However, some friendly Indians arrived upon the scene just in time, and they rescued Mr. Harris from his precarious position. For many years the stump of the mulberry tree stood, a memorial of the exciting and nearly tragic event. —Forward.

FOR FREEDOM
A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

A half-hour later found young Richard knocking at the door of the Duncan home; and it was Marjorie, not Howard, who admitted him; Marjorie, and not Howard, who sat beside him on the rustic seat in the little flower garden listening to words bordering on the subject of love. Howard was seated before his writing desk beside a window overlooking the garden, and by the aid of the beautiful moonlight, could see a wonderful picture, and knew that he could no longer claim the privilege of being "Marjorie's best beau."

The young people arose from the seat, and walked slowly toward the house. Precious moments like these come once in a lifetime. Lovers have quarrelled and found mates elsewhere, but the memory of a first love can never die. A second love may contain a certain depth of affection, but the tender emotion connected with the first love is usually absent in the second.

To these young lovers, although their love remained unspoken, standing at the great gateway of life, the world looked very rosy; living seemed very sweet. Both could say that this was their first love. (Marjorie had recently learned the difference between brotherly regard and a lover's affection).

They, half-regretfully entered the house, and joined the family in the parlor. Music constituted their enjoyment for the remainder of the evening. At ten o'clock promptly, Richard took his leave, giving Marjorie's hand a meaning pressure as he bade her a tender goodnight.

As he walked home along the lonely country road, he hummed softly to himself their favorite song "At Dawning." After he had retired for he night, he found it impossible to sleep. All he could think of was Marjorie. Then he began to think seriously of the situation. How could he speak to Marjorie on the subject nearest his heart when his financial circumstances would not permit him to support a wife? Since he had begun his high school education, his summer vacations had been spent at first, behind a counter in a grocery store and later, in a drug store. Every summer, he had been able to place a small amount of savings in the bank, but the entire amount to his credit, at the present time, was not enough to start married life with. He had received his diploma from Stanton University, which certified that he was a graduate pharmacist. His experience in the drug store where he had spent his summer vacations and spare time during the school term was sufficient to give him a start in business; but he would need at least two thousand dollars, in addition to his savings, to start himself in business.

The present proprietor of the only drug store in Weston was considering the sale of his business, as he "was getting up in years," and was willing to turn over his affairs to younger hands. For some reason, Richard felt that he could not conscientiously borrow money from his father; but to whom should he go?

He wondered if he could borrow the sufficient amount from his college friend, Ralph Dalton's father, and finally decided to go to the city before many days passed to see. If he wanted Marjorie, he must work for her, his reason told him. The next morning, while preparing a breakfast of bacon and eggs, a sudden exclamation from his father who was reading a German newspaper from Stanton, attracted his attention. He went to the living room, and stood back of his father's chair to see what news had startled the old gentleman.

The picture of Mr. Middleton was printed on the front page, and underneath, in German, was printed a full account of the episode which had resulted from Ellen's shrewdness.

"And I felt it my duty to warn her against him, when she knew more about the real nature of his business than I," Richard thought. Glad I did not yield to impulse that time."

Aloud he questioned: "Are you acquainted with that man, dad?"

"Vot?"

"Do you know that man?" and he pointed to the picture.

Mr. Schreibner hesitated before replying, and Richard knew his answer would be far from the truth.

"I vunce seen him, but neffer did I talk mit him."

"Why did he visit you at the hotel in Stanton?" Richard asked half-angrily. "And why did he and the man who was with him sneak down the stairway, instead of using the elevator?"

Mr. Schreibner sprang from his chair with a scared look on his face. His anger was at its height.

"So you haf been spying on mee, hey? Vot do you know?"

"I know that if I ever catch any of Middleton's gang hanging around here, the whole bunch of you will soon be keeping Middleton company."—and he went to the kitchen to complete preparations for their morning meal, after which he hastily made preparations for a trip to the city to see if he could obtain a loan, which, with his savings would give him a fair start in business.

Before going to the depot, he went to bid Marjorie "goodbye," for a short time, although he felt as though the time would seem like years. He rapped at the front door of the Duncan residence, but no one replied to admit him, so he walked around the house, through the side yard, toward the flower garden, and finally located Marjorie, who was gathering some choice roses for interior decoration. She was humming a little tune which Richard instantly recognized, it being the same one he had hummed nearly all the way home the previous evening. He made no sound as he stepped across the soft velvety lawn, and was quite near to her before she was aware of his presence, whereupon her song came to an abrupt end, and she made a mighty effort to control her confusion and embarrassment.

"Oh, you frightened me!" she exclaimed breathlessly.

"I am sure I had no such intention. It would be impossible for a foot fall to be noticed on this lawn, and as I do not travel with bells on, you did not hear me until I was very near. I would gladly have made myself invisible until you finished your song, as that tune, with the words it is accompanied by, is a favorite with me, also," and it was impossible for a girl of Marjories intelligence to fail to realize the depth of love and emotion back of this remark.

Then Richard told her that he was going back to the city for a few days but would return late the following Saturday, and would see her Sunday. His quick eye detected the disappointed look, which for a second appeared on Marjorie's face and although it seemed unkind to be glad because a young lady was disappointed, Richard could not help being pleased that she cared that much for his company.

She invited him into the house, but his watch indicated that in ten minutes his train would leave for the city, which he explained to her; and giving her hand an affectionate pressure that had recently become a habit with him, he left the garden and was soon boarding the train bound for Stanton. To his surprise Howard Duncan was in the same coach. He wondered why Marjorie had not told him that her brother was going to the city. Howard explained that it had suddenly become necessary for him to attend to a matter of business at Stanton, and that, as he expected to return the same evening, he did not go home first. It was a rather strange coincidence, but Howard's destination was the same as Richard's, Mr. Dalton's office at the Union Savings and Trust Company. Howard was not seeking to obtain a loan. His business was to settle a dispute between one of his clients and the elder Mr. Dalton.

After an hours ride on the train, they reached the Central Station at Stanton, and first went to a restaurant for lunch, after which they went to the Union Trust Company. As they came within sight of the building, Howard noticed Ralph's machine parked in front of the Bank, with Ellen Bartlett seated beside the driver's place.

"FOR FREEDOM"

Ralph had gone into the building to speak to his father, and was surprised to find his two college friends with their right feet parked on the running board of his car.

"Hello, Ralph, old boy," Richard called out. "Do you allow two old friends the privelege of speaking to your best girl?"

"Certainly, I have more confidence in myself than to refuse you that much," answered the young bank assistant complacently. At present the help given by him to his father consisted mostly in spending some of that gentleman's money for gasoline and auto repairs.)

"Is your father in, Mr. Dalton?" questioned Howard, with particular emphasis on the "Mister."

"Yes, he's in there."

Howard invited Ralph and Miles to visit his home in Weston, as he wanted them, Ellen especially, to meet his sister. They promised to drive out a week from the following Sunday; and as the roadster started down the thoroughfare, Howard and Richard entered the bank, and were shown to Mr. Dalton's office, each taking his turn for a private interview. Howard concluded his business first, and after bidding Richard "goodbye," hastily left the building to catch the afternoon train for Weston.

By first appearances, one would judge Mr. Dalton to be a gruff old man, but those who knew him intimately could say that beneath his mask of gruffness was a certain amount of kindliness that he extended to anyone showing the desire and ability to help themselves. Richard Schreibner "showed the desire and ability," and after making known his wants to Mr. Dalton, and producing the necessary security, he obtained the promise of the desired loan, and immediately communicated by phone with the druggist back in the town called Weston, which Richard thought should have been named Heaven, Paradise, or something like that. The aged pharmacist was glad to make the sale, and promised to come to the city immediately for the transaction which was to take place the following day at the Union Savings and Trust company.

During the remainder of the day and the next morning before time for the train to arrive from Weston, Richard busied himself purchasing some modern equipment for his drug store which he did not complete before time to meet his friend from Weston. The old man had not been to the city for a number of years, and after the transaction for the sale of the stock and transfer of the lease of the building had taken place, Richard kindly volunteered to show him "around the town."

While in Stanton, Richard's curiosity impelled him to visit the office rooms that had formerly been headquarters of the Middleton Toy Manufacturing company. As only a few days had elapsed since Mr. Middleton's arrest, no changes had yet been made. Richard did not enter the suite of office rooms, and as he turned away from the entrance, he caught sight of someone in the rooms. He looked again, and the man who had been with Mr. Middleton the day when Richard overheard the two conversations at the hotel, came toward the hall.

"Beg pardon, sir," said Richard thinking quickly. "Can you direct me to room No. 396?" (There was no such room in the building, and Richard knew it.)

"What number?" the man questioned in understandable English.

"No. 396," Richard repeated.

"Must be out there in the air some place," was the courteous reply.

"What number is this office?" Richard asked.

"I do not know," and apparently, he cared less.

Richard threw his bait.

"Where is Mr. Middleton?"

It was plain that the man did not know; also very evident that the question somewhat disquieted his nerves.

"Who are you?" he asked Richard.

"A descendent of Adam," was the taunting reply.

"I believe you are crazy."

"In that case, two idiots on the same floor is one too many. If you want to locate your friend Middleton, you won't find him standing there. I could tell you where he is, but I do not like to."

More bait.

The man's curiosity was getting the best of him.

"Where is he?"

"If you will tell me where Mr. Schreibner is, and what he is doing, I will give you information about Middleton."

Richard knew that his father did not like Middleton's other assistant, as the old man had the habit of talking to himself when he thought no one was listening; and correctly surmised that this assistant cherished no deep affection for his, Richard's father.

"Old Schreibner owns a house bought with my money down in the back woods some place."

"What is he doing?"

"Doing nothing is his favorite occupation."

"I asked you a question, and I want an answer."

"He is working for Middleton."

"What is he doing?"

"I am not allowed to tell you."

"I'm not allowed to tell you about old Middleton either," Richard replied independently.

After some hesitation, the man said: "He is supposed to be studying wireless telegraphy;" and in the same breath, asked Richard again to tell him where Mr. Middleton could be found.

"At the state penitentiary, sir," Richard replied. "Think you would like to pay him a formal call?"

"I've got a notion to clean up on you right here," the enraged man exclaimed.

"Got a bigger notion not to, haven't you?" Richard did not budge an inch. "I could give the authorities some interesting information about you if I chose to do so."

"I'll get even with you yet, you impertinent young pup;" and the enraged gentleman, if he could be called a gentleman, was soon on his way to the nearest exit of the building.

Richard wondered if the man's statement about his father was true, and mentally decided to find out before many days passed. His principle object in view was to prevent his father from committing further unlawful acts, without the necessity of the law interferring. He felt sure Mr. Schreibner was just a tool in the hands of this gang.

When Richard reached Weston the following evening, he had a great deal of work in store for him. As he left the little railroad station, he glanced at his time-piece. It was ten o'clock, so he went directly to the place circumstances for the present compelled him to call home. When he came within view of the house, he noticed a light in his father's room, on the second floor. The remainder of the house was in darkness. He had not told his father when he would return, and suddenly decided to enter the house noiselessly, thinking he could possibly learn more about his father's plans. Before stepping onto the porch, he took off his shoes, and then carefully opened the front door. Very slowly and carefully he ascended the stairs and peeped into his father's room, but no one was there, although the oil lamp was burning brightly. Richard had never taken more than one look into the room before, but this time, took in every detail of its arrangement. He could hear a faint clicking noise which seemed to come from overhead, as though from the garret; but where was the entrance to this garret? The walls and ceiling of the room were finished with plasterboard, the strips being connected with small strips of wood. Richard stood there looking for a secret panel of some kind, when the clicking overhead ceased, and footsteps were heard overhead. Richard listened for voices, but could hear none. Then, as he chanced to look toward the clothespress door, he saw the knob move.

PLAYGROUND ACTIVITIES

Recreation Ball Leads at McKinley—Tennis Matches at Glenwood.

Last Thursday night saw the tennis [illegible] of this season at Glenwood tennis courts when Carl Wirthwein, Ohio State star, twice city champion and runner-up for state champion, appeared and easily defeated the best West Side playground players, George Walker and Allen Sweeney, 6-2 and 6-1, respectively. After the games Mr. Wirthwein explained and demonstrated some of the fine points of the game and offered suggestions as to how and where to play the ball.

Since Mr. Wirthwein's appearance keen interest has been shown in tennis. This week marks the beginning of the elimination contests for the coming city playground tournament, which is to be held Aug. 23.

The following schedule of games is open to all boys and girls of the West Side and they constitute the preliminary tennis matches prior to the tournament week:

Singles—Boys, 15 years and under, Friday afternoon; boys, 16 years and over, Friday night; girls, 15 years and under, Friday afternoon; girls, 16 years and over, Friday night.

Doubles—Boys, 15 years and under, Monday afternoon; boys, 16 years and over, Monday night; girls, 15 years and under, Monday afternoon; girls, 16 years and over, Monday night; mixed, 15 years and under, Tuesday afternoon; 16 years and over, Tuesday night.

The 12-year-old boys' baseball team at Glenwood is still the cream of the West Side, being undefeated and having a team batting average of about .600. Como playgrounds plays Glenwood Thursday afternoon.

Due to rainy weather and several unusually large picnics the boat exhibition was postponed until Thursday of this week. The name of the best boat builder will be announced in next week's Record.

Preliminary horseshoe matches will also be held as follows: Boys, 15 years and under, Friday afternoon; 16-18 years, Monday afternoon; 18 years and over, Friday night.

Mrs. Walter McBride, 388 Clarendon Ave., and Mrs. Samuel Pool of 2458 West Broad St., who were called to Barnesville, Thursday, July 22, on account of the death of their grandmother, Mrs. Elisa A. The regular meeting of the music box will be held on Monday, Aug. 9, at 7 o'clock at the home of Prof. Walter King, 54 N. Burgess Ave. All members and friends are urged to attend.

RIVOLI TO BE REMODELED

New Front and Balcony to Be Installed—Seating Capacity to Be Increased.

The most extensive remodeling of a business block yet undertaken on the Hilltop will be started within a few weeks when the Rivoli theater will be remodeled to a seating capacity of about 1500. The plans for this work are extensive and call for many improvements and when completed as present plans stand, the building will hardly be recognizable.

To accomplish this work will necessitate the closing of the theater for several weeks.

The building will have an entirely new front, with three arches extending from the street level to the top of the building. The entire front will be constructed of ivory colored terra cotta.

To give a greater seating capacity, a balcony with a seating capacity of several hundred will be installed. To do this will necessitate raising the entire roof about six feet.

When this work is completed the Hilltop will have one of the most up-to-date community theaters in the state.

CO-OPERATION

There is one form of co-operation in which every one can participate. That is, the co-operation necessary to produce a prosperous retail business community.

The merchants co-operate by investing their money in up-to-date merchandise; and by devoting their energy to the problem of supplying the things which they need.

The residents of the community can co-operate by giving their patronage to their home stores whenever such stores carry the things that they want and need. To make a community grow, this co-operation is necessary.

Look through the advertising columns of this issue of the Record. Practically every need may be found on the Hilltop—and at a saving!

MORE GOOD ROADS

The annual improvement of more than 40,000 miles of highways in the United States as a result of combined efforts of federal, state and local agencies will continue during the next few years, in the opinion of Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads. During the past several years the mileage of improvements on our highways has exceeded that figure he said.

Although Mr. MacDonald would not venture a prediction of the probable number of miles to be improved in the United States during the next few years, he expressed the belief that the proven economy of good roads will do much to influence an increase over the programs of preceding years.

A man who believed he knew all about parrots undertook to teach what he thought to be a young, mute bird to say, "Hello!" in one lesson. Going up to the cage, he repeated that word in a clear voice for several minutes, the parrot paying not the least attention. At the final "Hello!" the bird opened one eye, gazed at the man, and snapped out, "Line's busy!"

A HOME for your children to grow up in

EVER since the first baby came you have been talking about building a real home some day. One thing and another has kept you from starting. You will never find a better time than right now. If you will figure up the amount of money you have paid out in rent you will see how much better off you would be today if you had been putting it into a home.

A home is not a speculation. It is an investment in happiness. It is a duty to have one. You can build the kind of home you and your family need.

This is the home-building year all over the country. Consult your dealer about it. He knows building materials and building conditions. His advice will be unselfish, for he wants to give you the kind of service that will make you a business friend of his.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

Richard was no coward, but felt a "spooky" sensation come over him. Who would not, after walking quite a distance along a desolate road, entering a dark, mysterious and lonely house, hearing not a sound except the faint clicking of something in the attic? Richard controlled the impulse to scream, run or do something to break that awful spell; and quietly opened the door to his bedroom, which was on the opposite side of the hall from his father's room, immediately closing it after him. He reached for a revolver in one of the drawers of a dresser, which he thought would come in handy in case of emergency. He did not intend to shoot to kill, but had no scruples against wounding hand or arm, if the occasion should make such an act compulsory. He would not fire at his father under any circumstances, but wanted to be able to protect himself if anyone else were in the house with Mr. Schreibner. In a few seconds, Richard heard the door of the clothes press open, and he detected the sound of footsteps coming toward the hall.

Mr. Schreibner soon came out of the bedroom, carrying the oil lamp in his hand. Following him was a man Richard had never seen before. They were arguing. Richard heard his father say:

"I neffer vill learn how to use dot blame contraption. It's too hardt."

"You have got to learn, or get out of this house, and give me a chance."

"Vot vill I do den?"

"Nothing, that is all you are good for."

"But I vant someting to do."

"Then you will have to learn something about wireless telegraphy."

"I try; I try; but it iss hardt."

Richard could not hear the rest of the conversation, so he quickly went to his trunk, and after a short search found a rope ladder, which he had thrown into the trunk because he thought it was "not worth keeping; but too good to throw away." By its aid, he was soon in the yard outside, and while waiting for his father's midnight caller to leave the premises, hid himself behind a clump of bushes, where he put on his shoes, and did the best he could to remedy his dishevelled appearance. He became tired of waiting for this son of "Kaiser Bill" to take his departure, and decided to walk a short distance along the road, turning back again at the proper time, so that his father's accomplice could say that he passed Richard on the road this particular night, in case his father should guess that Richard knew about the secret entrance to the garret, and had overheard the conversation that took place in the hall and stairway.

The road was on higher ground than the surrounding country, and to reach it from the fields one had to climb a steep embankment. Richard crept along through the fields near the road, looking back continually toward the direction of the house. Before he had walked a quarter of a mile, he could see by the ray of light thrown into the darkness, that the front door had been opened. He hastened forward to a place where the road sloped to the level of the fields, and started back toward the house. When he reached the top of the little hil, he could see his father's guest of the evening advancing along the road toward him. Richard noticed that when the man saw him, he left the road, taking the same route Richard had taken a few minutes before. The young man laughed to himself to think that the older man was dodging him, so that Richard would not know he had been to Mr. Schreibner's house that evening. Then another thought occurred to him. What if the man had left the road for another purpose? Richard had some money and an expensive watch on his person, and did not fancy being held up. He reached to his pocket for his revolver, and not a minute too soon. An ugly figure sprang onto the road in front of him.

"Stick 'em up!" the voice he had listened to more than a half hour before thundered out.

Richard placed his finger on the trigger of his weapon, and did as he was ordered, lifting his right hand holding the revolver slower than the left; and taking his antagonist entirely by surprise fired two shots in quick succession, which wounded the man's right arm, compelling him to drop his gun. The man let out a yell of pain and rage, and rushed past Richard toward the village.

"Wait a minute; not so fast," Richard called out, "or I'll use another bullet."

The man stopped, and Richard gave him a large handkerchief to tie around his wrist where he was wounded.

"Now march along; go where I tell you to," commanded the young man sternly, and within fifteen minutes, another spy was in the hands of the law, Richard having forced him to enter the house where the sheriff lived, explaining to that enforcer of the law that this man had attempted to rob him on the highway, but did not mention the fact that the criminal was also a foreign spy, as this would incriminate his father.

It was very late when Richard finally arrived at his father's house, and the old man had retired. After a great deal of loud rapping, Richard finally gained admittance.

"Vot makes you so late?" Mr. Schreibner inquired.

"I should have been here more than an hour ago, but was held up by a robber, a short distance up the road. I had a fight with him, and finally succeeded in turning him over to the sheriff."

Mr. Schreibner looked uneasy, and Richard could see that the old man had his suspicions about the person's identity. Richard gave a broad yawn.

"I'm sleepy; guess I will retire," he said; and the two men went upstairs together.

The next morning was Sunday, and Richard arose early. It was great to be alive this beautiful morning, with the sun just peeping over the horizon, the birds and bees filling the atmosphere with rural music, and with a new suit of clothes and brand new shoes ready to pay their first call to a charming young lady.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEEMEN

Harvey C. Smith, Republican candidate for state central committeeman in the 12th district, stated this morning, that he was wonderfully encouraged with the reports that are coming to him relative to the campaign for the position he seeks. He referred to the fact that a majority of the members of the Ohio State Central Committee are refusing to run again apparently with the view that a new deal might bring to the Republicans of Ohio new ideas. He stated that he deplored the fact that it had become the style to elect Democratic candidates to the governorship of Ohio and emphasized the fact that he is more than anxious to see the good old state of Ohio again in the Republican columns and to see regular Republicans elected to office including Governorship.

He deplores the idea that Republicans may support a weak candidate in the primary in order to guarantee the election of the Democratic candidate for governor.

He thanked his supporters for the splendid work they are doing in his behalf and encouraged their efforts by saying that he feels absolutely certain of victory at the primaries on the 10th of August.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our thanks to friends and neighbors for their help and sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during the illness and death of our father.

"FOR FREEDOM"

Mr. Schreibner was an early riser, also, and came down stairs shortly after his son had begun to prepare their breakfast.

"Father," Richard said, when they were seated at the table, "I am now the owner of the drug store at Weston, and as this house is too far from my place of business to suit me, I am going to rent a room over the store for myself, and if you want to live with me, I will take the entire second floor."

The old man declined the offer, as he wanted to live in the country for awhile yet. He seemed relieved to learn that Richard was leaving his house as he now knew better than to ask his son to assist him with his unlawful work, and did not want the boy spying on him all the time. Richard noticed the look on his father's face, and understood the cause. He had almost forgotten about the occurrence of the night before. This was a day for complete happiness. He would see Marjorie. It seemed like a year since he left her and went to the city.

Richard was a regular attendant at Sunday school, partly because it had been a habit with him from boyhood, and also for the reason that Marjorie would be there. He was the first to enter the vestibule that beautiful morning late in August. The congregation soon gathered, and the room was soon crowded, but to Richard, the church was empty until Marjorie arrived.

The names of Marjorie Duncan and Richard Schreibner were coupled together every time the Ladies' Aid society held a meeting, when the Missionary club met in the basement once a week, before and after services, in conversations over backyard fences, and at the Women's Sewing club, which assembled twice each month at the home of one of the members to make clothes for the poor families in the neighborhood of Weston. As the mothers and daughters worked with their needles, their thoughts were not of the poor and needy, but of Marjorie and Richard instead. If Mrs. Duncan or her daughter were present, the ladies refrained from gossiping about the affair within hearing distance of either. All they ventured to do was to tease Marjorie as much as prudence dictated was advisable. This Sunday morning, as the Duncan family entered the door all eyes were watching to witness the meeting between her and Richard. One good lady had told her sister that that young Schreibner boy had gone to the city for a few days. The sister immediately phoned her best friend that she had been told that the young man went to the city, and that she "reckoned" he went to buy Marjorie an engagement ring. An hour later the latest receiver of the news stated for a fact that the couple were engaged, and before evening the exact date for the wedding had been announced. No one had intended to tell a falsehood, but where one merely guessed, the listener had taken the entire statement for the absolute truth, and like a snowball rolling down hill, the true statement that Richard Schreibner had gone to Stanton, was changed to the news that the couple were soon to be united in marriage.

One elderly lady, who sat down in the last row of seats near the entrance at the same time the Duncan family entered the vestibule had apparently forgotten the gossipy tendencies of her sex, (and the delight of the male portion of the population to spread news around, whether the tidings be glad or sad) and firmly believing the couple to be engaged, made the attempt to be the first to congratulate them.

Richard Schreibner was also seated near the entrance, and as soon as Marjorie entered, the young man advanced toward her. As he touched her hand, they happened to be standing in the rear aisle near the well-meaning old lady, who turned around in her seat, and spoke to the young couple.

Playground Activities

Glenwood's Girls' baseball team is also up and doing. Since the opening of their league they have had three straight wins. Two home runs featured the opening game, which the Hilltop team won from the girls of Nineteenth and Rich playground.

Goodale at Goodale park was their next adventure. In this game two new players we introduced on the Glenwood team, Dela Means at right field and Lucile Compton at left. Glenwood had no difficulty in defeating Goodale, score, 28 to 5.

The win over Nineteenth and Rich was repeated when that team came to the Hilltop playground Wednesday, July 28. The game went on rapidly into the fourth inning where several errors caused the score to be tied at 8 all. Nor did Glenwood resolve to pull out of this slump until they took their last bats when they raised the score to 15 to 8.

Another interest for girls at Glenwood is the volley ball team which got off to a better start this season by defeating Sunshine park Thursday 15 to 10 and 15 to 12.

McKINLEY

This is the third week of the West Side playground leagues. Much interest is being shown by each of the parks. Wednesday, July 28, Holton defeated McKinley by the score of 23-1. McKinley had only three regulars in the lineup. They were Jack Sherman, Bill Steckman and Freddy Skank, the rest being just pickups. Holton showed superior hitting. Thornton, Slicker and Blum were Holtons best hitters. Had the McKinley boys their regular team the story would have been much different.

Volley ball and baseball teams as well as horseshoe teams are urged to form on each of the playgrounds, for competition with each other in the evenings.

Remember that the playgrounds are there for your use and it is up to everyone to help make his community a leader on the West Side. Don't wait for the supervisor to start something go to him with your ideas and he will help you along.

Miss Grimm of McKinley has a novel scheme for the youngsters. Each day they are graded on cleanliness from 1 to 10. When a child has 60 points she gives a gold star and the one who has the most stars at the close of the playground season will receive a prize.

A good game of recreation ball can be seen any night at McKinley playground corner of Central and McKinley Aves. Come over, bring the kiddies, let them play on the apparatus while you watch the ball game.

BOY KILLED BY R. R. TRAIN

Joseph Meifi Believed to Have Met Death Accidentally Last Thursday Evening.

The body of Joseph Meifi, aged 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meifi, 1089 McKinley Ave., was found dead early last Thursday night by his brother, Dave Meifi, at the foot of an embankment of the New York Central railroad near Rogers avenue.

First reports were to the effect that the boy had been pushed in front of a train by a playmate, but this story apparently is untrue from later developments.

Two conflicting stories were given, Friday, concerning the boy's death. The one version, given by Dave Meifi, who was first to arrive upon the scene, involves John Barker, aged 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Barker, 84 Rogers Ave., and the other was told by friends of the dead boy, corroborated by neighbors of Barker, indicating that the youth was alone when the tragedy occurred.

According to Dave Meifi, who found his brother unconscious at the foot of the embankment, Dave was returning home on Rogers avenue when he saw his brother Joe on the railroad tracks in company with John Barker.

"I saw them crossing tracks and just as they had crossed a passenger train passed and Joe was lying on the ground. He got up and started to run, but fell down and rolled down the bank. When I got to him he was unconscious. Joe had a large spike wound in the back of his head and his legs were bleeding," the dead boy's brother said.

Barker told an entirely different story. "After I had finished carrying my paper route, I went home and lay down for a nap. I slept until supper time, as I usually do, and after supper I remained at home sitting on the front porch. The first I knew of Joe's death was when some boys that I never saw before came by the house and said that a boy had been killed up on the railroad tracks."

Playmates of the dead boy also say that the boy was alone when he was killed.

Besides his parents, the boy is survived by five brothers and two sisters.

Funeral was held in St. John the Baptist church Monday morning.

Naval Reserve Officer Judges Boats

GLENWOOD PLAYGROUND BOAT BUILDERS.

Had the Atlantic fleet steamed out West Broad street and come to anchor in Glenwood playgrounds there would have been no more boats than there were last Thursday afternoon when the boat exhibition and races were held at Glenwood.

Between 25 and 30 youngsters have been designing and building boats for the last two weeks and last Thursday gave them their opportunity to show off their ingenuity.

To add to the interest of the contest, Lieutenant Edward Carsey of the Naval Reserve gratiously detailed Chief Petty Officer Ralph Elliot, who was attached to the navy yard in Philadelphia during the World war, to act as judge.

In the exhibition were speed boats, flat boats, two and three-masted schooners and fishing smacks, Ohio river side wheelers, freighters, Indian canoes and submarines. Some of the boys named their boats after their best girls, some were named after see long cities and states, and others after historical characters.

Chief Quartermaster Elliott awarded first place to Harold Gray, 221 Columbian Ave., whose boat was named "The West Side," and second place to John Latham, 87 Belvidere Ave., whose boat was named "Glenwood Playground." In the speed boat contest Joe Beeson, 116 South Wheatland Ave., took the blue ribbon, leading all others. His boat was named "The Hilltop."

The first prize boat is on display in the window of Cussins & Hartenough's dry goods store.

Second prize boat is on display at Gianatri's grocery store, Broad and Terrace.

Sailor hats were awarded to Gray and Latham, while all other contestants received candy.

Boats were exhibited by the following boys: Harold Gray, John Latham, Joe Beeson, George and Jimmie Welker, Paul and Gerald Echelbarger, Jack Downs, Donald McBride, Gordon Black, Albert Morrow, Donald Vance, Robert Adkins, William De Vaux, Donald Marlow, Earl Pretty, Harold Whittington, Marvin Raburn, Paul Smith, Robert Krause and John Stark.

Dr. Howard Whitehead, who has been out of the city on a vacation, will return home the latter part of this week.

The Hilltop Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St. Mrs. Ella Welch will have charge of the program and Mrs. Richard Case will conduct the business meeting. Election of officers for the coming year will be held.

PAGEANT AT STATE FAIR

"The Wonderer," Musical Extravaganza and Other Features for Columbus Day.

"The Wonderer," a musical extravaganza, will climax Columbus Day at the Ohio State fair Monday, Aug. 30. It is also planned to stage several special events, and special emphasis is placed on the fact that sufficient entertainment will be provided to amuse the "city folks" on that day.

"The Wonderer" will be a pretentious outdoor spectacle. Its cast will include several hundred members. A story starting from Creation and concluding with a picture of "1926" will be unfolded in pantomime, dances, ballets, choruses, canvasses and a blaze of fireworks.

In order properly to present this feature, it has been necessary to install a special lighting equipment and construct enormous switchboards and pits. Rehearsals for the various episodes have been in progress for several weeks.

Accommodations for nearly 12,000 people will be available for the opening performance of "The Wonderer" and every night during fair week.

This evening feature for Columbus day is in addition, of course, to the horse show with its program of concerts, vaudeville and hippodrome acts.

WEST SIDE PLAY-GROUND ACTIVITIES

Sunshine playground put on a novelty stunt last week when they offered a pet show. Each youngster was to bring a pet. A prize was given for the pettiest, the ugliest, the cutest, smallest and largest.

At the show were found dogs, cats, mice, ants, flies, snakes, turtles and grasshoppers.

The McKinley diamonds will be the scene of part of the elimination games for the city title, starting Sept. 1.

GLENWOOD

Thursday (today) Glenwood playground has set aside as "Flower Day." All boys and girls are asked to bring bouquets of flowers to the playground this afternoon. Homes on the Hilltop not having children are asked to send flowers. The girls' sewing class and the 12-year-old boys' baseball team are sponsoring this movement to secure as many flowers as possible. These flowers will be taken to all hospitals west of High street as a token of remembrance from the Glenwood boys and girls that the shut-ins and children in the hospitals who cannot enjoy the sunshine and great out of doors playgrounds are not forgotten. Several of the most popular boys and girls on the playgrounds will be appointed by the supervisors to carry these flowers to Mt. Carmel, White Cross, Radium and New McKinley hospitals.

The preliminary tennis and horseshoe elimination contests to determine the representatives for Glenwood playgrounds in the city-wide playground tournament, Aug. 23, are about completed. If there are still others on the West Side desirous of getting in these matches they should make arrangements with Miss Meier or Mr. Dyer, supervisors at Glenwood, not later than Friday of this week.

BERRY PICKERS' AUTO DITCHED

Mrs. Marie Dawson in Zanesville Hospital—Condition Not Serious.

Mrs. Marie Dawson, Hague Ave. and Hilliards road, suffered bruises about the head and left arm and her husband, John Dawson, suffered slight bruises about the body last Sunday when their automobile was sideswiped into a ditch on the National road, eight miles west of Zanesville, by a motorist whose name was not obtained.

The Dawsons, who had been picking blackberries, were en route home. The unidentified motorist caromed off the side of a Red Star bus and hit the Dawson car, sending it into a ditch. About 25 gallons of blackberries, which the Dawsons had picked during the day, were scattered about the scene of the wreck.

You will notice on page 3 of this issue unprecedented prices on dry goods, ladies' wearing apparel and household goods in Seiller's final clean-up sale of all summer goods. Goods you can use now. Through an oversight one of the best bargains of the sale was left out. The item is crash toweling, on which they have an exceptionally low price.

The Economy Store is putting on some hot weather specials as you will notice in their half-page ad on page 2.

And the Hilltop Furniture Co. is right there with their first "Red Tag" sale on furniture, stoves, etc., at reduced prices for the remainder of the month.

You will get much information from the many other ads carried in most any line you may want—hardware, electrical supplies, optical supplies, jewelry, gifts, novelties, coal, auto supplies and many other lines.

In fact our advertising columns are veritable bee hives filled with "bargain sweets."

BABY SHOW AT PICNIC

Committee in Charge Expect Biggest Time Ever Held on Hilltop.

Here is a sure enough, genuine tip: If you are planning a vacation or a week's trip or anything that will take you away from home, put it off until after Aug. 28, the date of the big Hilltop ox roast and picnic.

This tip was given us by the general committee in charge of the affair, which they say will be the biggest day the Hilltop has ever seen, when thousands of people are expected to come to the picnic grounds at Sullivant and Binns and get a piece of "ox" toasted only as Cap. Fagley, the best roaster of meats in the business, can roast it.

Along with the ox sandwich you will get a glass of lemonade—both are free—and the committee is hoping 10,000 people will be there.

Entertainment, games, etc., have been provided, so that something will be doing all the time during the afternoon and evening.

A Hilltop picnic would not be complete without a baby show, so the committee has provided for this feature. The show, or contest, will be in charge of Hilltop physicians and nurses and each baby examined will be given a complete score card, showing its exact physical condition. This feature will be held in the new residence of Orr & Day on Binns boulevard.

Dancing will be the feature of the evening, music for which will be furnished by a band.

All this will take place at Binns boulevard and Sullivant avenue, Wednesday, Aug. 25.

Fred Suisberger is general chairman of the committee, with C. J. Rief, Ed Dolby, R. O. Harrison, D. O. Sites and C. E. Pepple as lieutenants and a host of others helping.

Unjustly Imprisoned

Lester J. Pearson, 26, of 943 W. Broad St., was released last Friday after spending five days in City prison, a victim of mistaken identity.

Pittsburgh police notified Chief of Detectives Shellenbarger that Pearson was not the man they wanted after they had asked local police to arrest him in connection with an automobile theft.

Pop corn, when placed above intense heat, is transformed from a tiny brown kernel into a puffy white mass. Each little grain is made up of many cells which have walls strong enough to withstand considerable pressure from within. There is some moisture in each of these tiny cells. When that moisture is heated to a temperature which turns the moisture into steam, that expansion causes the walls to break and allow the steam to escape. When the heat is very great all the cells explode at the same time, resulting in the snow-white ball.

One of the most important accessories of the camp equipment is the ax. Its usefulness begins where that of the knife ends. For work too heavy for the knife, use the ax. What has been said about the temper of the knife blade applies equally well to the ax.

The lightest ax is the pocket ax, No. 0, with the hickory handle and a guard folding over the blade. The weight is one pound. While it may be carried in the pocket, the better method is to carry it on the belt in a leather sheath.

"Grand Duchess and the Waiter" at the Rivoli, Aug. 15 and 16.

Balsa wood is the lightest wood known. It is even lighter than cork. It weighs only 7.2 pounds per cubic foot when new. The Balsa tree flourishes in Ecuador, and it is used in the saving equipment. It is said to be as resilient as spruce and pine, but does not chip or split readily, and is difficult to burn.

Keep a bottle of Home Producer's Milk on the ice at all times. Let the children serve it in their playhouse. It is very refreshing these hot days. It is delivered fresh daily. Milk is the national food drink.

Crash Toweling 5c Yd. In Seiller's Sale

The lowest price in years for this fine Barnsley Crash Toweling so widely known for it's good serviceable quality. Only a limited quantity at the price. Not over 10 yards to a customer.—Seiller's Clearance Sale.

A handy adjunct of modern tourist equipment is the gasoline stove, made in two or three-burner types, on which an entire meal can be prepared in the open as quickly and conveniently as over a gas fire at home. These cooking stoves fold into compact cases convenient for an automobile tourist. One advantage is that they burn fuel always at hand in the gas tank of the automobile. The fuel can be siphoned from the tank or drawn off through the carburetor drain cock.

COLUMBUS SHOWS BUILDING GAINS

At the same time that building permits in the 37 principal states showed a decline of 5 per cent from June and over July of last year, Columbus building permits in July showed gains of 23 per cent over last July, and of more than 20 per cent over June, 1926. The figures show that this city is continuing to catch up with its building needs, while the country as a whole is experiencing some decline in building activity at this time of the year.

MOVING NOTICE

SATER CLEANING CO.

I have leased the east room of Dr. Hamblin's new building at 2408 West Broad St., first door west of Seiller's dry goods store. I expect to get in my new location on or near the 15th of August.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank my many customers for their past patronage, and will be thankful to have all come to my new location. With the opening of my new shop I will be able to accommodate all my old customers and a host of new ones in a manner never before possible in my present location.

I have been in the dry cleaning business in my present location for four years, but have been handicapped for room. I expect to open an up-to-the-minute shop and will be able to handle all your needs in cleaning, pressing, repairing and altering of garments. I am a tailor by trade and know when a garment looks right and will not turn it out otherwise.

Thanking you in advance for all favors,

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

"Good morning, Marjorie. Good morning, Richard. What a nice couple you will make! Both of you have made a fine choice, and I hope you will always care for each other like you do now."

Marjorie tried to hide her confusion, but noticing that nearly the entire congregation was looking in her direction, felt her embarrassment increasing instead of decreasing. Howard stifled his desire to laugh loudly, and came to their assistance by ringing the bell three minutes before time, which made it necessary for Marjorie to be on duty at the piano. By this time, the good woman saw that she had made a mistake, and was provoked at herself for making "such a blunder."

Richard neither affirmed or denied the statement, but he saw that to postpone his proposal would possibly cause Marjorie to doubt his intentions, and he decided to seize the first opportunity. He felt sorry for Marjorie when she began the prelude of the wrong hymn, having misunderstood the number the song leader had mentioned, as a result of her confusion.

Richard had promised to dine with the Duncan's that day, for which Marjorie was half glad and half sorry, as she wanted to talk with Richard after their seemingly long seperation; but, also, felt a desire to escape the embarrassment that she could not hide in his presence.

After the morning services were over, Howard escorted his sister up the aisle and out of the building, when she was subjected to the view of the villagers, and skillfully gathered together a few intimate acquaintances, which he kept engaged in conversation until the greater part of the audience had gone home. Then the friends decided it was about time for lunch, and the usual procession headed by Marjorie and Richard wended its way down the avenue.

CHAPTER VII

It was Sunday evening. The flowers in Marjorie's little garden had folded their pedals for the night. A full moon overhead illuminated the earth with its magic light. The stars seemed to twinkle more brightly than ever before. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan, Howard, Marjorie and Richard were engaged in conversation in the living room that was beginning to dwindle. The clock in the parlor indicated that it was eight-thirty. Howard masked a yawn, and said he believed he would go out on the lawn to enjoy the beautiful evening, inviting Marjorie and Richard to come along. Five minutes in the garden convinced Howard that the night would be just as beautiful, or perhaps, more so, to two instead of three, and feeling that his number was three, soon rejoined his parents in the livingroom.

Marjorie made a move to follow her brother, but was detained by Richard, who took both of her hands in his, and forced her to look straight into his eyes. She had avoided him all day, as much as politeness permitted, and the young man was in a quandary as to the correctness of his opinion based on her actions that morning. His hopes increased, however, when Marjorie willingly accompanied her brother and himself to this romantic spot where they had spent so many delightful summer evenings.

"Marjorie," Richard began. "You do not know how much I have missed you these last few days. Those three days seemed like that many months. Have you missed me?" He drew her a little closer to him.

"A little," the girl replied, lowering her eyelids.

"Only a little?" He placed his ear near her lips, and waited for her to speak.

"I missed you—" she hesitated, then added, "very much."

"Do you love me?" he questioned eagerly, "like I love you?"

"Just how much is that?" she asked shyly.

"More than all the world besides. All girls looked alike to me until I met you. Since then everything has been different. I believe it was love at first sight. I want you for my wife; what do you say, little girl? Will you marry me? I love you so much," he added coaxingly.

Marjorie reached for the fountain pen and memoranda pad in his outside coat pocket, freed herself from his arms, and using the trunk of the nearest tree for writing desk, wrote a word of three letters on the first blank sheet of his book, making him remain at a distance until she closed the book. She handed it to him, and made an attempt to run, but he caught her hand and the book at the same time, threw his arms around her, and followed the course usually pursued by lovers. He carefully tore the little sheet of paper from the book, declaring he meant to have it framed.

The lovers soon entered the house, and Richard explained the situation to the rest of the family, who were not at all surprised at the news. Mr. Duncan gave his consent, and Marjorie's mother remarked tearfully that she would miss her daughter immensely, but would not stand in the way of her happiness. Howard was pleased, as he always wished Richard were his brother, and did not object to the suffix of "in-law."

The following day found Richard in charge of the village drug store. The new counters, soda fountain, and large mirrors he had ordered while in Stanton would not arrive until the middle of the week, so he could do nothing except some cleaning up toward improvement. His receipts for the first few days were comparatively small, but he did not become discouraged. The new equipment arrived on Wednesday, and Richard spent nearly the entire night making his store resemble the ones in larger cities. He had moved his personal belongings from the house in the country the forepart of the week, and by this time was comfortably situated in his apartment over the store. The former owner of the business had used the small room at the left of the front entrance for miscellaneous waste material, such as old boxes, etc. Richard removed everything from the room, engaged a workman to tear down the partition, and had it redecorated. In this portion of the building, he placed the large mirrors, some new chairs and tables, causing the "junk" room to be changed to an ice cream parlor, which, though a little small, looked very attractive to the people of Weston, being of sufficient size to accomodate the number of customers in the store at one time.

NATURE STORY
Moving a Beaver Colony.

For many, many years one of the most valuable fur-bearing animals was trapped and hunted. The little animal, called the beaver, was very plentiful until the last twenty-five years, especially in the northern sections of Michigan and Wisconsin. Suddenly beavers became so scarce that the people of these states began to fear that the valuable little animals would be wiped out entirely. So legislation was started to protect the few that remained and to-day it is against the law to trap or to kill the beaver in these states as well as many other states of the Union.

Now Mr. Beaver and all his brothers have been going gayly on under this protection. Working industrially during the late summer and fall months, enlarging their dams, cutting timber to be dragged down and weighted upon the bottom of the ponds for winter food, the beavers have multiplied in various parts of uncultivated country until they have reached a goodly number.

But of late a new trouble has arisen due to the fact that the forest areas are decreasing so rapidly. The beavers are now spoiling many tracts of young forest growth, and last winter pleas were sent to the Wisconsin Conservation Commission to make some plans for saving trees in spite of the law which says that beaver must not be killed. Wisconsin has had an experimental station, as it might be called where beavers which have been trapped in other localities have been brought and allowed to carry on their daily life. When the winter months were over, it was planned to trap the new colony on the Iron river which did so much damage and move it to the experimental station farther north.

A few pairs of beavers, building the dam which is necessary to make their pond deep enough so that the water will not freeze clear to the bottom during the winter months, are capable of flooding a large area of land. In some places floods mean hardship for the farmers, for crops are ruined, and the land is spoiled for planting purposes.

What trapping is done in moving the beavers must be done in the spring months, for the beavers do very little work during the summer, spending the summer days, after the babies have been reared, in vacation trips up creeks and across marshes. Not a beaver will be found at the old home in that time, and the dam with its high, cone-shaped mud huts has a deserted appearance. —Dorothy Woodward in Forward

ALTON PICNIC LAST FRIDAY

Annual Picnic of Protective Association Attracts Hundreds for Day's Enjoyment.

The twenty-third annual picnic of the Franklin Protective Association was held at Alton last Friday, the picnic being an all-day affair. Hundreds of persons gathered during the morning hours, bringing well filled baskets and enjoying a luncheon at the noon hour.

During the afternoon games for young and old were staged. Some $300 in merchandise was distributed. The Dublin band gave a concert starting at 2 o'clock.

An exhibition of farm machinery and demonstrations of various motor driven farm implements commanded much attention.

Candidates for office subject to the primaries next Tuesday, were introduced during the day.

"Grand Duchess and the Waiter" at the Rivoli, Aug. 15 and 16.

CONVICTS ARE GOOD FARMERS

Ohio prisoners are rather good farmers, according to a report brought from Mansfield by members of the board of clemency, which held its monthly meeting at the Ohio boys' reformatory Aug. 3 and 4.

On an 80-acre tract at the reformatory, prisoners raised 1360 bushels of wheat this summer, or an average of 45 bushels to the acre. At the London prison farm, an average yield of 46 bushels was obtained from an 86-acre tract. The average yield per acre in Ohio is about 17 bushels, and everything over 30 bushels to the acre is considered a very good yield.

Be sure to see "Sandy" at the Rivoli, Tuesday, Aug. 17.

PICNIC AND OX ROAST

Next Wednesday Is the Day—Dancing and Amusements for Thousands.

The annual play day of the Hilltop is close at hand, in fact next Wednesday, Aug. 25, is the day of days when all the Hilltop turns out for the Hilltop picnic and ox roast at Sullivant avenue and Binns boulevard. The committee, after untiring work, announces that everything is in readiness for the big event.

Games and amusements in abundance have been provided and there need not be a dull moment for anyone. The games and contests start about 2 o'clock and will last until about 5 or 5:30.

Cap Fagley will have his beef done to a turn by 6 o'clock and will begin serving free sandwiches about this time. Fred Sulzberger says Fagley has no equal when it comes to roasting meats, so here is a chance to make him prove it.

One of the big events that is always looked forward to by the mothers is the baby contest. This feature of the picnic is expected to be bigger than any previous contest held at these picnics, and the accommodations for the child, mother and physicians will be much better than has ever been provided before. The judging will be done in the recently completed residence of Orr & Day on Binns Blvd., which will be equipped with furnishing for the comfort and convenience of all concerned. A score card will be given to each mother as her baby completes its examination.

The baby boy and baby girl showing the best score will each receive a loving cup. the baby boy and baby girl showing the second best scores will each receive a suitable prize, and the boy and girl showing the third best scores will receive honorable mention. All babies up to three years old are eligible to enter the contest.

Dr. Craddock will be in charge of the contest, and assisting him will be Dr. Grace Jordan, Dr. Coatt, Dr. H. D. Straubaugh, Dr. H. Whitehead, Dr. L. D. Wolf and Dr. I. B. Hamblin.

Not the least of the features of the picnic will be the free street dancing in the evening, when those who enjoy this part of the program may dance as much as they wish. The street will be thoroughly lighted and a band will furnish the music.

The committee is expecting this year's picnic and ox roast to surpass any yet held, in both numbers and features and you can help make it so by giving it a boost to your neighbors and friends.

Don't forget Wednesday, Aug. 25.

Beauty abounds everywhere if we but stop long enough to see and study it. Nature in all her splendor is wonderful to behold—the trees, the flowers, the sunsets, the rivers and landscapes, the mountains and all. But with all her beauty nature cannot be compared to the beauty that is revealed by the ideals of truly great souls of growing boys and girls. This was exemplified by the youngsters at Glenwood playgrounds last Thursday when they paused in their play to gather flowers for the shut-ins and children in the four hospitals—White Cross, Mt. Carmel, Radium and New McKinley, all west of High street. Flower Day was sponsored by the sewing class under Miss Moler, and the 12-year-old baseball team under Mr. W. C. Dyer. Miss Helen Hayes, 2057 West Broad St., and Paul Sweeney, 135 Lechner Ave., were the flower carriers to the hospitals. They were selected by the supervisors because of their leadership, popularity and high sense of moral and civic duties on the playgrounds.

The whole Hilltop, in fact the whole city of Columbus, are proud of all these youngsters who so nobly did their good turn for the shut-ins in the hospitals. Letters of cheer and sympathy accompanied each bunch of flowers.

PAGEANT ON RIVER FRONT

Gift Street M. E. Church Will Give Play Under Direction of Pastor.

Bancroft, who spent 15 years as a missionary in India, 200 members of the congregation of Gift Street Methodist church will present the pageant, "The Victory of the Cross," on the river front between Broad and Town streets, on the last Sunday evening of August.

The pageant has three scenes, as follows: Scene 1—The heathen world and the sending of the lights down the river as is done at Muttra, India. Scene 2—America and the sending of messengers with the Gospel of the cruss to the heathen world and the work of winning the world to the cross. Scene 3—The triumph of the cross—the old rugged cross and the nations gathered around it in spectacular array.

John R. Andrus, one of America's multi-millionaires, has announced that forty-five per cent of his fortune will be left to homeless children of Westchester County, New York. Mr. Andrus' great interest in orphans and poor, homeless children has developed out of the sad experience of his wife who came to America from Switzerland when she was very young. Her father died on the voyage over. She and her mother were taken into the home of Mrs. Dyckman, of Yonkers, who later, at the death of the mother, adopted the child. This fortune of Mr. Andrus is being left in trust under a foundation which he has established and named by the reversing of his own name, The Surdna Foundation.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

On the following Saturday, the young pharmacist gave souvenirs to everyone who visited the store that day. Marjorie, accompanied by her brother, was the first to arrive Saturday morning. This had been a long week for Marjorie and Richard, as they had not seen each other since the night of their engagement, Richard being forced to remain on duty very late each evening. "Why had he taken such a course in college?" he asked himself, more than once. It was too confining for a young man who had a girl like Marjorie; but "girls like Marjorie" could not be expected to marry a man who was incapable of making a certain amount of money with which to meet expenses, so Richard stuck to his post. He intended to enjoy one day out of the week, and to try to be contented with working the remaining six days. On Sunday, he opened his store to the public from eight to nine in the morning, and from four to five in the evening, reserving the remainder of the day for two people, Marjorie and himself.

This Sunday was the one on which Ralph and Ellen were expected at the Duncans. During the day Ellen and Marjorie became great friends, and Marjorie finally succeeded in persuading Ellen to stay in Weston for several days. When night came, Richard was determined to have Marjorie to himself for a little while, as they had been within sight of the other young people all day; and he had had no opportunity for giving Marjorie her diamond ring which he had purchased that week. They finally wandered away from the others, and were soon alone in their favorite retreat.

"Do you still love me?" Richard asked.

"You must think me very inconstant to even ask such a question," Marjorie answered.

"I just wanted to hear you say it again. I would never doubt you," he explained. "I have something for you," he added. "See if you can guess what it is. I'll give you three guesses."

"A counterfeit penny, I suppose," was the first guess.

"Come now no sarcasm. I am serious," and his tone implied that he really was deeply in earnest.

"I can't imagine what you have. Please tell me, before I die with curiosity."

He reached his hand in his pocket and pulled out a tiny box, from which sparkled a lovely diamond in beautiful mounting.

"Oh, what a beauty it is!" exclaimed Marjorie appreciatively, as he slipped it on her finger.

"Do you like it, darling? I hope I have pleased you."

"You have, more than I can express," she replied.

"When may I place the next one on your finger, Marjorie? Within six months, I expect to be able to support you nicely. I will be out of debt by that time, and we should be able to live on fifty dollars per week. I cleared that much this week, and my business is likely to increase when I add a line of notions to my stock. What do you say to six months from today?"

"That is too soon, I am afraid, Richard. We are young, you know, and should have a fair start before assuming the responsibilities of married life." She hesitated before going further, then went on, "A year from today will be all right with me."

"That is a long time, dearest, but you are worth while waiting for," he remarked tenderly. "I wish the time were up, or that I had the power to hurry the days along.

"You mustn't say that, Dicky," she said. "The time will come when we would gladly give a million dollars to have these times over again."

"Where do you get your wisdom, little girl?"

"I know mother enjoys talking about her courtship days, and I feel that I will always look back to them, too. Later on, we will have troubles like anyone has at some time or other. Sickness and death comes to all of us, you know."

"Let's not think about that now," he said soothingly. "I hope we may live together many long years just as we have begun. Some married people begin to lack sentiment before they have been married a year, and gossiping to their neighbors about frequent quarrels becomes a favorite pastime. We must never act like that. We have started as lovers, and must continue so through life."

"We should return to the house," Marjorie remarked. "They will think us very rude."

"No doubt they know the symptoms, and are perfectly willing to excuse our evident lack of politeness," Richard said. "Besides, there is something I should have told you before this. Promise you will tell no one."

Marjorie wondered what he was going to say, but felt that whatever it should be would make no difference with her.

Richard went on:

"You know that I am of German descent, that my father was born in Germany; and that lately, the country we love so well, the United States of America, has been on the verge of severing diplomatic relations with Germany, whose military discipline has easily induced some and forced other German citizens to commit grave outrages both on land and sea." He paused, and Marjorie remarked:

"You cannot possibly help your nationality. So long as your sympathies are with the country that is yours by right of birth, I cannot and do not hold a thing against you."

"What I have to say does not directly concern me. I will be as brief as possible," and he told her about the part his father was playing for the benefit of "Fatherland," holding nothing back, but telling all he knew of the affair.

"I do not hold you responsible for his actions," she said, "though I am very sorry that he or anyone else should be engaged in such business. He is your father, and you have done right to avoid exposing him to the law, but you should thwart his plans some way, which I see you are trying to do, and I love you more than ever for it," she added impulsively.

"My little sweetheart! Thanks for being so reasonable."

"No thanks are due me. That is my duty now."

The lovers walked to the house arm in arm, and the minute they entered the living room Ellen noticed Marjorie's engagement ring, and remarked about its beauty. Ralph Dalton put on a comic look.

"Well, what am I supposed to do? Congratulate you or sympathize with you?"

"You can congratulate me, and extend your sympathy to her," Richard answered, "and when your turn comes, I will do the same," which remark silenced the banker's son.

Presently, Ralph decided that it was time to drive back to Stanton, although he regretted that Ellen would not return with him. An hour later found Richard in his room over the store preparing to retire, Ralph driving toward the city, and Marjorie and Ellen making plans for the week, which in after years was always remembered as full of many enjoyable moments in one another's company.

The following Saturday, Ralph came after Ellen, and the two girls regretted the necessity of parting. Ellen was to take a teacher's examination the following week, which ended her summer vacation.

With the purchase of property in Sidney and New Philadelphia, and the option of a tract of land in Chillicothe, each of the 11 field divisions of the state highway department will have individual garage facilities before the coming of winter, George F. Schlesinger, state highway director, said Saturday.

Plans have been completed for garages in Ashland, and an addition is being erected to the garage in Delaware while others in Lima, Toledo, Wauseon, Ravenna, Middletown and Marrietta are completed, and the one in Newark is nearing completion.

A large supply depot, to cost approximately $75,000, is to be erected on the state fair grounds. A paint shop also will be included in the state fair grounds buildings which will be started soon. These garages will be used for the housing of road machinery as well as for overhauling and repairing equipment.

RESIDENTS OF THE HILLTOP

Requested to Decorate and Beautify Homes for State Fair Week.

On August 30th to September 4 Columbus will have the privilege again to have within its city the great "Ohio State Fair."

Very few people realize that this fair is one of the largest State fairs in the world and that some of its stock exhibits the greatest in the world.

The night entertainment entitled, "The Wonderer" is considered the greatest extravaganza of its kind ever to be exhibited. And to think it is to be put on at the "Ohio State Fair."

Through the efforts of the department of agriculture, Mr. Truax, director, the fair this year will be the best ever to be exhibited.

Every city in the United States in which a state or county fair is held make an effort at decoration in different methods to show the visitors that they are welcome. The city of Columbus has never made any effort to do so before and consequently it has acquired the name of a dead city.

The Chamber of Commerce has decided that we shall prove to the visitors this year that we are full of pep, and is sponsoring a movement to dress up our city in the best decoration obtainable. They are asking every business concern, hotel, public building, etc., also every private home having flags, to display them that week. All places of business having display windows, to decorate them in the most attractive manner posible. Also every property owner should do his or her best to make their property look its best. In the business sections they are expecting very beautiful decorations. In the residential districts they expect every home to display the American flag and use whatever decorations may be at hand.

To help out the department of agriculture, has printed a large number of illustrated cards for use in assisting those interested in beautifying their homes. For your convenience Mr. C. F. Bigham, 2714 Sullivant Ave., phone Ra. 0448-J, and C. M. March, 228 N. Parg Ave., Ra. 2307, have a supply and will gladly distribute them to anyone calling for them or calling by phone.

To encourage the residential district to do their best to beautify their respective territory the "Chamber of Commerce" is offering a silver loving cup to the residential district having the most beautiful decorated district, the only requirement being that those wishing to enter the contest must register their respective district with the decoration committee chairman, C. M. Marsh, on or before noon, August 31, stating the location of their territory and giving the boundery lines.

Address your communications to the Chamber of Commerce, Columbus, O., care of C. M. Marsh, chairman of decoration committee.

Last but not least they want everybody that possibly can to attend the State fair on Columbus day, August 30, and stay for the extravaganza in the evening.

Lets one and all make an extra effort to do our best to show the "Chamber of Commerce" that we are with them in beautifying the city, also to show the state fair visitors that we are a wide awake city and that we appreciate having them come to our city.

C. M. Marsh, Chairman.

Reunions

The tenth annual Canter reunion will be held Sunday, Aug. 29, at Woodrow Addition, Harrisburg pike, between Greenlawn cemetery and Stop 2 on the Grove City car line.

The annual reunion of the Dougherty, Keller and Clover families was held today, Aug. 26, in Township hall at Alton.

The Ladies Aid society and Young Married People's Bible class of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will operate a dining concession at the state fair next week.

Music Box members are requested to attend the picnic Friday and bring their parents. For details call Thelma Scribner, Ra. 0686-W.

Miss Ruth Wolfe, daughter of Mrs. Maude Wolfe, 6 Belvidere Ave., and Mr. Raymond Bruce Bidwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Bruce Bidwell, were quietly married Saturday evening, Aug. 21, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. E. E. McFarlane, pastor of Hillcrest Baptist church. Mr. Bidwell and his bride will reside for the present at 20 Eldon Ave.

Miss Frances Jane and Marjorie Smith of 27 S. Ogden Ave., left Sunday morning, Aug. 22, for a two weeks' visit with friends in Chicago and Evanston, Ill.

Glenwood Players Real Contenders

The city playground finals have not as yet been run up to press time, but Glenwood bids fair to be in the running when the final count is taken.

Mr. L. D. Groves of 1960 Floral Ave., brought the city horseshoe honors to Glenwood in the 50 and above class. John Scarrits, in the 16 to 50 class, and Leroy Davis, under 16, were the city victors in their respective classes.

In tennis, Esther Owens, in the senior girls' singles, and Ellison Kauffman, in the senior boys' singles, are still undefeated, which assures them places in the finals.

George McCrae and Francis McCrae drew the toughest opponents in their class and were eliminated only after real battles. The winners in these contests appear to be the class of the city among the juniors.

Mrs. Charles A. Gridley, wife of Attorney C. A. Gridley, of Virginia, Ill., who motored to this city to spend a week with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Kessler, 105 S. Hague Ave., has returned to her home after a very pleasant visit.

E. D. Robinson and family of 33 N. Chase Ave., and L. M. Robinson and family of Morgantown, W. Va., spent Saturday at Buckeye Lake and reported a good times.

The Whitehead and Green families meeting in reunion at "Lykehome," the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Whitehead at Buckeye Lake, decided to hold next year's reunion at the home of Mr. Courson Hamilton near Reynoldsburg. Dr. Howard Whitehead, Mrs. Minnie Whitehead and Mrs. Cora Whitehead were placed on the program committee. The following officers were elected: Mr. Earl Osborn, president; Dr. Howard Whitehead, vice president; Mrs. Cora Whitehead, secretary; and Mrs. Minnie Whitehead, treasurer. The meeting opened and closed with prayer by Mr. M. B. Cooper. Mrs. Minnie Whitehead read a memorial, to the six members of the family association who have passed away within a year, after which Mr. Osborn, the president, made some remarks principally about the old reservoir, the name by which Buckeye Lake was formerly known. The group assembled sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

HOLTON WINS FIELD MEET

Youngsters and Adults Enter the Many Contests With Enthusiasm.

Undimmed by overhanging and threatening skies the four West Side playgrounds held their first combined field meet and carnival at Holton park last Friday. Anyone doubting that enthusiasm would run high should have seen the hundreds of youngsters there "rearing to go" in all events.

On the basis of three points for first place, two points for second and one point for third, Holton park won the meet with 49 points, with McKinley second with 42 points, Sunshine third with 33½ points, and Glenwood fourth with 16½ points.

McKinley grounds, while not winning the meet, took the lion's share of first place winnings, having 11 to her credit, with Holton having 7 and Sunshine 6 respectively. Competition was very keen. Particularly outstanding were the nail driving contest for women, the flag relay for girls, the peanut hunt for the real tiny youngsters and the shoe race for boys. The contests furnished real thrills and fun for everybody.

BOYS TO JUDGE STOCK AT FAIR

Contest Promoted by Department of Education—Garden Premiums Offered

Promoted and fostered by the state department of education, the vocational agriculture boys' stock judging contest at the Ohio State Fair—August 30 to September 4—will offer $1410 for distribution among the juvenile winners, according to Charles V. Truax, director of agriculture.

Prior to 1921, the vocational agriculture boys judged in the same contest with those enrolled in Boys' and Girls club work. Because of the growing interest in these events, it was decided at that time to organize and conduct a separate contest for the vocational boys. Following this separation, the contests have been established definitely as a feature of the state fair.

Ohio boasts of having the largest number of full-time vocational agriculture instructors of any state.

Still another feature provided especially for Ohio youngsters in the City School garden exhibit. Here the boys and girls of the urban centers of the state are given an opportunity to exhibit the products of their gardens and compare vegetables and flowers cultivated by the older and more experienced gardeners of the less thickly popolated sections.

For this competition, State Fair management is offering $1250 in prize money.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

CHAPTER VIII

Richard and Marjorie had been engaged for three months, and during this time, the young man's profits had been steadily increasing from week to week, although calls for autos and cabs were less frequent than during the summer months. He had substituted this condition with a light lunch counter, which fully equalled the profits made in the summer. It was impossible for him to give his customers efficient service during rush hours, so it became necessary for him to employ an assistant for afternoons and evenings.

Now and then he received a visit from his father. The old man never invited the son to come to his house, but the boy nevertheless, went one day, when he knew that the old man would not be at home. He drove to the house in the automobile he had recently purchased. Before he left his room in Weston, he gathered together some miscellaneous articles, which he intended to use to good advantage before the day was over, placing the mysterious package in the back seat of his touring car.

He had resolved to prevent his father from helping the cause of Germany, thereby committing unlawful acts in this country. He had tried persuasion; that had failed; he had tried threats; they likewise had failed. Richard's next move was to so frighten his father that the old man, being very superstitious, would be forced to withdraw from the course he was following.

By means of a skeleton key, Richard entered the house, taking his mysterious bundle with him. He hurried upstairs, and opened the door of his father's clothes press. The inside looked like any other clothes press, clothes hanging on all four sides. The walls and ceiling were not plastered, but were made of wood. After a search of ten minutes, Richard found a small knob attached to the wall in one end of the clothes press, which was concealed under some old clothes. Richard pulled on this knob, and found that the wall at this side was a door, though all four sides of the room looked alike. A short flight of stairs led to the attic, which was finished and plastered.

The first thing Richard did was to put the telegraph instrument out of commission. Then he hastily unwrapped his large bundle, and was soon busy with a hammer driving large staples about three feet apart in a straight line across the ceiling leading from the head of the stairs. He drove two of these staples into each of the side walls parallel with those in the ceiling. He, also, used one at the top of the door leading from the clothes press. To this, he securely tied the end of a rope, running the rest of it through the line of staples in the attic; and to the other end, he fastened a weight, which pulled the rope into its former position when the door was closed. About two feet from the top of the stairway the young man attached several chains about six feet long to the rope stretched across the ceiling. By the aid of some old clothes and a large sheet, he finished making the ghost, which would now appear at the top of the stairway the very second the secret door was opened, as the end of the rope connected to the door would pull the chains covered with the sheet two feet from their former position.

Richard was very careful to avoid leaving any traces that he had been inside of the house. He was satisfied that no one had seen him enter or leave it. His conscience pricked him a little for having played such a prank on his only parent, but he felt that it would be better for the man to be frightened a little now than to allow him to continue with his lawless occupation, aiding a country that was becoming a dangerous enemy to the United States, and be sentenced to a long term of imprisonment as a final result to himself.

The boy knew his father was expected to return home the following evening and he sincerely hoped that the old man would be alone, as other members of this secret alliance were quite likely hardened by past experiences, and would investigate the cause for that hideous looking object at the top of the stairs, and that weird sound of chains dragging along the floor.

The next day, rain poured from morning until evening, leaving the atmosphere very damp, misty, and chilly. October had disappeared around the corner, and November had brought with it much wind, snow, and sleet. The little garden where Marjorie and Richard had spent so many delightful summer evenings looked very desolate these cold November days, and Marjorie and Richard were forced to spend their evenings indoors, except when someone organized a sleighing party, which was never complete unless the two young lovers were present.

On the evening in question, Richard was alone in the store, when the door opened and his father entered.

"I chust come in to get varm," the old man informed his son. "I vill haf to go home kvick."

"My machine is out of order, or I would drive you over. Why don't you stay here tonight?" Richard asked.

"I haf to get home," and the man was soon on his way along the muddy country road.

Richard's statement about his machine being in need of repair was true, or the boy would not have permitted his father to walk two miles in such weather under any avoidable circumstances. After leaving his father's house the previous day, it had been necessary to call a garage man to pull his car back to Weston. The machine was now being taken care of at the garage.

Two hours later, the door to the drug store opened again, and Mr. Schreibner entered, panting for breath.

"Why dad, what is the matter?" questioned Richard innocently. "You seem to have been running. Did you lose something?"

"N-no, I tink not; but I see something. O-oh! It vas awful vot I did see, und dot awful sound!" The old man was trembling from head to foot.

"What did you see? Where at? Tell me about it," Richard urged.

"I see a ghost, yay, a ghost. It come to de top of de stairs, dragging about ven million chains mit it. Such a sight, I neffer forget."

"You say you saw it at the top of the stairs. What stairs do you mean—those at your house?"

"Not de first vuns, de odders; but den you neffer see dem. Dicky, my poy," the frightened man went on. "It vas de stairs to de attic vot leads from my bed room," and he told Richard all about the secret door, and the telegraph instrument in the garret.

"Did you use that attic to help the German cause?" Richard asked.

"Yes, but neffer vill I do more, mit dat ghost in de house."

"You must have been doing wrong or this would not have happened. If I were you I would quit this work. If you will, I will provide for you as long as you live," the young man promised.

"Tank you, but I haf money to krep me a long vile yet."

"And you will promise me to never turn your hand over for Germany again?"

"Neffer again, Dicky. Dey treated me mean, anyhow."

"I will go to the house and get your belongings as soon as I can, and you may stay here with me."

"Don't go to dat house, my son. I'd be afraid."

"Don't worry about me, and try to forget about this. You will never see it unless you help those spies again."

"I neffer vill no more," the old man promised.

Members of the secret alliance afterward visited him, making dire threats; but the old man was more afraid of the ghost he supposed he had seen than of anything a human being could do, and repeatedly refused their offers.

CHAPTER IX

It was nine o'clock, the hour the Union Savings and Trust Company unlocked its doors for business. Thanksgiving Day and Christmas had rolled by in quick succession. On this particular morning of the day following New Years Day, the elder Mr. Dalton was surprised to find his son on duty promptly at nine.

"What brought you here so early this morning?" the banker asked his son.

"To tell you the truth, I feel that it is time for me to get down to business. You had too much responsibility lately, and I want to lift some of the burden from your shoulders," Ralph announced.

"That sounds like a Dalton, my boy. I knew you would come to your senses sooner or later. If you want to prove your ability, you can fill the place of Mr. Brooks."

The last named gentleman had been a teller for years, but Mr. Dalton had noticed that his discourteous manner toward the patrons was a detriment to the business, and Mr. Brooks had been dismissed. Ralph Dalton worked diligently from the time he assumed his duties, and within a month's time, was asked to take the place left vacant by the cashier, who had handed in his resignation to join the army.

Meanwhile, the cause for Ralph's new-found ambition, in the person of Miss Ellen Bartlett, was working industriously teaching a class of high school girls the art of domestic science. Ralph felt that he could not let Ellen get ahead of him, so he made a resolution to make good in some line of occupation at the bank which was the first resolution that he ever kept. Although he was forced to begin at the bottom, he determined to "land on top."

When he was not detained at the bank late into the evening, he called on Ellen, when that young lady chose to give him permission. As yet, she had only a friendly liking for Ralph, and did not want to encourage him to a great extent. Ralph noticed her indifference, which worried him not a little. Besides acting as cashier for the bank, Ralph, also helped his father in different business transactions, which greatly raised him in the older man's esteem.

The twentieth century boasts of its skyscraper hotels and apartment houses which house thousands of people, but as far back as the fifteenth century New Mexican Indians had built a pueblo near Taos containing from 1500 to 2000 rooms and housing over 2500 persons. This structure has been brought to light under the direction of the famous archaeologist, Dr. Alfred Vincent Kidder, of Harvard University. This gigantic building, a whole city in itself, was constructed on the edge of a cliff which protected it from the attacks of enemies. It was built in the form of a square with a large courtyard in the center. It was four stories high, the ground floor being used as a storehouse for foodstuffs, the chief means of support of this people, and the upper rooms for living purposes. The women threw their trash and waste materials over the edge of the cliff into the ravine, developing one of the largest dump heaps in the world. This mound has been the source of much of our knowledge of the customs, language, arts, and industries of this people.

HIS FEET MADE FOR DIGGING

The skunk's naked, flat soles are wrinkled crossways. The hind feet shown no clawmarks in the snow, but the forepaws have claws, which make him one of the best diggers among all the wild folk, surpassed only by the badger and the woodchuck.

"Can I see the secretary of agriculture?"

"Well, he's very busy, madam. What was it you wanted to see him about?"

"About a geranium of mine that isn't doing very well."

Before the United States became civilized, Indians dug in the rugged mountains of southwestern Texas for a blood-red ore which they used for war paint. Indians and Mexicans still dig in those same mines, but now they seek the mercury which can be extracted from the ore. Ten million dollars' worth of quicksilver was obtained from one mine alone during the last twenty-five years.

GUARDING THE CALVES

By Edwin Tarrisse

While a government official on an inspection trip was driving over the open range in the Texas panhandle, he came upon an old cow surrounded by a dozen young calves, some of which were not more than two days old. There was not another cow in sight. The spectacle so aroused the stranger's curiosity that he asked a veteran cowman what it meant. He was quite ready with this explanation:

"That old cow is doing guard duty to that bunch of calves while their mothers are away after food and water. In this country the water holes are far apart, and the grass is thin. In order to get sufficient food, cattle must graze over a wide extent of range, and calves are often born several miles distant from water. The mother cow needs a drink long before her calf is old enough to travel with her to the nearest water hole. So she must leave her young behind while she goes after water.

Wolves are so numerous that the calf cannot safely be left alone. So by some sort of understanding one of the mother cows is left to guard a whole bunch of calves while the other cows go for water. When the others return, she will leave her own calf in charge of one of them. The cows with calves all take their turns at doing guard duty.

"Several years ago I rode up to a bunch of calves like this. As I came up I saw the old cow make a dash at some animal in the grass. At first, as the grass was tall, I could not make out what it was, but it proved to be a large gray wolf, or 'loafer,' as he is called by the cowboys, which had tried to steal up on a very young calf.

"The cow and wolf were both so busy with their own affairs just then that they paid no attention to me. The old cow was rushing the wolf off his feet and several times came near goring him. There was a shalow hole between me and the calves, and after several narrow escapes the wolf decided he had better get under cover. So he tucked his tail between his legs and made a dash for that hole with the cow close beind him. As his body shot into the hole she made another vicious pass at him, but she missed him again.

"She had him out of the way now, and in order to keep him so took her stand over the hole to hold him prisoner. The hole was not deep enough to let him get entirely out of sight, but he was safe enough as long as he remained at the bottom. Every time he tried to get out he found the old cow with lowered horns ready to run him through.

"I sat there on my horse for nearly an hour watching the siege. Then I rode up and killed the wolf with my gun. As soon as the old cow saw that her enemy was dead, she turned away and went to grazing as unconcernedly as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened."—Forward

THREE-IN-ONE CAKE PEACH PUDDING

One cup of sugar creamed with one lump of butter the size of a large egg. 1 well-beaten egg, ¾ cup of milk, 3 cups of flour sifted with 1 teaspoon of baking powder. Pour over one quart of peaches which have been heated to the boiling point in pan used for baking pudding; allow plenty of juice to remain on fruit; bake 45 minutes and serve with cream.

ORANGE CUSTARD

Place the pulp from 6 oranges in a pudding dish. Cover with 1 cup sugar. Make a custard of 1 pint of milk, 2 eggs, a pinch of salt and a lump of tablespoons cornstarch, the yolks of 3 butter. Pour thickened custard over the oranges. Make a meringue of the egg whites and 2 tablespoons sugar. Brown in the oven. Chill pudding before serving.

BAKED CHUM SALMON WITH TOMATO SAUCE

1 pound can Chum salmon, 1 cup tomatoes, ½ cup water, 1 slice onion, clove or two, 1 teaspoonful vinegar, 2 teaspoonfuls butter, 1½ teaspoonful flour, ½ teaspoonful salt, pepper to taste. Cook tomatoes, water, onions, cloves and vinegar 20 minutes. Melt butter, add flour, and stir into hot mixture. Add salt and pepper, cook ten minutes, then strain. Add salmon and put in baking pan, pour around half the sauce and bake 35 minutes, basting often. Remove to hot platter, pour around remaining hot sauce and garnish with parsley. This will serve from four to six persons.

TOMATO RAREBIT

A "different" luncheon dish. Cook 1 chopped onion and 1 chopped pepper in butter for 5 minutes. Add 1 pint tomato pulp, 1 teaspoon salt and simmer for 15 minutes. Place over boiling water and add 1½ cups grated cheese. Stir until the cheese starts to melt and then add 2 beaten eggs. Cook until thickened and then serve immediately on hot boiled rice.

URGES NEED OF VACCINATION

State Physician Urges Its Need With Opening of Public Schools.

With the opening of schools, attention of teachers, superintendents, and also of parents and guardians of young children is directed by Dr. C. P. Robbins, chief of the bureau of communicable diseases, state department of health, to the need of proper vaccination against smallpox.

"Ohio has been particularly fortunate," Dr. Robbins said, "in having had very few cases of smallpox during the past year or two, in spite of the fact that there has been a serious increase in the disease in many other states. But the disease has been kept under control in Ohio only by closest vigilance. In cities in which routine vaccination of young children, and the periodic re-vaccination of grownups has been neglected, there has been a marked increase in the disease, and the outbreaks have been both virulent and fatal."

COUNTY FAIR NEXT WEEK

Hilliards Preparing for Big Crowd to Attend Annual Event.

The thirteenth annual fair of Franklin county opens at Hilliards next Thursday, Sept. 16, and continues through Saturday—three full days of enthusiasm and profitable, friendly competition.

Four-H clubs for many will occupy the center of interest. Activity of boys and girls in club work has increased rapidly in the past year. On Friday of the fair, the winner from each club class from the Hilliards fair will compete with the winner from the corresponding club classes from community fairs which have been held prior to this county fair. In this elimination contest the county club champion of each class is selected each year. Number of clothing club exhibitors for the 1926 fair is over four times that of last year; 176 are listed this year as against 43 in 1925; pig club has 37 as against 7 in 1925. Other comparisons are: Calf club 21, against 10; poultry club 30, against 29, and food club 34, against 35 in 1925, the two last named being the only groups to show a drop. A total of $380 in premiums awaits the winners in re respective groups.

The live stock department also shows a growth of interest on the part of county breeders. The new cattle barn with 2400 square feet of floor space has been completed and is in readiness for the earliest comers.

Extensive improvements which have been planned by the directors of the Franklin County Agricultural society are becoming more in evidence each year. In addition to erecting two new buildings, the drives through the grounds have been graded and surfaced with cinders. Four carloads of cinders have been spread over the driveways and a 'muddy fair' has lost its terrors for fair officials and prospective visitors.

The race track is being worked constantly and promises to be in prime condition for the three-day speed program, which includes a one-half mile free-for-all pace, open to horses without records only, which provides a purse of $100; the well-known Hilliards "classic" mule race, with its purse of $75 and unlimited merriment—the purse going to the winning mule and the fun to the spectators. These events, including a pony race with a purse of $25, are scheduled for the opening day of the fair. On Friday the racing program includes a 2:25 pace, a 2:24 trot and a 2:20 pace, a purse of $250 being available in each class, the fastest program has been reserved for Saturday afternoon, with a 2:17 pace and 2:18 trot with a purse in each class of $300, and a free-for-all pace offering a purse of $250 being booked. Col. W. L. Whip will officiate in the starter's booth.

In addition to the regular features of the fair, including music by the Dublin band, there will be open-air speeches at 12:30 Friday and Saturday. The management has secured for Saturday, Hon. Myers Y. Cooper, Republican candidate for governor, who will address the fair in his capacity as president of the Ohio Fair Association. The speaker for Friday has not yet been determined.

Fair officials are confident that the thirteenth will be the biggest and best fair ever held by the society. Grounds and buildings are in readiness for record breaking exhibits and attendance.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

Mr. Bartlett was allowed to remain in Stanton one week, after which he was to be sent to an army camp about eighty miles distant from home. The smaller children crowded around their father's easy chair, asking all sorts of questions, all of which were answered patiently. In the midst of their innocent chatter, a low knock sounded at the door. It was Ralph Dalton. Ellen fully expected that he would be wearing a uniform like her father's, but was disappointed.

Ralph had worked hard all winter for promotion at the bank, and now, when the reward sought for was within his reach, the young man was careful to avoid incurring his father's displeasure. He had, at first, argued the question; but after the first excitement over the United States having entered the war, had died down, he began to feel that he had been very indiscreet at the beginning, and finally decided to let things take their course, be his father's partner in business, and let other people take care of the war.

He was surprised to find Ellen's father in uniform, and felt rather belittled in his civilian suit. He was not slow to interpret Ellen's actions toward him, and correctly guessed the reason for her coldness. He went home in a bewildered state of mind. What should he do? If he was to get a fair start financially in life, he must please his parents. If he expected to win Ellen's good will, he must join the Army. If he pleased himself—well, he couldn't decide. So he continued in this state of uncertainty for several weeks after Ellen's father had gone to camp.

One evening, when he felt that he could endure Ellen's coldness no longer, he decided to have a talk with her. Ellen was alone in the parlor when he entered the house. She greeted him very formally and distantly.

"What is the matter, Ellen?" he ventured to ask.

Ellen looked at him angrily.

"Is it possible that you do not know?" she asked.

"I would like for you to inform me of the reason."

"I want you to answer this question: Are you a slacker, a coward, or a pro-German?" she questioned indignantly.

Ralph's face first turned red with embarrassment, then after second thought, white with rage.

"None of the three terms you have mentioned apply to me, Miss Bartlett," he said defiantly, "as I will prove to you before many months. If you read my name in the casualty list, I hope you will remember the names you called me," and without even bidding "her goodbye," the young man hurried from the house.

The next day, Ralph's place at the bank was vacant, and at the end of three weeks, Ellen received a card from a camp in Georgia from Private Ralph Dalton. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton received one the same day, and in spite of their early prejudice, could not help feeling proud of their son.

CHAPTER X

Richard Schreibner had made many friends at college, with whom he now kept up a correspondence. One morning, shortly after war was declared, he received a letter from a young man who was also a graduate pharmacist.

"I have tried to enlist in the service, but they will not accept me because I am flat-footed. What are you going to do?" a part of the letter ran.

"That is what I have been wondering day and night for the last two weeks," Richard muttered to himself. "I love Marjorie; I love my country. If I go to France, I may never see her again."

He wondered what to do about the drug store. In his hand was the answer to that problem. Let his college chum handle the business, if he could not join the army; and let Marjorie solve the remainder of the problem for him. The next day was Sunday, and the two lovers were together once more in the little flower garden, which was beginning to look natural again—every bush and shrub having been touched with the magic of springtime.

"Marjorie," Richard ventured. "If I should go to France, would you write to me every day?"

She began to cry.

"A-are you going to enlist, Richard?" she asked brokenly.

"I feel that it is my duty. I am an able-bodied man, enjoying perfect health, and my country needs me; but my darling, how can I leave you?" and he folded her in a close embrace.

"Yes, Richard, your country needs you. Do not let thoughts of me make you shirk your duty," she tried to say steadily. "I will be waiting for you when you come back."

"It may be years before I come back Marjorie. Can we wait that long, when we were expecting to be married within a few months? Sweetheart, will you name another date?" he pleaded.

After a little persuasion, Marjorie consented to the date being changed to one week from that day.

"One week from today; it will be the happiest day of my life!" he exclaimed.

"And mine, also," she added.

"I hope you will never regret that statement. I shall never willingly give you cause to."

"Promise me one thing, Richard," she requested, "that you will take no unnecessary risks," I want you to come back to me safe and sound."

A Man With a Vision

Lucas Sullivant, who owned four thousand acres of land which extended from the Hilltop at Darby Creek, on the west, being a surveyor, believed this to be the Garden of Eden. He set out to build a city that would surpass Franklinton, which was started by his son, Michael Sullivant in the bottoms at Sandusky street. He laid out small tracts which was made into town lots and from which grew the Hilltop.

People soon learned that the Hilltop was an extremely healthy place to live and homes were being built on these lots as fast as people could get their lots paid for and save enough money with which to build a little home. This made progress very slow for home builders for many years.

Mr. J. W. Dinsmore, retiring as President of the Central Bank of Coshocton, Ohio, was visiting in Columbus and made a trip to the Hilltop. Being very much impressed with the location, decided it would be a fine place to live and to make it a better place for his fellow man, began to think of a Building and Loan Association.

After some little time, the Hilltop Building and Loan Association was installed at 12 South Park Ave. The Association was made up of Hilltop business and profesional men that had money, influence and the community at heart. An institution where the people that patronized it would get the full worth of their savings. After about a year of wonderful growth, Mr. Dinsmore, acting president and manager, persuaded Mr. Harley Culp, who had been connected with the City National Bank at Gay and High Sts. for over twenty years, to come over with the association. After three years of strict attention to business and fairness to all, they now have $600,000.00, of Hilltop people's money.

The association gives loans only to home builders, which is the thing Mr. Sullivan lacked to make his dream come true. He was handicapped by the fact that he had no neighbors to help each other, as it is today.

By depositing your savings in an association, you are helping your neighbor to get a home and getting good and absolutely safe returns for your money. Helping thy neighbor is helping thyself, because the money comes back to you in many ways. Good streets, fire protection, good churches and fine schools. If everyone should send their money to another location, that location will thrive and you would only get a small rate of interest in return, and not be able to see for yourself that it was safe.

The Hilltop is making the most rapid growth of any part of the city, because people keep their money at home and help themselves. Everyone is striving for a home out here, not paying all for rent and have nothing at the end of ten years but rent receipts. There is less rental property on the Hilltop than any other part of the city.

Get a home. Start now while your neighbor is willing to help you. How happy Mr. Sullivant would be if he could see what he started. Keep this the Garden of Eden. Keep out the Forbidden Fruit and have no regrets by patronizing business on the Good Old Hilltop.

URGES NEED OF VACCINATION

State Physician Urges Its Need With Opening of Public Schools.

With the opening of schools, attention of teachers, superintendents, and also of parents and guardians of young children is directed by Dr. C. P. Robbins, chief of the bureau of communicable diseases, state department of health, to the need of proper vaccination against smallpox.

"Ohio has been particularly fortunate," Dr. Robbins said, "in having had very few cases of smallpox during the past year or two, in spite of the fact that there has been a serious increase in the disease in many other states. But the disease has been kept under control in Ohio only by closest vigilance. In cities in which routine vaccination of young children, and the periodic re-vaccination of grownups has been neglected, there has been a marked increase in the disease, and the outbreaks have been both virulent and fatal."

COUNTY FAIR NEXT WEEK

Hilliards Preparing for Big Crowd to Attend Annual Event.

The thirteenth annual fair of Franklin county opens at Hilliards next Thursday, Sept. 16, and continues through Saturday—three full days of enthusiasm and profitable, friendly competition.

Four H clubs for many will occupy the center of interest. Activity of boys and girls in club work has increased rapidly in the past year. On Friday of the fair, the winner from each club class from the Hilliards fair will compete with the winner from the corresponding club classes from community fairs which have been held prior to this county fair. In this elimination contest the county club champion of each class is selected each year. Number of clothing club exhibitors for the 1926 fair is over four times that of last year; 176 are listed this year as against 43 in 1925; pig club has 37 as against 7 in 1925. Other comparisons are: Calf club 21, against 19; poultry club 26, against 29, and food club 34, against 35 in 1925, the two last named being the only groups to show a drop. A total of $390 in premiums awaits the winners in te respective groups.

The live stock department also shows a growth of interest on the part of county breeders. The new cattle barn with 2400 square feet of floor space has been completed and is in readiness for the earliest comers.

Extensive improvements which have been planned by the directors of the Franklin County Agricultural society are becoming more in evidence each year. In addition to erecting two new buildings, the drives through the grounds have been graded and surfaced with cinders. Four carloads of cinders have been spread over the driveways and a 'muddy fair" has lost its terrors for fair officials and prospective visitors.

The race track is being worked constantly and promises to be in prime condition for the three-day speed program, which includes a one-half mile free-for-all pace, open to horses without records only, which provides a purse of $100; the well-known Hilliards "classic" mule race, with its purse of $75 and unlimited merriment—the purse going to the winning mule and the fun to the spectators. These events, including a pony race with a purse of $25, are scheduled for the opening day of the fair. On Friday the racing program includes a 2:25 pace, a 2:24 trot and a 2:20 pace, a purse of $250 being available in each class, the fastest program has been reserved for Saturday afternoon, with a 2:17 pace and 2:18 trot with a purse in each class of $300, and a free-for-all pace offering a purse of $350 being booked. Col. W. L. Whip will officiate in the starter's booth.

In addition to the regular features of the fair, including music by the Dublin band, there will be open-air speeches at 12:30 Friday and Saturday. The management has secured for Saturday, Hon. Myers Y. Cooper, Republican candidate for governor, who will address the fair in his capacity as president of the Ohio Fair Association. The speaker for Friday has not yet been determined.

Fair officials are confident that the thirteenth will be the biggest and best fair ever held by the society. Grounds and buildings are in readiness for record breaking exhibits and attendance.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Curison, a Hilltop Author

Mr. Bartlett was allowed to remain in Stanton one week, after which he was to be sent to an army camp about eighty miles distant from home. The smaller children crowded around their father's easy chair, asking all sorts of questions, all of which were answered patiently. In the midst of their innocent chatter, a low knock sounded at the door. It was Ralph Dalton. Ellen fully expected that he would be wearing a uniform like her father's, but was disappointed.

Ralph had worked hard all winter for promotion at the bank, and now, when the reward sought for was within his reach, the young man was careful to avoid incurring his father's displeasure. He had, at first, argued the question; but after the first excitement over the United States having entered the war, had died down, he began to feel that he had been very indiscreet at the beginning, and finally decided to let things take their course, be his father's partner in business, and let other people take care of the war.

He was surprised to find Ellen's father in uniform, and felt rather belittled in his civilian suit. He was not slow to interpret Ellen's actions toward him, and correctly guessed the reason for her coldness. He went home in a bewildered state of mind. What should he do? If he was to get a fair start financially in life, he must please his parents. If he expected to win Ellen's good will, he must join the Army. If he pleased himself—well, he couldn't decide. So he continued in this state of incertainty for several weeks after Ellen's father had gone to camp.

One evening, when he felt that he could endure Ellen's coldness no longer, he decided to have a talk with her. Ellen was alone in the parlor when he entered the house. She greeted him very formally and distantly.

"What is the matter, Ellen?" he ventured to ask.

Ellen looked at him angrily.

"Is it possible that you do not know?" she asked.

"I would like for you to inform me of the reason."

"I want you to answer this question: Are you a slacker, a coward, or a pro-German?" she questioned indignantly.

Ralph's face first turned red with embarrassment, then after second thought, white with rage.

"None of the three terms you have mentioned apply to me, Miss Bartlett," he said defiantly, "as I will prove to you before many months. If you read my name in the casualty list, I hope you will remember the names you called me," and without even bidding "her goodbye," the young man hurried from the house.

The next day, Ralph's place at the bank was vacant, and at the end of three weeks, Ellen received a card from a camp in Georgia from Private Ralph Dalton. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton received one the same day, and in spite of their early prejudice, could not help feeling proud of their son.

CHAPTER X

Richard Schreibner had made many friends at colege, with whom he now kept up a correspondence. One morning, shortly after war was declared, he received a letter from a young man who was also a graduate pharmacist.

"I have tried to enlist in the service, but they will not accept me because I am flat-footed. What are you going to do?" a part of the letter ran.

"That is what I have been wondering day and night for the last two weeks," Richard muttered to himself. "I love Marjorie; I love my country. If I go to France, I may never see her again."

He wondered what to do about the drug store. In his hand was the answer to that problem. Let his college chum handle the business, if he could not join the army; and let Marjorie solve the remainder of the problem for him. The next day was Sunday, and the two lovers were together once more in the little flower garden, which was beginning to look natural again—every bush and shrub having been touched with the magic of springtime.

"Marjorie," Richard ventured. "If I should go to France, would you write to me every day?"

She began to cry.

"A-are you going to enlist, Richard?" she asked brokenly.

"I feel that it is my duty. I am an able-bodied man, enjoying perfect health, and my country needs me; but my darling, how can I leave you?" and he folded her in a close embrace.

"Yes, Richard, your country needs you. Do not let thoughts of me make you shirk your duty," she tried to say steadily. "I will be waiting for you when you come back."

"It may be years before I come back Marjorie. Can we wait that long, when we were expecting to be married within a few months? Sweetheart, will you name another date?" he pleaded.

After a little [illegible], Marjorie consented to the date being [illegible] one week from that day.

"One week from today; it will be the happiest day of my life!" he exclaimed.

"And mine, also," she added.

"I hope you will never regret that statement. I shall never willingly give you cause to."

"Promise me one thing, Richard," she requested, "that you will take no unnecessary risks," I want you to come back to me safe and sound."

A Man With a Vision

Lucas Sullivant, who owned four thousand acres of land which extended from the Hilltop ot Darby Creek, on the west, being a surveyor, believed this to be the Garden of Eden. He set out to build a city that would surpass Franklinton, which was started by his son, Michael Sullivant in the bottoms at Sandusky street. He laid out small tracts which was made into town lots and from which grew the Hilltop.

People soon learned that the Hilltop was an extremely healthy place to live and homes were being built on these lots as fast as people could get their lots paid for and save enough money with which to build a little home. This made progress very slow for home builders for many years.

Mr. J. W. Dinsmore, retiring as President of the Central Bank of Cosbocton, Ohio, was visiting in Columbus and made a trip to the Hilltop. Being very much impressed with the location, decided it would be a fine place to live and to make it a better place for his fellow man, began to think of a Building and Loan Association.

After some little time, the Hilltop Building and Loan Association was installed at 12 South Park Ave. The Association was made up of Hilltop business and profesional men that had money, infidence and the community at heart. An institution where the people that patronized it would get the full worth of their savings. After about a year of wonderful growth, Mr. Dinsmore, acting president and manager, persuaded Mr. Harley Culp, who had been connected with the City National Bank at Gay and High Sts. for over twenty years, to come over with the association. After three years of strict attention to business and fairness to all, they now have $600,000.00, of Hilltop people's money.

The association gives loans only to home builders, which is the thing Mr. Sullivan lacked to make his dream come true. He was handicapped by the fact that he had no neighbors to help each other, as it is today.

By depositing your savings in an association, you are helping your neighbor to get a home and getting good and absolutely safe returns for your money. Helping thy neighbor is helping thyself, because the money comes back to you in many ways. Good streets, fire protection, good churches and fine schools. If everyone should send their money to another location, that location will thrive and you would only get a small rate of interest in return, and not be able to see for yourself that it was safe.

The Hilltop is making the most rapid growth of any part of the city, because people keep their money at home and help themselves. Everyone is striving for a home out here, not paying all for rent and have nothing at the end of ten years but rent receipts. There is less rental property on the Hilltop than any other part of the city.

Get a home. Start now while your neighbor is willing to help you. How happy Mr. Sullivant would be if he could see what he started. Keep this the Garden of Eden. Keep out the Forbidden Fruit and have no regrets by patronizing business on the Good Old Hilltop.

Buy your new Fall Coat or Dress at Seiler's. You'll save money.

Prof. H. C. Shetrone, 75 N. Chase Ave., curator at Ohio State museum, who was injured two weeks ago while exploring a mound, when a portion of the mound caved in, has sufficiently recovered to again direct the work of exploration.

Late last Saturday an important ceremonial offering and merifices of rare value were removed from the mounds. FAREWELL RECEPTION

For Rev. Secsholtz and Family at St. Paul's Church Friday Evening.

The farewell reception given Rev. W. E. Secsholtz and family on Tuesday evening was one of the largest social gatherings ever assembled in St. Paul's United Evangelical church. Rev. Secsholtz and family have been re-stationed to First Church, Canton, Ohio, which church they ministered to for five years before coming to St. Paul.

The closing of his years' ministry here leaves the church on a sounder basis spiritually as well as financially than ever before. The program rendered as a part of the evening's reception paid special tribute to the pastor so beloved by all.

Learning of his departure a prominent Columbus minister remarked, "I am sorry. Columbus needs Rev. Secsholtz, needs his splendid scriptural messages. We cannot afford to give him up."

At a late hour, with many lingering farewell expressions of appreciation and hearty god-speeds for the future, pastor and people wended their way homeward looking forward to the time when farewell will be o'er.

SUCCUMBS TO AUTO ACCIDENT

Aged Woman Killed While in Columbus Visiting Her Son.

Mrs. Belle McLean, aged 78, mother of William A. McLean, 167 Wheatland Ave., died at University hospital Wednesday night, Sept. 8, as a result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident at Neil and Fourth avenues, when she stepped in the path of a machine and was knocked down.

She was taken to the hospital by Frank A. Teach of 2228 Neil Ave., driver of the machine which struck her, and it was found she had suffered concussion of the brain and a fractured skull.

Mrs. McLean's home was in Huntington, W. Va., and the remains were taken to that city for funeral and burial.

MINUS SHIRT AND HATCHET

While John Ware was placing a sign for the Record Wednesday morning he became very warm and to ease his bodily comfort took off his "lumber jack" and placed it on the running board of a machine parked in front of Cussins & Hartsough's store. A little later he laid a borrowed hatchet on the lumber jack and stepped away for a few minutes. When he returned machine and contents were gone. He does not know whether some of his "personal" friends are playing a practical joke on him or whether the owner of the machine drove away not noticing the articles on the running board. Anyway, John is out a lumber jack and a hatchet, and wishes it returned to the Record office.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Staley, 58 S. Ogden Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Sullivan and daughter Esther, 426 S. Richardson Ave., motored to Dayton and Richmond, Ind., over the week-end, returning home by way of Cincinanti, Bainbridge and Chillicothe.

CHILDREN USED AS AIR RIFLE TARGETS

Phil Cunningham, jr., aged 12, 252 N. Burgess Ave.; Gerald Wierman, aged 14, and his sister Grace, aged 12, 250 N. Burgess avenue, had the rather unpleasant experience Monday afternoon of being used for human targets by three boys with air rifles.

The children were playing in Holton park, near their home, when the boys with the air rifles shouted they would "give them fifteen to get away." Before they could reach their homes they were hit several times, but were not injured, and were able to attend school Tuesday.

The little four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brokaw, 160 Eldon Ave., also was a victim of the boys and was hit several times on the hand by shots from the rifles.

The matter was reported to the police.

The Bethany Bible class will meet at the home of Mrs. Homer Gilliland, 1065 Floral Ave., Friday, Sept. 17, from 2 to 4 p. m. A good attendance is desired as the lesson treats on laws and purification given to the children of Israel under Moses and Aaron's leadership.

SEARCHING FOR HEROES FRIENDS

Three Distinguished Services Crosses Are Still Unclaimed.

Through the efforts of Lt. Colonel Alfred Bellin, U. S. army recruiting officer, at Fort Hayes, three coveted bits of bronze, with bright ribbons of red, white and blue attached, may at last be presented to relatives of three heroic American soldiers who died on the battlefields of France while unselfishly carrying out exploits "beyond the call of duty."

The three bronze decorations are the last to remain unclaimed of the distinguished service crosses awarded for gallantry under fire during the World war. For eight years the war department has sought information which would enable it to deliver the awards to relatives of the dead soldiers entitled to receive them.

Colonel Bellin and other members of the local recruiting force, accepting it as a debt of honor due their departed buddies, will join the army recruiting service of the entire country in a nation wide quest for the missing relatives.

In the systematic search that will be carried into every section of the United States by soldiers of the army recruiting service, the newspapers, radio, Boy Scout troops, C. M. T. C. Boys' clubs, veterans' organizations, and missing persons bureaus of police departments will be utilized to supplement the personal canvassing of the soldiers.

The three heroes posthumously awarded the D. S. C. were: Edward G. Mason of Detroit, Mich., serving in Co. D, 55th Infantry, 7th Division; Sergeant Carl C. Carter, of Fresno, Calif., serving in Co. A, 7th Infantry, 3rd Division, and Private Frank Arkman, of Bellingham, Minn., serving in Co. L, 306th Infantry, 77th Division.

The ElDorado club of the Y. W. C. A. was entertained, Monday evening with a 6 o'clock dinner at the home of Mrs. Ray Trapp, 112 N. Park Ave., with Mrs. Claude Jewell and Mrs. Charles E. Sheron as assisting hostesses. Those present were: Mrs. Horace Swain, Mrs. Nellie Flyle, Mrs. Warren Church, Mrs. Phil Decker, Mrs. Rosco Basil, Mrs. Janette Phieffer, Miss Sylvia Lasch, Miss Edith Harper, Miss Helen Rawbouser, Miss Philliamena Clark, Miss Elsie Hipp, Miss Ruth Bloomfield, Miss Ruth Burdett, Alice Harper, Jackie Phieffer, Donald Jewell, Eugene Jewel, Emajean Church and Junior Bloomfield and Patty Phieffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Max E. Moser, 135 East Whittier St. have announced the engagement of their daughter, Edith, to Mr. Raymond B. Borland, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Borland, 84 South Ogden Ave. The marriage wil take place in October.

Charles Brant, 52, of Camp Chase, was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital late Monday when he was cut and bruised about the head and body by an auto.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

"I promise," he said, "not to take any unnecessary risks," placing particular emphasis on the word "unnecessary."

Beginning early the next morning, Marjorie began preparations for her bridal, and Richard telephoned to his college chum over long distance, the result of which was that Richard's friend was to attend to the drug store during Richard's absence, taking a certain per cent of the profits for his own salary, the remainder to be given to Marjorie, as his father was far from being in destitute circumstances. The elder Mr Schreibner wisely refrained from interferring with his son's plans, and the week passed pleasantly.

On Sunday afternoon, the little frame church was crowded, and the sidewalk was thronged with people, who gave way to form an aisle when the machine bringing the Duncan family to the church stopped near the entrance. The groom was waiting inside, and as Marjorie entered the door, the sweet sounds of the wedding march filled the air. Marjorie Duncan was changed to Mrs. Richard Schreibner, and the bridal party, after a deluge of rice and a few practical jokes, were soon back to the home of the Duncans. Both Marjorie and Richard preferred that their honeymoon be spent where their love was born; and all too swiftly the blissful holidays ended.

Richard did not go to the recruiting station alone. Howard was with him. They were now brothers indeed.

Months passed. Marjorie continued to receive letters from the absent ones, and finally, the postman brought one from Havre, France. So far, her husband and brother had not been separated. It seemed to her as she sat alone on the rustic bench when the autumn leaves fell from the trees, and the air began to grow chilly, that these letters were from another world. When would she see them again—her brother, and her husband. How many were falling daily in Flanders fields. How many had found the Marne region the great gateway to another life! Marjorie strived hard to not become despondent, and succeeded to a certain extent, partly due to the efforts of her mother and father who were very anxious about their daughter.

The year of 1917 drew to a close, and the early months of 1918 found Richard Schreibner, senior "somewhere in France," and little Richard Schreibner judging from the loud cries of a tiny form in its crib, which kept its mother and grandparents very busy supplying the wants and wishes of the new "boss" of the household.

In far off France, while resting in billets, after a terrible seige on the firing line, Richard Schreibner received the word that he had one more to fight for now, and he was immensely pleased with the news, which he immediately communicated with Howard, who in turn told his comrades. From that day on these two privates were nicknamed "Dad" and "Unk," which last quite likely meant "Uncle."

CHAPTER XI

Ellen Bartlett had not seen Ralph's name on the casualty list, but she was advised by her father, who was now a captain in the northwestern section of the western front, that by a queer coincident, Ralph had been transferred to his company, and that the young man had already decreased the population of the enemy country some half dozen men in hand to hand fights.

"If every man over here would get six," he wrote, "possibly we could celebrate next Fourth of July at home."

Ellen received letters from Ralph now and then—that is, the part the censors did not cut out, as a strict censorship of news from the front was maintained at that time. Ellen devoted her spare time to writing letters to Ralph and her father, and to assisting with Red Cross work, such as making bandages, etc. She also, did her part to "keep the gold stream flowing." When she could spare the time, she made week-end trips to Weston to see Marjorie and the baby; and during the summer induced Marjorie to spend a few weeks in Stanton. When Marjorie went back to Weston, she at once organized a branch of the American Red Cross, which gave her less time for brooding over the absent ones, although they were never absent from her thoughts.

Now and then old Mr. Schreibner would come to see his daughter-in-law and grandchild, both of whom he had learned to care a great deal for. He still occupied a room over the drug store where Richard's friend, Charles Hartley, was faithfully attending to the soldier's business affairs. He followed Richard's example as to Sunday hours, and managed to have some spare time which he used to good advantage. It was quite natural that he should want to see his chum's infant son once in a while, and, of course, it was entirely by accident that he happened to call at the home of the Duncans when Ellen Hartlett chanced to spend a certain week-end with Marjorie.

Ellen had guessed that Ralph Dalton cared for her, and had in a small way returned his regard; but she was not quite sure that she cared as much for him as a sweetheart who expected to be his wife should care. Lately, she noticed that she experienced a new kind of happiness when in the company of Charles Hartley. Therefore, her visits to Weston became less frequent. Was it right, she asked herself, to be disloyal to her friendship with Ralph who was risking his life in the trenches, and who was probably looking forward to a time when the war would be over, and when he could make a home for Ellen. Then she would argue with herself. She was not engaged to him, why should she deprive herself of privileges belonging to her girlhood? No, they were not engaged, but she had accepted expensive presents from him, and had encouraged him more than she should have done. Charles Hartley had not been told that Ralph and Ellen had spent many hours together during the past year, and could not understand why Ellen avoided him. Acting on the idea that "faint heart never won fair lady," he determined to go to her home in Stanton, and have a talk with her. Accordingly, one evening when Ellen was alone in her boudoir writing a letter to Ralph, hardly knowing how to fill the pages, Mr. Charles Hartley was announced by one of Ellen's younger sisters. She carefully smoothed her hair, and as her mischievous brother called it, "whitewashed" her face with her powder puff, and was soon tripping gayly down the stairs. She made a great effort toward indifference, but before the evening passed, had promised Mr. Hartley that she would go to a patriotic gathering the following afternoon.

BOARD OF EDUCATION TO ERECT SCHOOLS ADJOINING BROADVIEW

The Board of Education after careful investigation to determine the trend of growth of Columbus during the next few years selected sites immediately adjoining Broadview for the erection of the new Elementary School and West High School.

Every child living in Broadview may pass through its entire school life from primary to senior high school without walking more than three squares to school and without crossing a car line or main thoroughfare.

The selection of these sites immediately added increased value to every lot in Broadview. In October work will start upon the new West High School which means another increase in value for every building site in Broadview.

Here in Broadview is the ideal place for your home and one of the greatest opportunities ever offered you by a responsible firm to make a profitable investment with absolutely no risk.

Unusual prices and terms for such high-class, fully improved property.

In addition to schools Broadview offers you:

Fine Asphalt Streets,
Sewers,
Water,
Electricity,
Police Protection,
Fire Protection,
Mail Delivery,
Garbage Collection,
Transportation facilities.

Many additions offer you less and no addition can offer you more for you can buy fully improved building sites in built-up Broadview for less than many developers are asking for lots out in the country where the improvements will not be made for many years.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

Although Charles Hartley was not engaged in fighting "Over there," he was by no means a slacker. They had refused to accept him at the recruiting office where he had gone, expecting to enlist, and determined to do as much as possible for his country this side of the ocean. He had been promised a share of the profits from the drug store, and to all appearances, was accepting the offer. Only he, himself, knew that he drew a certain amount from his savings account each week for his own expenses, and purchased liberty bonds in Marjories Schreibner's name with the part allotted to him from the profits of the store. He drew a large amount from his account, which he invested in bonds in his own name.

Once every month, he staged a play, using the young people of Weston for his characters. The proceeds from these performances were given to War Chest funds, etc. He did everything in his power to help his country, but, unawares, he was stealing a soldier's sweetheart. Each time Ellen permitted him to come to her home she promised herself it would be the last, but when the time came, her heart failed her, and when Charles remarked that he would see her the next Sunday, she lacked the courage to tell him not to come.

Letters from her father and Ralph came less frequent by the middle of July. Events on the Western front were pointing toward the "Big Push." For some time the Allies had been on the defensive, but for a purpose. The Germans were alowed to advance to a point where the Allies would have the advantage of position, as the opposing armies were being led away from their communications, and also, were forming salients which were soon to be wiped out by a fierce counter attack.

Allied commanders, during the strategic retreat, had avoided the loss of too many men; but when the enemy came nearer to Paris, and the time came for the Allied armies to assume the offensive, it was important that no ground be given, which, if lost, would pave the way to the French capital. Therefore, in the days soon to come, it was necessary that the allies advance northward and eastward. To do this, fierce combats would occur, and many American soldiers, with French and British, would pay the price of each victory won.

CHAPTER XII

Marjorie Schreibner anxiously awaited news from the front. Every item of war news in the evening papers was read and re-read by the young woman and her parents. They fearfully read the casualty lists, thinking possibly either Howard's or Richard's name would be under one of the three headings: Wounded, Killed in Action, or Missing in Action; and that they had failed to receive word from persons in charge of this information.

It was with a sigh of relief that they finished looking through the lists without seeing any familiar names, although their hearts went out to the bereaved families less fortunate than themselves. The tiny form in the little white crib was beginning to utter unintelligible sounds, and Marjorie noticed that every day it resembled its father more and more. How she loved to look at it! How husband! Where was he now? Would she ever see him again! No one knew. And Howard, her dearly loved brother, a companion to her through her childhood, girlhood, and early womanhood, where was he this very minute? Had she only known! Far away from home, many miles from the land of his birth, on the bloody field of Chateau-Thierry, another life had passed away and entered the Great Beyond. Nearby, the waters of the Marne River flowed onward carrying with them many dead German soldiers, but the cost was great.

While Marjorie slept, with the form of her infant son huddled close to her, the body of Howard Duncan was laid to rest "Somewhere in France," with nothing more than a little wooden cross to mark the sacred spot.

METROPOLITAN DISPLAY WINDOWS AT SEILLER'S

New Show Windows Give a Fifth Avenue Atmosphere.

Plastic Masonry Make Effective Setting for Display Purposes.

A further improvement in the Seiller store front adds much to the attractiveness of the store with the two large display windows completely reconstructed as to background, fittings and lighting fixtures.

The new backgrounds are constructed of the new plastic art-masonry and closely simulates the massive white stone wall that has been found most effective as a setting for merchandise displays in all colors. The windows were designed by Mr. Seiller and his assistant Mr. "Jack" Merriman and reflect great credit upon the artistic talents of these gentlemen. The new backgrounds were installed by Messrs Bohl and Wollenap, specialists in this class of work and widely known for the artistic interiors they furnished for the Wagenhall's Memorial at Lythopolis.

The windows are finished entirely in white insuring the highest possible efficiency in light radiation and are an outstanding contribution to the Hilltop's "Great White Way" so rapidly becoming a reality. The new lighting fixtures consist of two trident electrica candlelabras in each window, furnished by the Sites Electrical Co., supplementing the concealed over head flood lights and the effect is one in which a soft light difusion affords the greatest possible visability.

Entirely new window fixtured including life-like wax manakins are being used and the entire ensemble would reflect credit on the largest metropolitan shopping district. It was particularly gratifying to the management of the Seiller's store that the new windows were completed in ample time for the special displays of new fall and winter merchandise planned in connection with the firms Eighteenth Anniversary Sale to begin next Friday, Oct 1. A full page announcement of the opening of the sale will be found in this issue of the Hilltop Record and Mr Seiller informs us that greater preparations have been made for this event than for any previous sale in the history of the store. Such an event right on the threshold of a new season, surely demonstrates the splendid mercantile enterprise that is so rapidly building up a great retail center that is worthy the pride and patronage of the great Hilltop community.

Group No. 1 of Glenwood Ladies Aid will have a Pot Luck dinner at the church, Tuesday Oct. 5. This being the day for the annual election of officers, every member of the group is urged to be present.

Republican Rally

Republicans of the Eleventh ward will meet Monday evening, Oct. 4, at 7:30 o'clock at the home of M. W. Westlake, 2499 W. Broad St.

Candidates for various offices will address the meeting. All Republicans are urged to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ferguson, 90 N. Warren Ave., just returned from a thousand-mile trip on the Ohio river. The scenery on both sides of the river is beautiful. In making this trip they viewed the most extensive government improvements of any river in the world.

Mrs Ivan Spencer, 63 N. Burgess Ave. was very agreeably surprised on Saturday evening when Mr. Spencer gave a party in honor of her birthday. A most interesting feature of the evening was the opening of the packages, which proved to be birthday toys, followed by a handkerchief shower. Mr. spencer proved himself quite efficient as a host when he served most delightful refreshments. The guests were members of the Elite Embroidery Club and their husbands. Those present to enjoy the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Orman Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rees, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fisher and daughter Mary Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Spangler, Mr. and Mrs. Cosner, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Spencer and son Bobby.

Mrs. O. H. Day, North Roys Avenue and her daughter, Mrs. Glenn Barmlett, returned home Tuesday from Lima, Ohio. They were guests of Mrs. Thomas Greenland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hoefler and family, 143 N. Warren Ave., motored to Xenia, Ohio, Sunday.

MRS. KILLIAN DIES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Pauline Mathias Killian, wife of William Killian, 2112 Sullivant Ave., died very suddenly last Friday night at Grant Hospital, where she was convalescing from an operation for gall stones, performed Sept. 10. Mrs. Killian was apparently recovering very satisfactorily, when she was suddenly taken ill and died in a few moments.

Her husband, a small son; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Mathias, and three brothers survive.

Funeral services were held at the home of her husband's sister, Mrs. E. I. Hickman, 148 Innis Ave. Burial in Memorial Burial Park.

Miss Druscilla O'Hara entertained with a surprise shower Saturday evening, Sept. 18, honoring Miss Melvina Tracy, who became the bride of Mr. Kenneth E. Lybarger, Wednesday, September 22nd. Many lovely gifts were presented to the bride-elect, after which a dainty repast was served. Those present were: Mrs. Ada Body, Mrs. Alice Liner, Mrs. Beatrice Wright, Mrs. Irene Newhouse, Mrs. Dorothy Armbrust, Mrs. Margaret Armbrust, Mrs. N. Tracy, Miss Lois Otten, Miss Florence Snider, Miss Hazel Hazelbaker, Miss Mildred Bowers and the honor guest.

WEST BROAD ST. SCHOOL P.-T. A.

The first fall meeting of the West Broad Street School Parent-Teacher association was held at the school auditorium Friday afternoon at 2:30. Mrs. Canning, of the attendance department, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the subject, "Why Our Children Hate School."

The program committee of the association is working hard to give to the parents and teachers a well balanced and instructive program for this year.

There are more than 900 children enrolled at West Broad this year. This large enrollment indicates that between two and three hundred homes are represented there. Our P.-T. A. meetings should be attended by at least one representative from each home. Let us as parents take this powerful organization seriously and get behind it with our attendance and support.

Will every parent watch for the announcement of our next meeting and be there whether you have enrolled as a member or not?

Mrs. Catherine McNabb, 20, 100 N. Central Ave., was slightly hurt, and her daughter Nellie, was bruised, Sunday, when the truck in which they were riding, driven by her husband, Harry, collided at Thomas and Davis avenues with the auto of John O'Connor, 26 Rodgers Ave. The truck was overturned. Police took the injured persons to Mt. Carmel hospital.

Owing to increased work Miss Ethel Greiner has found it impossible to again accept the position of organist at the state hospital. Harry R. Bowen, organ pupil of Miss Greiner, will be her successor.

CITY BUDGETS WILL BE PARED

Heads of city departments are to be asked by Mayor Thomas within a few days to make cuts totaling $214,829.67 in their budgets for the remainder of this year.

A deficit of that amount faces the city as result of decreased revenue from taxes and carrying over of $118,716 cash deficiency from last year, Mayor Thomas said. He declared service departments probably will be asked to bear the brunt of the deficit. He has refused to transfer funds in departments.

Miss Edna Geyer, 227 North Warren Ave. gave a birthday dinner at her home Sunday, Sept. 26 at six o-clock honoring Miss Minerva Koonts, 155 North Harris Ave.

OPEN WHITE WAY BIDS OCTOBER 11th

Bids on the contract for installation of "white way" lights in North and South High street will be opened Oct. 11, service Director Duffy said Monday. The project will cost approximately $200,000. Lights of 3000, 1500 and 600 candle power will be installed. The system will be installed in East and West Broad street, next spring.

Mrs. Bruce Oyler, 159 N. Ogden Ave., returned Tuesday from Lima, Ohio, where she was called about four weeks ago by the serious illness of Mr. Oyler's sister, Mrs. Mary League.

Mr. Schultz has been teaching piano for the past year at his home. Among his many musical activities he has often been heard from radio station WAIU with the Capital City Trio, and as pianist at the Warren Avenue United Evangelical church.

GYM CLASSES AT WEST HIGH

Old Auditorium Remodeled into Gymnasium for Boys and Girls.

West High school is to have gymnasium classes this year for the first time in its history. During the remodeling process that took place at the school this summer, the old auditorium was rebuilt into a gymnasium.

The new gymnasium is now being equipped with apparatus and within a short time the classes will have their first workout. Miss Harriet Dieder will direct the girls' work, while Francis Fuller, football coach, will have charge of the boys.

Gymnasium classes began at Crestview Junior High school during the first week of school, under the direction of Charles Bonner, who succeeds Rollin Fuller.

RAINS DELAY ROAD WORK

Rains and storms are playing havoc with highway construction throughout the state, according to George F. Schlesinger, state highway director, Monday, who said that it was practically impossible to carry on many road repair operations during rainy weather.

INTERESTING BOOKLET

Issued By Buckeye State Building and Loan Co.

The value of ready money and the opportunities it brings is pointed out in a recent booklet published by The Buckeye State Building and Loan Co.

This financial institution, having resources over $32,700,00, extensively advertises its service through many publications in Central Ohio, believing that all the people should know of its facilities.

The Buckeye further believes that if the people understood the power of compound interest, that instead of having 70,500 customers transacting business with it, there would be double that number.

The Buckeye's new booklet shows how money at 5 per cent will double in 14 years, if the interest is allowed to compound with the principal semi-annually.

This institution has assisted thousands of people to acquire homes, as all of its funds are loaned only on homes taking as security first mortgages yielding 6½ per cent.

The Buckeye has outgrown its present location at 22 West Gay St. and is now erecting a new home at 32-42 East Gay St., where it will be better able to take care of its rapidly growing business.

Seiller's 18th Anniversary Sale begins Friday, Oct. 1st. Be sure and read page 3 of this issue.

Before an altar of ferns and baskets of goldenrod, Miss Pearl Lane was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest C. Bluhm of Grove City by Rev. J. F. Leist, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lane, 129 S. Harris Ave., Thursday evening, Sept. 16. The bride's gown was of white satin crepe, crystal beaded. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Ruth White, gowned in yellow georgette and carrying Aaron Ward roses, was maid of honor. Mr. Clarence Hulls was best man. Miss Minnie A. Jones sang "At Dawning" and "Because I Love You." The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. J. F. Leist. Immediately following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles White, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hulls, Mr. and Mrs. Becker, Mrs. Florence Settler, Mr. William Whitting and Mr. Lewis Bluhm. Pre-nuptial events honoring the bride, included a miscellaneous shower given Tuesday evening, Sept. 14, by Miss Minnie A. Jones of Camp Chase.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

Days passed. Marjorie continued with her Red Cross work, knowing nothing of the cloud hanging so near. One day, on glancing out of the window of the living room, she noticed the grave expression on the postman's face. He crossed the lawn, and she hurried to meet him. It was a letter from her husband, but why that narrow margin of black around the edge of the envelope? Tears filled her eyes; blindly she re-entered the house, but finally composed herself and opened the envelope.

The letter was dated July 20th. "My dear little wife," it began. "I have some sad knews for you, and I must hurry, will come to the point at once. Howard was killed in action at Chateau-Thierry three days ago. You may receive an official report before this letter reaches you. I have been on the front for several days, and am now taking advantage of the first opportunity I have had for writing you. Today, I was sent from the front line to rest billets; but how I miss Howard! He was a good brother, and we were inseperable companions. I was with him when he fell. Our regiment was stationed on the south bank of the Marne. The Germans on the north bank crossed the river under cover of the darkness. After they crossed a fierce struggle ensued, and in the face of superior numbers, we retired from our first line trenches. The Americans in this sector were ordered by the French to not counter-attack, but we disregarded the order, and before the following evening, all the Germans south of the Marne where we were stationed were either killed or captured. Let the thought that Howard did no die in vain, comfort you, and try to be glad that our baby is not fatherless."

A few minutes later, Mr. Duncan entered the room, and found his daughter lying insensible on the floor. Her health had been failing of late, and the shock had been too much for her. He placed the letter in his pocket, and hastily summoned a physician, who gave strict orders that the patient be kept very quiet.

Both parents were deeply grieved to hear of the death of their only son, and the care of Marjorie and the baby proved to be too much for Mrs. Duncan who soon became bedfast herself. Ellen Bartlett chanced to come to Weston a few days after the beginning of Marjorie's illness, and volunteered to remain in the home until the sick ones were able to leave their rooms, if that should be before time for the school term to open.

Mr. Duncan engaged an older woman to do the heaviest work, leaving the supervision to Ellen. One day, the doctor gave Ellen a prescription to be filled immediately, and volunteered to stay with the patients until she returned with the medicine. Charles Hartley was overjoyed to see her, and before many evenings the little garden where other lovers had begun their romance was again used for the same purpose. Not until Charles made a declaration of love to her, did Ellen tell him about how matters stood between herself and Ralph.

"You are not engaged, are you?" the anxious lover questioned.

"No, but I am afraid he cares for me; and I gave him too much encouragement. If he were not in the war—" She checked herself, fearing she would say too much.

"If he were not in the war, what?" Charles insisted.

"I--I--It wouldn't be unfair to him, I--if I were to consider your offer, but it seems so mean to allow someone else to make love to me when he is in danger of death."

He looked at her admiringly.

"A girl like you is capable of a love that is worth winning. I will not mention the subject to you again, until he comes back. Then it wil be a fair contest, and I will consider myself fortunate if I win. Tell Mr. Duncan I was here, and am glad his wife and daughter are improving."

Before many minutes he was on his way to the store, regretting the necessity of being temporarily seperated from Ellen, although he admired her all the more because of the ideals she upheld. Mrs. Duncan, after a few weeks of rest, again took charge of her home, and Ellen returned to Stanton just in time to resume her duties in the school rooom. Marjorie finally made her appearance in the dining room at meal time, and gradually was able to assist with the lightest of the housework. As soon as the doctor permitted her, she again became active in Red Cross work, turning out more sweaters, socks, and bandages than any one person in Weston.

CHAPTER XIII

It was a damp rainy day, the kind of weather that seemed to be a part of the program of war. Poison gas, bullets, shells, rats, cooties, rain and mud, all constituted the life of a soldier. When one began to think the noise of machine-guns was abating somewhat, the cry "Gas! Gas!" warned Tommy, Frenchy and Sammy that it was time for the masquerade, when everyone not contemplating suicide hastened to adjust their gas masks. Then when the yellowish smoke melted away in the atmosphere, and the good news came that those in front-line trenches were to go back through communication trenches to rest billets, as another company or regiment was coming to relieve them, one of the three mentioned would think his troubles over for a few days, and they were, all but! Cooties and rats were not partial to front line trenches, and frequented rest billets as well. Many a young man from America who had a few years previously been shocked by the presence of a mosquito in his room at home, was now fast becoming reconciled to sharing his quarters with a whole army of those provoking pests. No wonder a soldier decided to "spend the rest of life in bed" after the war was over.

BOOKS SOLD AT HIGHLAND

Much Time Saved for Pupils—Total of 779 Volumes Handled.

By ARVENE LEE

Rather hurriedly Monday before the opening of school, it was decided to handle new books at Highland building.

Tuesday, the first day of school, each teacher announced that new books would be available at the office for the same price charged down town. A list was taken of the names of those wanting books. These were turned in to the office where the totals were compiled and the order immediately telephoned to the book store. This procedure was followed again the second day. After that the teachers carefully checked over the classes and sent to the office all pupils not having books.

This plan saved much time and saved the school children the long wait in front of the book store downtown in order to gain admittance to purchase their books. The classes were provided with books much sooner this year than ever before.

Our records show that we have sold 779 new books at a total cost of $804.34. No book was allowed to leave the office without being paid for. In this way the large number of books was handled without a cent of loss, and with great convenience to the teachers, pupils and parents.

Mrs. Shields of 491 Catherine St., was hostess to the Amity Embroidery club last Thursday. The following members were present: Mrs. Brandt, Mrs. Hammond, Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Ditrick and Mrs. Park. Mrs. Snuggs and Mrs. Bigler were welcomed in the club as new members. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Brandt.

Young People Rally

The Young People's society of St. Paul's United Evangelical church will meet at the parsonage, 24 S. Warren Ave., next Tuesday evening for the purpose of having a K. L. C. E. rally. The newly elected officers will take their places and plans will be made for a real live young people's society on the Hilltop. At the close of the business hour a social time will be enjoyed.

Mrs. George Baker, 147 Midland Ave., entertained the Glenwood Happy Hour Embroidery club Wednesday, Sept. 29. The following members were present: Mrs. Harry Barclay, Mrs. F. O. Page, Mrs. Fred Hardesty, Mrs. C. H. Schuenberg, Mrs. F. T. Scurry, Mrs. G. P. Morse, Mrs. G. T. Mehring, Mrs. E. C. Williams and the hostess.

The Hilltop W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. O. H. Carter, 69 N. Hague Ave., Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Every member is urged to be present. A good program has been arranged.

REGISTRATION INCREASES

West Broad School Now Has 1001 Pupils—Former Teachers Returned.

West Broad Street school has reached and passed the thousand mark in registration, one thousand and one pupils being on the registration roll last Monday.

In order to prevent half-day sessions for some of the pupils, the kindergarten department has been moved into the auditorium, two grade classes occupying the room formerly occupied by the kindergarten department.

Mrs. Clime and Mrs. Neutzel, who were withdrawn from the regular teaching force at West Broad at the beginning of the school term, to act as substitute teachers for West Side schools, are being returned to West Broad school as regular teachers, making a teaching force of 26 at this school.

AMUSING CHILDREN

Always have something in reserve for that inevitable day when the children have exhausted every resource of their toys. Black paper and small scissors for cutting silhouettes, a magnifying glass, modelling clay, or colored cardboard for making houses and furniture have infinite possibilities. Encourage the child to use his imagination rather than to depend on mechanical toys and he will amuse himself more and annoy you less with "What'll I do."

Presbyterial Meeting

Columbus Presbyterial meeting, district No. 2, will be held in the St. Clair Avenue Presbyterian church, Friday, Oct. 8. An all-day meeting is planned and luncheon will be served in the church. Mrs. E. A. Krapp will preside. Miss Adelaide Brown, returned missionary from India, will be on the program. Miss Brown has been in the mission field over 40 years and will have an interesting message for those attending.

The Philathea Bible class of the St. Paul's United Evangelical Sunday school held their regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Baker, 424 S. Burgess Ave., Tuesday evening. Twelve members of the class responded to the roll call. Officers for ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Davidson; vice president, Mrs. D. F. Baker; secretary, Mrs. Gardner; assistant secretary, Mrs. Ford; treasurer, Mrs. Smith; press reporter, Mrs. N. J. Broadway.

After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs. N. J. Broadway sang a solo and Mrs. H. D. Shultz gave a reading.

SEEK TO REMEDY OVERCROWDING

Notes to Be Issued Against Bond Issue for Building Purposes.

Monday afternoon the board of education contracted for $575,000 in notes to be issued against the $1,161,000 bond issue recently approved for building purposes.

Other business considered by the board was the overcrowded conditions at John Burroughs, McGuffey and West Broad street schools. The board is contemplating renting several vacant storerooms in the vicinity of these schools to be used as class rooms until additions can be built onto the school buildings.

Many pupils at John Burroughs and McGuffey schools have been forced to attend classes on half-time basis due to the crowded conditions ever since school opened in the fall. West Broad has eliminated the necessity of half-time basis, temporarily at least, by the use of the auditorium for the kindergarten department.

The seriousness of the situation makes immediate action necessary, according to Superintendent Collicott. Eleventh avenue junior high school was also overcrowded at the beginning of the term but an expansion was created through renting the old St. Clair Avenue M. E. church building at the corner of Chittenden and St. Clair avenues.

Mr. and Mrs. Moffet West, (Lucille Tipton), 147 N. Wheatland Ave., announce the birth of a son, William Tipton, at White Cross Hospital, Monday, Sept. 27.

All Glenwood Get Together Meeting

Glenwood Methodist Episcopal church will hold an all Glenwood get together meeting in the social rooms of the church Thursday (tonight) at 8 o'clock. Every member and friend of Glenwood is most cordially invited to attend this outstanding Glenwood social gathering of the year. This will be one opportunity to get acquainted with all members and friends you do not know.

Saturday, Oct. 9, is the date set for the marriage of Miss Edith Moser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max E. Moser, 135 E. Whittier St., and Mr. Raymond B. Borland, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Borland, 84 S. Ogden Ave. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. T. Lehmann, pastor of St. John's Evangelical Protestant church, at his home, 674 S. High St.

Notice

A number of score cards of babies entered in the baby contest at the Hilltop picnic are still unclaimed, Dr. J. T. Craddock informs us. Mothers who had children entered in this contest and who have not received score cards may obtain them by calling at Dr. Craddock's office, Broad street and Hague avenue, any afternoon or evening, except Sunday.

A new world record of three thousand consecutive bull's-eyes has been established by L. Samuel Moore, of Newton, Massachusetts. The record was made while firing from the prone position on a fifty-foot range, in the cellar of his home. He fired from eight in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon, with a brief rest between every five hundred shots and time out for lunch. The gun used was a .22-caliber rifle.

CHOKED BY INTRUDER

Mrs. Gladys Brown Awakens Household by Screams When Attacked.

A negro, as yet unidentified, attempted to choke Mrs. Gladys Brown, 28, of 419 Townsend street, early Monday morning, while in bed with her seven-year-old son, Harold.

Mrs. Brown awakened the household by her screams and caused the intruder's escape, who had gained entrance to her bedroom through a window, by the use of a ladder taken from a nearby yard.

As the intruder ran across vacant lots between the Brown home and Sullivant avenue, several shots were fired at him, none of which are believed to have taken effect.

According to the description furnished the police, the intruder wore a light brown coat, dark cap and brown trousers. He was slightly above medium height and is said to have carried a milk bottle in his hand when he was attacking Mrs. Brown. In order to get into the room through the window he had first removed the screen as he stood on the rear porch roof.

Group 3 of the Ladies' Aid society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will meet at the home of Mrs. W. H. Riley, 118 N. Burgess Ave., Thursday afternoon, Oct. 14.

HIGHLAND AVE. P.-T. A. MEETING

Highland Parent-Teacher Association meeting will be held in the portable building in the rear of the main building, Monday evening, Oct. 11. The program will be as follows:

7:30—Reports of secretary, treasurer and chairmen of committees; business meeting.

8:00—Sing, P.-T. A. songs led by Miss Trump.

8:10—Miss Marie Gugle, assistant superintendent of Columbus schools, will talk on the new reading plans.

8:30—Mrs. Paul Benton, our new president, will give her impressions of the state convention.

9:00—A social hour in charge of Mrs. Sharp and Mrs. Cole.

STATE B. Y. P. U. AT HILLCREST

HILLTOP GIRL QUEEN OF AIR

Marylove Jacques Carries Off Honors for Queen of Radio Show.

Marylove Jacques, 74 S. Terrace Ave., was chosen "Queen of the Air" at the Radio Show held at Memorial Hall Tuesday evening, September 28. She carried off first honors, while the crowd cheered and stamped, thereby taking home the diamond ring valued at $400 along with the title.

This is not the first time that she has entered and come out successful in beauty contests. Two years ago, she was in the court of Miss Columbus, and was selected as the prize beauty by both the Mercator and Optomists Clubs, well known business clubs of the city.

She is 18 years of age and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Jacques; Mr. Jacques being the secretary of the B. F. Kerr and Sons Furniture Co.

New Tailor Shop

David Rosin has recently opened a store for general tailoring, repairing, cleaning and pressing at 2281 W. Broad St., which is known as the Prosperity Tailoring Co.

The recent extensive study of radio has caused the prophecy to be made that within a few years heat waves will be transmitted by radio just as sound waves are carried now. Professor Dibble, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is of the opinion that this feat will be accomplished as soon as instruments are discovered for properly controlling the waves, picking them up, holding them, and applying them. The system will help to do away with smoky furnaces and fires caused by overheated ranges.

Week-Day Religious Education for Hilltop

Rev. W. G. Fagan Chairman of Local Committee Co-operating with Federated Churches of Franklin County.

A movement toward the organizing of week-day religious education among the public school pupils of the Hilltop has been recently launched by the Federated Churches of Franklin county in co-operation with the churches of the Hilltop.

This movement, which is in line with a wide spread movement throughout the country, is the result of a deep-seated and far-reaching conviction on the part not only of church leaders but of public school leaders, as well, that there is great need for increased moral and religious training among the children of public school age. In the past this work has been done almost entirely by the Sunday schools, and they have done good work. But when we are confronted with the fact that there are over 38,000,000 children in the United States under 25 years of age who are receiving no moral or religious education from any agency whatever, or in other words, that seven out of every 10 of our boys and girls are not receiving any systematic moral and religious education, we are forced to admit that the Sunday schools do not and cannot provide an adequate religious nurture for our youth.

Thoughtful leaders everywhere are asking the question, How can the moral integrity of a nation be maintained under the present system of meager religious training afforded our boys and girls? In an effort to solve this problem, there has been developing for some time througout the country a definite movement to supplement the work of the church Sunday schools by a system of week-day religious education. This work is now being carried on in 36 states of the union, and Ohio stands first in the extent of its development.

Such cities as Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton and Van Wert have highly developed system and Columbus is rapidly developing the work in certain sections of the city. There are schools at Westerville, Indianola and Northwood and reports show that from 95 to 99 per cent of the public school enrollment are found in these schools of religious training. The teaching and supervision is in the hands of thoroughly trained experts in religious education. The Federated Churches, under whom the work is carried on, is now preparing to begin the work on the Hilltop, and as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made with the public schools for the release of the pupils, the work will commence.

The program calls for three schools conducted in the churches located nearest to the public schools. This year the work will be given in grades three and four only, but it is hoped that next year will see it commenced in the fifth and sixth grades as well. One hour a week will be given to each grade. Before the pupils are released from the public schools requests for such release will be required, on cards provided for this purpose, from the parents concerned. Thus, no children will received this training unless specific request is made by their parents.

The committee in charge of the work consists of representatives from the churches of the Hilltop. Rev. W. G. Fagan, director of religious education at Glenwood Methodist church, is chairman of the committee. This committee is now laying plans for a community-wide canvas for the support of the work of the Hilltop. The work is so important and so vital to every home that it should, and we believe it will, receive the moral and financial support of the residents of the district.

The Home Guards and King's Heralds of Glenwood church will meet Monday after school at the church. Every member is urged to attend. This is dues paying day, 50c. Vanilla will be on hand for those who wish to sell it to pay their dues. Anyone having vanilla money from last year please turn it in at this meeting.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

On the day in question, Ralph Dalton had been sent with his regiment to the firing line by Captain Bartlett of the Thirtieth Division. Ralph apparently felt as though the entire responsibility of attacking the Hindenburg line that day in September had been given to him, as he placed both feet on the firing step of the trench, and at the signal started firing toward the German lines. The roar of machine-guns was deafening, but every man heard the words passed along the line: "Over the top with the best of luck." They were to take the German first line trenches. With leaps and bounds the order was obeyed. At such a time, one man seemed extremely insignificant, but Ralph Dalton was one of the vast number that went "over the top" but "the best of luck" did not apply to him, as he never reached his objective. Instead, he was being taken to a first aid station, after which he was sent back to a base hospital, where he arrived in an unconscious state. When he awoke, to his surprise, a beautiful young person who looked like an angel, with the exception of the cross made of red material over her forehead, was leaning over him. Where was he? When he felt himself waking, he fully expected to see the leering face of a huge Boche staring in his direction, but what a wonderful surprise! The young woman placed her thumb and forefinger on his wrist, and with a satisfied expression made a notation on a sheet of paper.

"Are you certain my pulse is O. K? Perhaps you had better test it again," Ralph said, not meaning to be exactly flirtatious.

"You must not talk, Doctor's orders," was all she said. Her sweet look gave him a strong desire to disobey orders, but she was gone before he could think of what to say.

For weeks, they kept him very quiet; at least, they tried to. When he was able to be classed as a convalescent, and was no longer confined to his cot, he managed to write Ellen a letter, but what could he write. Miss Moreland, the nurse he had taken quite a fancy to, was not a very appropriate subject. Finally, the letter was completed, sealed and stamped; and young Dalton was soon deep in conversation with his favorite nurse, when an ominous sound was heard overhead, and an enemy airplane hovered in the sky. The two young Americans were seated outdoors near an entrance to the hospital. Seeing that danger was very imminent, Miss Moreland hastened inside to give warning to the other nurses and Doctors, so that patients could be moved from the building as quickly as possible. Part of the work was accomplished when the crash came. Ralph Dalton was standing near Vera Moreland when a large beam knocked her insensible. He had made an effort to save her, but the suddenness of the blow prevented him. He gathered her in his arms, carried her out of the building, and vainly tried to revive her. What was the reason for that terrible ache and despair in his heart? He had witnessed death in many forms during the past year and a half. Why should he, who had planned to seek the hand of Ellen Bartlett as soon as he returned to America, be so overcome by this happening. Then, joy! She was waking; her eyelid quivered, and soon afterward her blue eyes met his, with a tender loving look. To him, at that moment, the world had been created for two people. Everything else, even the continuous sound of artillery in the distance, was forgotten or ignored. Ralph had found a true mate. He lowered his face to hers, but drew back as though ashamed of the action. From some of the letters he had received from Ellen, he surmised that she was waiting for him. What would she say if she knew of this sudden transfer of his affections? But the first affair was merely infatuation; this was love, real love. Why not yield to it, the thing that comes only once in a lifetime? The moment of temptation passed, and Ralph did not yield. He carried her to a place of safety, and was soon left alone with his troubles.

One day, after a hard struggle at the front, when many dying and wounded were brought to the hospital, one of the men chanced to be Captain Bartlett, who was placed on a cot next to Ralph. The captain gave Ralph an account of how the Americans, aided by British and Australian troops, had driven the Germans from the St. Quentin tunnel on the St. Quentin Canal. When the Australians arrived at the mouth of the tunnel, they found it filled with boats, in which German troops were stationed. It was the Australians' duty to clean out the tunnel from below, while the Americans and English counter-attacked and fought hard to retain their position. Underground passages large enough to house the Germans connected the Canal with the top of the hill. By bringing up more men, the British and Americans broke through the Hindenburg line, and followed the retreating troops of the German army. Captain Bartlett was wounded during the last few moments of the struggle, but continued to issue orders to his men, until he fell to the ground, exhausted from the loss of blood.

REPAIRS WHILE YOU WAIT

The faster we die, the more alive we are," says Edwin E. Slosson, in "Sermons of a Chemist." In other words unless our bodies continually throw off waste matter, we cannot continue to live.

The body keeps changing. "The blood changes its composition constantly," says this scientist who sometimes speaks from the pulpit. "But even the particles of lime, carbon, and phosphorus in the solidest bone are constantly being taken out and replaced, just as a railroad bridge is rebuilt, piece by piece, without tearing it down at any one time. Our eyelashes last us only about a hundred to a hundred and fifty days.

"We get a whole new skin oftener than we get clothes—that is, most of us—for that is renewed every month. The only part of the body that is not completely changed in the course of a few years at the longest, is the enamel of our teeth, and that is why we have those two plagues of humanity, toothache and dentists."

"FOR FREEDOM"

"Does your shoulder give you much pain?" the younger man asked.

"Not so very much," the captain replied. "I hope to be back on duty within a week."

Just then the nurse entered, and ordered both men to be quiet. Captain Bartlett noticed the look Ralph bestowed upon her, and wondered what the boy's intentions were. He had many opportunities for watching the two, and before many days, came to the conclusion that his daughter was making a mistake to wait for Ralph.

Before the armistice was signed, Ralph again saw active service, and his comrades continually warned him against taking unnecessary risks adding tauntingly that the next nurse might not be so attractive as the first. Ralph knew that to be a positive fact, but refrained from saying so.

CHAPTER XIV.

When the Americans, aided by the French and British, shattered the Hindenburg line at the St. Quentin Tunnel, the Germans retreated eastward, pillaging towns and villages as they went. Meanwhile, beginning the last week in September, American and French troops were fighting in the Argonne—the French west of the forest, and General Pershing's troops, east of it, between the forest and the Meuse River. The army that had entered France so confidently was forced to evacuate the territory they had occupied in a different frame of mind. Ludendorff's drive had been a complete failure, and the plan to annex the Belgian coast ports to Germany ended with disastrous results to the German army.

The Argonne sector had been occupied by the Germans for about four years, and they believed it to be impregnable. Therefore, they were looking for an attack east of this locality, in Alsace-Lorraine. There, all of their big guns were stationed, also, their reserves.

In the box cars of a freight train which zigzagged around back and forth over the map of France, some of the troops from Chateau-Thierry were being transferred to the Argonne front. Standing erect in the box cars, they slept, as it was impossible to lie down. Private Richard Schreibner had had his nap, and standing near the outer edge of his car, could see through a crevice, the flare of bursting shells in the distance. Was that their destination? Yes, at this particular moment they were headed that way. No, he must have been mistaken. The engineer had changed the course again, and they were headed in another direction. His mind was filled with thoughts of home. Would the war ever end? Would he ever see his wife again, and their infant son? Only time could decide. The long, wearisome ride came to an end; and the boys from the box cars went from bad to worse. Provoking enough to be herded like cattle in a freight train, but marching along roads that had not been used for years, and which were now covered with tall weeds, now and then stumbling over barbed wire concealed in tall grasses; being compelled to detour around large shell craters; carrying all kinds of supplies on their backs where it was impossible to use trucks—could not be considered an improvement over the former situation.

BIG JIM KRAMER AT HILLCREST

Special Singer to Accompany Him Beginning Monday—Miss Lewis, Pianist.

Evangelistic services at Hillcrest Baptist church start Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock with "Big Jim" Kramer, nationally noted evangelist of Denver, Colorado, in charge.

Special singing has been planned and a well-known singer has promised his services. The singer will be present at the meetings Sunday and from then through the services.

People of the Hilltop and Columbus in general are looking forward to this series of meetings to be held here for the next three weeks. Kramer, commonly known as "Big Jim," the cow boy preacher, is known throughout the United States. He held services here last year for two weeks with such marked success that he was invited to return again this year.

The music committee has also been very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Mary Kathryn Lewis, a girl of Welch parentage, as pianist for the first ten days of the meeting. She is a graduate of Capital College of Music and has followed evangelistic work for some time. She has been associated with Billy Sunday and has accompanied Homer Rodheaver on many occasions.

Columbus people who are interested in the best kind of services are urged to be present to hear "Big Jim" Kramer at Hillcrest Baptist church beginning Monday evening.

An enthusiastic crowd of Glenwood women attended the membership party at the home of Mrs. M. W. Seiller, 29 Eldon Ave., Monday afternoon. The occasion was the annual membership drive of the missionary societies. A goal of 200 new members during the month of October, was accepted and plans made for its accomplishment.

MOURNS LOSS OF OLD FRIENDS

A. H. Budd, the veteran barber on the Hilltop, is this week mourning the departure of two very dear and intimate acquaintances.

Twenty years ago Mr. Budd established himself in this community with a two-chair barber shop, and these two chairs, of the latest models in their day, have seen service with him ever since until this week.

Mr. Budd believes all good friends must part some time, so this week he replaced these two old friends, along with two others, with four new, sanitary, up-to-date chairs.

Not to show any partiality, Mr. Budd also discarded his old sideboard, and has replaced it with new marble framed mirrors.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stotts, 97 N. Warren Ave., spent last week at Waverly, Ohio.

Miss Helen Ely, 104 Westgate Ave., has been employed as teacher of home economics at Somerset, Ohio.

Emerson Sandusky, son of Police Officer H. H. Sandusky, 1991 W. Broad St., is spending the winter in San Antonio, Texas. He formerly was assistant timekeeper for the Columbus waterworks. He has been in ill health for about four years.

TWO CHANCES TO REGISTER

Registration for First Two Days Fall Below That of Last Year.

Only two more days remain in which voters will have an opportunity to qualify for the November elections, and all who desire to vote this fall must register.

Next Friday and Saturday, Oct. 15 and 16, are the last two registration days this year.

Thus far the registration this year falls short of the first two days' registration last year, according to the board of elections.

Last Thursday, the second opportunity for voters to register, only 12,629 qualified, which, together with the 14,345 registered the week previous, makes a total of 26,974 qualified thus far.

Nineteenth ward carried off honors for the biggest registration, 1186 voters qualifying in that section. Fifth ward is next with 896. The lightest registration was in the Fourteenth, which had only 460.

The Fada radio franchise has again been awarded to Floyd A. Martin, 303 N. Harris Ave. The new Fada 6 and 8-tube sets are acclaimed the most powerful sets in existence, being completely shielded to eliminate back door reception and increase intensity of signals.

Fog Causes Freight Trains to Collide

Fireman Jumps From Engine—Caboose, Box Car and Tank Car Ignite From Engine—Engineer Remains on Engine.

Due to the dense fog two Pennsylvania freight trains crashed in a rear-end collision early Tuesday morning at the Hague avenue crossing.

A. R. Weakley, Cincinnati, fireman, was rushed to Grant hospital after having jumped from the engine of the rear train. Surgeons said his condition was not serious. Minor cuts and bruises were his only injuries.

A caboose, two box cars and a tank car were wrecked and soon caught fire from the rear locomotive. A total estimate of damages is $2500 as stated by Superintendent P. W. Sullivan.

Three extra freighters were en route to Columbus from Cincinnati. Due to a necessary halt at the Big Four crossing, a flagman was sent out from the second train, but failed to do much good on account of the fog. The third train was thought to have been a mile or two in the rear.

W. G. Puckett, Cincinnati, engineer on the third train, stated that he saw the fuse lit by the flagman, but it was too late. In an effort to stop he threw on the air brakes and was able to slow down to approximately nine miles an hour. Engineer Puckett kept his post at the throttle as his engine rammed the caboose of the train in front.

Conductor R. Pownall narrowly escaped death as he jumped from the caboose which was struck. The oil tank next to the caboose was thrown across the engine of the rear train.

Columbus firemen extinguished the flames of the ignited cars. Police aid was necessary to withold the gathering throng, soon assembled to view the wreckage.

Irish Pastor to Speak at Hoge Memorial

Dr. Frederick G. Bell of Randalstown, Antrim county, Ireland, who is here with four other representatives of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, of Northern Ireland, in the interest of bringing Ireland in line with this country on the temperance question. Ireland is sorely oppressed by liquor traffic. The economic situation in Ireland at present is desperate. In Belfast, a city of 240,000, there are 63,000 persons out of work. The shipbuilding and the linen industries are at a stand still.

Dr. Bell will occupy the Hoge Memorial pulpit both morning and evening and at 10:30 he will speak on "The Gospel of a Second Chance," and again at 7:30 on "Love's Endearing Memorials." Dr. Bell is a most eloquent and charming speaker, and one who holds his audience spellbound. The public is cordially invited to hear him at both services.

FRUSTRATE BURGLARY

Police Capture Two Men and Woman Attempting to Rob Hilltop Home.

Two men and a woman were arrested by police last Thursday afternoon while they were attempting to burglarize the home of W. L. Turner, 661 S. Eureka Ave.

Patrolman George M. Spanabel, while returning home from a nearby grocery, saw suspicious actions about the Turner home, and when he and Patrolman McDaniels entered the house they found two men, Frank Dorn, 2353 N. High St., and Albert Luty, 2482 Adams St., who had the wearing apparel of Mr. and Mrs. Turner and other valuables piled upon the floor. Upon the appearance of the patrolmen, the intruders attempted to escape, but were captured.

Dorn, who is a baker, is at liberty under $2500 bond, awaiting action on a charge of housebreaking, police say.

A woman, who was awaiting in a machine in front of the house, attempted to escape but was later caught.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. O. E. Carlson, a Hilltop Author

With the coming of October, came cold, rainy weather, and hurry calls for blankets, sweaters and wool socks went out, as troops were shivering in clothing suitable only for summer use.

Onward they went toward the goal. Their progress most of the time was very slow. As American soldiers cut lanes through one belt of barbed wire, the Germans concealed themselves behind another belt, and continued firing at the Americans. One evening, after nearly twenty-four hours of hard fighting, Richard Schreibner and a few of his comrades lowered themselves into a deep shell hole, for the purpose of being able to sleep with a certain amount of safety. Trench warfare, used almost entirely in other sections of the western front, was not used in the Argonne sector. The boys stayed in dugouts and large deep shell holes when off duty. By this time, Richard had become used to the terrifying noise made by artillery, and the sight of death on every hand, but he found it impossible to become accustomed to irregular sleeping hours. On this particular night, his patience was sorely tried. He had thrown himself on the muddy floor of his present abode, and was soon dreaming of home, when he was rudely awakened by another soldier, who told him that the captain wished to see Private Schreibner. Richard wished the captain had chosen someone else, but knew from past experiences that it was a good idea to obey such orders promptly; so a few seconds later found him listening to instructions.

"A German division is stationed a fourth-mile north of us, and as they are anxious to recover some of the ground we have captured, I am expecting them to attack us at any time. I want you to creep along the ground until you come to their wire entanglements. Then see whether they have cut lanes through the wire. That is all."

Richard saluted, and was soon off to obtain the desired information. He slowly advanced toward the German lines, crawling a large part of the way on his hands and knees. After much difficulty, he reached the enemy entanglements, and after a thorough search, found that, as yet, no lanes had been made; and began the journey back to the American lines. When he had covered half the distance, Richard discovered that a letter which he had recently received from Marjorie was missing. It had been in his pocket two minutes before, and could not be far away. He crawled around in a circle, searching for the missing letter, and having found it, resumed his journey as he supposed, back to the American lines.

He soon came to a belt of wire, and did not notice that the stakes were iron instead of wood, only noticing the lanes cut through the barrier.

"They have been making preparations for another battle while I have been gone," Richard thought. The truth of the matter was that this was the German's belt of wire, and they had cut a few passage ways through it after he had started back to the American lines. The sentry on duty saw at a glance that this young man was an American soldier who had lost his bearings, and being able to speak English said "Password!"

Richard was so tired and so sleepy. How he longed for a little rest. He foolishly blurted out the American password, and before many minutes was aware of his mistake, when he saw the leering face of a German commander staring at him. He was at once made a prisoner, and to his surprise, a young German bearing a strong resemblance to himself was led in his direction by an officer.

"You are to change clothes with this man, and be quick about it," the officer sternly commanded Richard.

By using force, the exchange was made, and the man who was to impersonate Richard Schreibner was sent back to the American lines, with instructions to report to the captain that the Germans were making no preparations for an attack.

Richard, although he had suffered no bodily harm, was entirely broken in spirit. Why did he have to permit this outrage? Yet, what else could he do? One man would have no chance whatever with a whole regiment of Germans. Would the captain see that the man who returned was not the one who had been ordered to go?

No, captains are only human, and become sleepy as well as privates, and when the spy disguised with an American uniform, reported at the captain's headquarters that, as yet, no preparations had been made for an attack by the Germans, the captain was apparently satisfied, but shortly after, received a message from higher authority that in two hours from the time the order was received, the Americans were to drive the Germans from their position. Fortunately, the spy did not learn of this. According to orders he had received from the German officer, he was to remain with the Americans for a few hours before returning to the German lines.

He returned to that spot according to instructions, but was accompanied by a force of Americans, who made a surprise attack on the enemy, and after a fierce struggle, the enemy was in full retreat.

The next morning, the soldiers were lined up for roll call. Several names were called, and each of the owners answered "Here," which was passed down the line until it reached the captain.

"Private Schreibner!"

No answer.

"Private Schreibner!" louder.

Still no answer.

Thatcher Active in Tax Reduction

People of Columbus have saved over $2,000,000 in taxes in the past three years through the activities of Arthur J. Thatcher, county auditor. How this was done is revealed in a statement recently received in this office.

In 1924 Mr. Thatcher purposely estimated the tax duplicate $22,000,000 higher than it actually was. The result was a reduction of $1.20 in taxes on each thousand dollars of taxable property; a total saving of over $700,000.

The next year, 1925, he found that the Columbus school board had a $2,000,000 surplus in its treasury. He compelled them to use this surplus for operating schools instead of levying taxes as they had planned.

This year, 1926, as a result of his introduction of a more complete accounting system for the sinking fund, it was found that Franklin county had nearly $1,000,000 more in its sinking fund than was necessary to pay off its current bonds and interest. In order to keep down the tax rate in spite of increased demands by the city and school, Mr. Thatcher caused the county to reduce its requests for funds and use up this surplus. That he was successful is shown by the fact that the tax rate in Columbus for 1925 and the rate now set for 1926 are both $20.60 per thousand.

Hilltop residents may be interested in knowing that the following people are employed by Auditor Thatcher and are residents of the West Side: Harry Brady, 404 South Hague Avenue; Charles T. Graham, 241 Hawkes Ave.; H. J. Kline, 479 Hilltonia Ave.; John O'Rourke, 409 W. Rich St.; R. C. Schmeiser, 2532 W. Broad St., and N. A. Thatcher, 124 Highland Ave.

TO INSTALL NEW PUMP AT WATERWORKS

Plan to Build New Addition to Present Building.

C. B. Hoover, superintendent of the city division of water, announced last week that plans are almost complete for increasing the capacity of the city waterworks plant 30,000,000 gallons per day, increasing the possible distribution to 95,000,000 daily.

This will be accomplished, according to present plans by the building of an addition to the rear of the present waterworks building in Dublin road and the installation of one 30,000,000 gallon turbine driven unit.

It is planned to remove the three low lift pumps from the main building, where they are now housed, into the new structure, when completed, and install the new 30,000,000 gallon unit in the main building. The station is now equipped with two 20,000,000 gallon and one 25,000,000 gallon units.

The peak of the past summer reached a pumpage of 56,000,000 gallons per day, which is very near the maximum capacity of Columbus' water pumping station.

Superintendent Hoover pointed out that if one of the pumps breaks during the summer, under present conditions, there are no facilities to take care of a summer demand. At present the pumps are in perfect working order, "but they might break next summer during a big demand," Superintendent Hoover said.

The adition to the pumping station will be one story in height, the greater amount of space being below the ground line.

City council, Monday night, passed a bond issue of $150,000 to provide funds for new water mains, which will also increase the water facilities of the city with the addition of the new pumping unit.

Grade Crossing Elimination Vitally Important to Hilltop

Bond Issue of $750,000 to Be Voted on at November Election Would Eliminate West Broad St. Danger Point and Four Others if Passed.

Of vital importance to every resident of Columbus at the coming election is the bond issue for $750,000, passed by city council early in August, covering the cost of the city's share in the elimination of five grade crossings in the city, viz: the Big Four crossing at Broad street and Camp Chase; the N. & W., on the East Side; P. C. C. & St. L., on Cleveland avenue, and the Eleventh and Seventeenth avenue crossings.

These crossings are not only great danger points, but are annoying nuisances to everyone who has occasion to cross them. Automobile traffic has increased to such proportions that it is imperative that the grade crossings be eliminated.

The West Broad and Big Four crossing is an especially dangerous one from the fact that the interurban track, immediately after crossing the railroad, swings to the north, compelling autoists traveling west to cross to the left side of the road when crossing the Big Four tracks, and the other crossings included in the bond issue are just as hazardous. In fact there can be nothing good said about a grade crossing.

By placing this bond issue on the ballot council has given the citizens of Columbus an opportunity to express their wish in the matter. We of the Hilltop are proud of our civic pride and the only way we can keep on the progressive road is to prepare for the future by eliminating all hazards.

Residents of other sections of the city are especially active in supporting this bond issue, and the Hilltop will surely do its part along with them by getting behind this issue and putting it across.

HIGHLAND P.-T. A.

Monday night, Oct. 11, the first meeting of the Highland P.-T. A. was held in the portable building with a fair attendance. Mrs. Benton, the president, had charge of the meeting which had many interesting features. Foremost among these was a talk about the new reading methods by Madge Perrill of Ohio Avenue school. Mr. W. Fagan, religious director at Glenwood M. E. church, also spoke very interestingly on the problem of religious education in the schools and discussion of several phases of this was called for. The social hour was in charge of Mrs. Sharp. It is hoped that the next meeting will be more largely atended.

The Misses Mary Elizabeth and Virginia Pauline Craft, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Orin H. Craft, 130 Guernsey Ave., were brides in a double wedding which took place Thursday evening, Oct. 14, at 8 o'clock, at the home of their parents. Mary Elizabeth was married to Mr. Ray Swicegood, son of Mrs. Anna Swicegood of Dayton, Tenn. Virginia became the bride of Mr. Sam Toy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Toy of Kinney pike. Rev. E. E. McFarlane of Hillcrest Baptist church performed the double ceremony, which was witnessed by near relatives and a few close friends. A reception for other guests was held from 9 until 10 o'clock. Preceding the ceremony Mr. E. Ray Evans sang the solo, "I Love You," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Clyde D. Moore, who also played the bridal march. Following the reception, Mr. Swicegood and his bride left for a two weeks' motoring trip through Tennessee and other southern points. After their return both couples will be at home to their friends at 1060 Ridgeview road.

Central Defeats West

Central High school by various line plunges and passes defeated the West High eleven by a score of 16 to 0 Saturday afternoon at Central field.

This leaves four undefeated teams in the race for the city championship. West and Aquinas are practically out of the championship run, each team having been defeated twice.

"BIG JIM" KRAMER

The Cowboy Evangelist, Drawing Large Crowds at Hillcrest Baptist Church.

IS NATIONALLY KNOWN.

Singer and Pianist of Unusual Abilities Have Prominent Part in Meetings.

He is truly a sensationalist. "But the church of today needs the man who is able to create a sensation."

So says "Big Jim" Kramer, nationally known evangelist, who began a series of meetings at Hillcrest Baptist church on Monday night.

Each night of the past week has found a larger attendance at the Kramer meetings.

Mr. Kramer came to Columbus from Chicago where he preached his last sermon on Sunday night before one of the largest church gatherings in the history of that city.

The Hillcrest meetings are expected to reach the climax of attendance on Sunday night, when Dr. Kramer's subject will be especially interesting.

People of Columbus, and Hilltop in particular, now have an opportunity to hear one of America's greatest evangelistic singers, namely, Mr. Frank "Bill" McCravy. Mr. McCravy will take part in each service for the next two weeks. He comes to Columbus from the Green Street Baptist church of Spartainburg, S. C.

He is known to many in the south as "The Sweet Singer of the South," and was recently selected by the General Phonograph Co. as the best evangelistic hymn singer in the southern field, and has for some time made hymn records for the above company.

Miss Mary Katherine Lewis of this city is pianist for the revival. Miss Lewis is also well-known, having taken part in meetings with "Billy" Sunday and accompanied Bodebeaver.

Bits of sermons to date:

"There are too many church cemeteries."

"No one can be a crusader for a cause which he will denounce tomorrow."

"It doesn't matter what a man believes."

"I'm going to bring you sermons I have never given before."

"My conception of the church is a great gospel factory in which human souls are formed."

"Truth is the most narrow thing in the world. Application is not narrow."

Knocked Unconscious and Hung on Fence

While walking home on Central avenue, late last Thursday night, Robert Merrick, 74 S. Central Ave., was knocked unconscious. When he regained consciousness he was hanging by one foot from an iron picket in a fence surrounding the imbecile asylum on Central avenue. Fingerprints on his neck showed he had been choked. He told police that he had not been robbed.

Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Clark and family, 47 N. Oakley Ave., motored to Croton last Sunday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Patterson, formerly of the Hilltop.

Everyone can take part in the parade, which will form at Whitethorne avenue at 7:30 o'clock, march to Hague avenue and then countermarch to Park avenue.

Two prizes of $10 each will be awarded to the most comically dressed man and woman, and the neatest dressed man and woman; also two prizes of $5 each for the most comically dressed boy and girl, and the neatest dressed boy and girl.

Prizes for this feature will be awarded at South Park avenue and West Broad street, where the parade will terminate.

Everyone on the Hilltop is expected to take part in this party. Come masked if you can, but if you do not feel like coming in a disguise, come any way, but come, have a good time and help others do likewise.

HERE AND THERE
By C. C. H.

Hats off! All eyes are on the Hilltop as it marches to its superior place in Columbus Communities.

The new City Hall is to face West Broad street. Even the public officials are now looking toward the Hilltop.

Historical readings show that when Abraham Lincoln's father bought his first farm he paid for it in whiskey. Now we ask, where is the fellow that said history does not repeat itself?

From the number of antique shops found along the main highways one would judge that the world had grown old very suddenly.

Mussolini seems to hold the seat of attraction now. People have even began to wonder if he by any chance could be a second Kaiser Bill? We think it needless to discuss him but at the same time some of his economic practices in running a government seem to have plenty of room to be practiced in the United States.

Some people are so lazy they lay awake at night wishing someone would get up and find another cover.

"Welcome to our Hilltop," is the greeting we give to the opening of the street car track and paved street on West Broad street.

JUST A WORD TO MOTHERS

I am sure it is the desire of every mother's heart to want their children to grow up to be honest useful men and women.

Living in these days when youth seems to rule the day, are we as mothers doing our best to train our children?

What are we doing to guard our sons against the biggest crime set for young men of to-day, auto theft?

Both of my sons have head their scooters taken from in front of stores on Broad street, while they were in the store purchasing something.

Now the parents of those boys who brought those toys home know they don't belong to them. I am sure the mothers don't question their children thoroughly enough as to where they got them.

The young man that will take the auto tomorrow you may be sure started by taking something smaller yesterday.

I am trusting parents will be more interested in their children. As to questioning them about their new "found" toys or things supposed to be given them by other children.

With the Juvenile Court showing such an increase in larceny, mothers and fathers as well, must watch the little things while the child is yet tender and whose heart is open for instructions.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. E. O. Carleton, a Hilltop Author

Private Schreibner was placed on the list "missing in action." Later in the day, a body, mangled beyond recognition, was found on the battlefield, certain insignia on the remnants of the uniform identifying it as Private Richard Schreibner.

CHAPTER XV.

Little Dicky Schreibner was amusing his mother and Ellen Bartlett with his baby pranks in the living room of the Duncan home at Weston. How gleefully he laughed when they carefully stacked his blocks one on top of the other, after which the baby fist was launched forward scattering the small cubes in all directions. Then he would make an attempt to crawl, which was considered quite wonderful by the onlookers.

The child grew tired of his play, and was soon sound asleep in his little white bed. Marjorie heard a footstep on the porch. It was time for the postman. She fairly flew to the mailbox, as it had been some time since she had last heard from her husband. She reached her hand into the box, and pulled out a letter. It was from France, but the address was typewritten. A sudden fear possessed her. This message, whatever it contained, must have come from Army Headquarters. She nervously opened the envelope, when she heard a step behind her. Her father took the letter from her hand, and asked her permission to open it, which she readily gave him.

As he read the short message, a sad look came into his eyes, but he made a strong effort to hide his grief, and placed the letter in his pocket.

"Oh, father, what is it?" Marjorie questioned hysterically. "What did they say?"

"My little daughter, I am sorry it is necessary for me to tell you that misfortune has come to Richard. He was——" Mr. Duncan hesitated. The word "killed" seemed to choke him. He again attempted to say it, but could not bear to see the results, so he went on: "wounded in action; and they have faint hopes of his recovery."

Marjorie watched the expression on her father's face, and knew that he had not told her the truth about the matter.

"Father, you were trying to tell me news even sadder than that; let me see that message," she said, trying to be calm. He saw that she was determined to know the worst.

"He was killed in action on the Argonne front September 30th."

When news of her brother's death had reached her, she had been able to relieve that awful heartache with tears, but now she felt as though she had been turned to stone. She could not cry, although tears would have been a relief. Blindly, she went from room to room, with no particular purpose in view. She felt insane, wanted no one to come near her, seldom ate anything. She found it hard to sleep, and when slumber came to her at last, it was only to dream of horrible things. She would waken, and remain for hours in one position, wondering why such things had to be. Why this war, where so many had died horrible deaths, when they should have been enjoying the best part of life? All because the military rulers of Germany wanted to conquer the world.

One morning Mrs. Duncan entered her daughter's room, and noticed the deep flush of her cheeks. Tenderly, the mother laid her hand on that of Marjorie's. It was feverishly warm, and Mrs. Duncan could see that the girl, although her eyes were wide open, was unaware of the mother's presence. A physician was summoned, who gave orders that no one, not even members of the family, was to enter the sick room.

For weeks, she hovered near death, and while the baby piteously cried for its mother, the doctor, standing by the bedside, had little hopes for the mother's life. She was in a delirium.

"Richard, yes, I'll always love you. You'll come back to me, won't you?" and she cried like a child. Then, her mind reverted to another thought.

"My little baby, let me see it. I want it so," and she sprang up as if to leave the room, but fell back exhausted. She seemed to sleep, and suddenly woke, loooking wilder than ever.

"Richard, Oh Richard, they've killed you. Won't I ever see you again?"

The mother opened the door, and motioned to the doctor.

-the Light that Failed

SOMETIMES a single burning brand falling upon an inflammable roof starts a conflagration that wipes out a whole city.

More often it means the total destruction of the building upon which it falls.

But such a burning brand may be truly called the light that failed when it falls upon a roof of Johns-Manville Asbestos.

When you roof or re-roof remember just one thing—get an Asbestos roof—and you may then forget the roof for as long as the building stands.

Write, call, or telephone us for full particulars.

Grade Crossing Bonds Before Voters Tuesday

Opportune Time for Residents of City to Eliminate Dangerous Hazards—Duty of Every Resident to Vote "Yes" on This Bond Issue.

On Tuesday, November 2nd Columbus voters go to the polls for the purpose of electing persons to represent them in the government. At the same time another question of vital importance is given to them for their direct decision. Every voter is urged to vote "Yes" for grade crossing bonds.

At present these many crossings are a hindrance to public traffic and thousands of dollars are lost yearly in the form of lost time. Probably more important is the fact that there is an ever present menace to the lives of those who are forced to travel over these grade crossings.

There will be eleven sets of tracks removed and a new era of safety in traffic will be established if the voters decide to support the bond issue.

Hilltop voters are urged to vote for these bonds because of the fact that they will thereby abolish the crossing of the Big Four at West Broad street and Camp Chase. The annual daily traffic of this crossing is pointed out to be 5200 vehicles. This is on the route of the national highway and thousands of motorists use this during the summer months. Besides causing delay to traffic due to train movements, the lives of these motorists are endangered.

The city council has expressed its approval of the $750,000 bond issue and are now waiting to start to work in elimination of these eleven crossings. merchant and resident, also former merchants and residents, also former councilman, states, "The time is approaching when there will not be a grade crossing in the United States. Columbus has made wonderful strides in its elimination of hazardous loss of life and property, and yet our tax rate is lower than that of the average city in Ohio."

This work of elimination is expected to be drawn out over a period of two years and in this manner the taxpayers would not be assessed for the total amount at one time.

A fifty-five (55) per cent vote is required.

Voters should decide this question of railroad hazards at once. Tuesday, Nov. 2, is the accepted time. Failure to act properly upon such a vital issue may result in loss of many lives before such an opportunity will be presented again. Every citizen who has the interest of the city of Columbus at heart and a desire to serve humanity is expected to vote "YES" for the railroad crossing bonds.

Highland School to Hold Assembly

Highland school will hold an assembly meeting in the Glenwood M. E. church next Monday, Nov. 1, at 9:45 a. m. At this time public recognition will be given those 9A pupils who, because of excellent conduct and scholarship during their junior high school years, have been elected to membership in the Excelsior society, the honor group of the Highland Junior High school. There are 44 pupils who will graduate from Highland in February provided present subjects are all passed. Of this number 11 have been elected to "Excelsior." The scholarship requirements for this society are very high and a membership of 25 per cent of a class is unusual. The following pupils have been chosen:

Gertrude Alford, Betty Cannon, Frances Herron, Frances Marsh, Jean Randall, Lois Biddle, Jessie Dodd, Eileen Langstaff, Martha Millikin, Marjorie Simmons and Aileen Lanthorne.

Parents and friends are invited to attend this assembly meeting.

Two of these Eagle Scouts, John Birle and Charles Shanely, are now commissioned assistant scoutmasters, in which capacity they are serving the troop very efficiently. The new registration included the names of 32 scouts.

Election of non-commissioned officers Friday evening resulted as follows: Senior patrol leader Lawrence Tracy; patrol leaders, Elmer Smith, Russell Kadel, Staley Shanely and John Thornton; scribe, Lawrence Minchall; assistant scribe, Leon Montgomery; quartermaster, Charles Shanely; librarian, Charles Davis.

A hallowe'en party and week-end camp is being planned by the troop at their cabin this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Oilman (Ruth Henslee), 220 S. Eureka Ave., announce the birth of a son, Oct. 18, John Lester.

AUTO MONOXIDE CAUSES DEATH

W. H. Curran Believed to Have Committed Suicide Because of Ill Health.

Police and Coroner Murphy were led to believe that William H. Curran, aged 50, of 159 S. Warren Ave., ended his life due to ill health. A note found in Curran's automobile helped to bring such a decision.

Curran was found late last Thursday lying over the steering wheel of his automobile in the garage in the rear of his home. The motor was running and all doors were closed. The accumulated carbon monoxide gas given off by the motor was the death agent.

He was discovered by Charles Sampson, 11, of 163 S. Warren Ave., who noticed smoke coming from the Curran garage and went to investigate. An attempt was made to save Mr. Curran after rushing him to Mt. Carmel hospital, but was of no avail.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nellie Curran, and four sons.

He was at the time of his death employed in a gasoline station on West Broad street. He came to Columbus from Corning, Ohio, where he had been engaged in the hardware business.

Funeral services were held Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Riddle were happily surprised Monday evening, Oct. 25, when the members of the Eldon Avenue Dinner club gathered at their home to give them the old-time "belling," it being their fortieth wedding anniversary. After receiving congratulations, the couple were escorted to the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. W. Walton, where a very pleasant evening was spent, the most interesting feature being a mock wedding, with Mr. Graham Prior officiating. The principals in the wedding were Mrs. H. R. Gibson, groom; Mr. M. W. Seiller, bride; Miss Winifred Mott, flower girl; Mrs. L. Shanely, ring bearer; Mrs. S. W. Six, as father of the bride; Mrs. Royal Millikin as best man, while Mr. Millikin was maid of honor. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. J. W. Johnson sang "O Promise Me." Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. M. W. Seiller and Mrs. J. N. Johnston. A large bouquet of chrysanthemums was presented Mr. and Mrs. Riddle, with the wish that they might live to celebrate many more anniversaries.

CARRY JOKES TO EXTREMES

Richardson Avenue Residents Justly Indignant Over Property Damage.

Several boys on the Hilltop are in danger of being taken in hand by the law, due to their premature Hallowe'en celebration. Three West Side youths have actually been suspected and clues may lead to their arrest this week. Chief of Police French says they will be promptly arrested and fines or other necessary procedure will follow.

These misdemeanors have occurred, chiefly on South Richardson avenue:

Two weeks before the date for such a celebration so-called young ruffians began their work of destroying and damaging property by an attack on two cement urns valued at $25 each in front of the home of G. B. Russell, of 69 S. Richardson Ave. These pieces were completely torn down and broken. A similar act was committed a few doors south on the property of Detective Welker.

In the same vicinity pails of garbage were dumped on front porches and at one house an iron gate was thrown against the front door. A broken hedge is another reported damage.

Detective Welker has offered a reward of $25 for any information leading to the arrest of the guilty parties. Mr. Russell also stated that he would not give up until the property damagers were caught. This is the second time these cement pedestals have been destroyed for Mr. Russell.

Residents of this section of the city have expressed a willingness to have Hallowe'en celebrated, but at the same time explain the they consider such premature acts as being most cowardly and inconsiderate.

A six o'clock birthday dinner was given in honor of Mrs. John Evans and Mr. Lawrence Geyer last Wednesday, Oct. 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Geyer, 227 N. Warren Ave. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Evans, Mr. and Mrs. John Evans and son Robert.

BIG CROWDS HEAR KRAMER

Evangelistic Meetings at Hillcrest Baptist Church Increase in Enthusiasm.

"Big Jim" Kramer, the "cowboy" evangelist from the west, entered his second week's service at Hillcrest Baptist church on Monday night. He will continue for another week or probably two.

Each night the attendance has been larger. The climax will probably be reached this Sunday night.

Mr. Kramer says that he has planned that this week be the greatest religious week in the history of the Hilltop. He has planned several special services and his messages are new ones which he has not delivered before.

On Monday evening he met with the school children in the church auditorium. All school children of the Hilltop were invited.

These meetings have a real treat in store for music lovers. Mr. Frank (Bill) McCravy, commonly known as "the sweet singer of the south," sings at every service.

He is accompanied on the piano by Miss Mary Catharine Lewis of Columbus.

Mr. Kramer's subject for Thursday, Oct. 28, will be "Are you Flirting with the Undertaker?" His subject for Friday evening will be "Are You a Has Been?" There will be no services on Saturday night.

At the services held at 11 o'clock Sunday morning he will preach on "Are You Worth or Worthless?" The evening service for Sunday will be held at 7:30. His subject will be "Who's Got Your Goat?"

CHURCH PLAN TO BURN MORTGAGE

Hilltop Church of Christ Hopes to Be Clear of Debt on Fifth Anniversary of Dedication.

The congregation of Hilltop Church of Christ anticipates real cause for thanksgiving this year. The church was dedicated almost five years ago. Hopes run high for burning the mortgage on the fifth anniversary of the dedication, Sunday, Nov. 28th. The church departments are vieing with each other in finding ways of providing fuel for the flames.

The troop of Girl Scouts sponsored by the church attended services in a body last Sunday morning and announced a liberal gift to the building fund. The troop is under the direction of Mrs. Epperson and Mrs. Cassidy.

The Loyal Women's class will gather fagots for the mortgage burning by serving chicken dinners at the church Thursday evening, Nov. 4th. Mrs. G. P. Orr is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Other classes are equally active and indications point to complete financial success. Rev. J. N. Johnston is pastor of the church and Mr. Ralph Jacobs is president of the board.

Mrs. G. A. Ingles, 156 N. Oakley Ave., was hostess to a number of pupils from West Broad Street school Friday evening, when her two youngest sons, Morris and Howard, entertained with a Hallowe'en party. KILLED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

Rear Tire Blows Out Causing John Cannon to Lose Control of Machine.

John Cannon, aged 25, son of Mrs. Adelia Cannon, Prospect addition, was killed Friday morning when the car he was driving overturned and went into a ditch. Mr. Cannon suffered a broken neck.

A rear tire blew out and Cannon lost control of the car and it was thrown into a ditch, said Mac Gilkeson, a neighbor, who was in the car at the time of the accident, but escaped uninjured.

Cannon and Gilkeson were driving into the country to gather walnuts. The accident took place about a mile north of Broad street on the Wilson road.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Adelia Cannon; a younger brother, Joseph, and a sister, Mrs. Walter Mayer.

The body was removed to the funeral chapel of C. J. Kohn, 2456 W. Broad St. Funeral services were held at the home Monday. Burial was made at Delaware.

Mrs. O. C. De Priest, N. Hague Ave., entertained with a dinner and bridge at the Neil House Monday evening for Mrs. L. G. Deem, Mrs. Jean Worrell, Mrs. E. W. Lauer, Mrs. L. G. Vieman and the hostess.

The Ladies' Aid society of the St. Paul United Evangelical church held a Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Baker, 424 S. Burgess Ave., last Thursday evening, Oct. 21. A delightful time was enjoyed by all. Pumpkin pie, gingerbread and coffee were served for refreshments.

All Hilltop and anyone else who is interested in having a good time is invited to attend the big Hallowe'en celebration on West Broad street, between Belvidere and Chase avenues, this Saturday night, Oct. 30.

Hilltop business men are sponsoring this "big party." Music will be furnished by the Hilltop and Columbia Heights bands. They have been engaged for the entire evening and will parade with the merrymakers.

The big parade will form at Belvidere avenue at 7:30 o'clock and will march to Chase avenue. Here they will do an "about face" and travel back to Park avenue.

Here at South Park avenue and West Broad street, judges will select those having the best and most comical masquerade costumes.

To the most comically dressed man and woman goes a prize of $10 each. The same awards will be made for the neatest dressed man and woman.

Two prizes of $5 each will be given to the most comically dressed boy and girl and the neatest dressed boy and girl.

Following the awarding of the prizes and a general mixing of the crowd another feature will start. An orchestra has been engaged and will furnish music for dancers to "step it off" right in the street. This will take place at Powell avenue, just off West Broad street. The dancing is free and everyone is expected to join in.

Here is an opportunity to bring back the "good old days" when people turned out to enjoy a real old fashioned get together. There will be plenty of music, dancing and a grand parade and a good time for everyone. Both young and old are urged to come out. To masquerade will be to have a better time, but you are wanted regardless of costume.

Democratic Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Democrats of the Eleventh Ward at the U. B. Church, Sullivant and Burgess avenues, Friday, Oct. 29, at 7:30 p. m.

Speaking by D. B. Ulry, W. L. Millikin and county candidates will be a feature of the evening. Lunch will be served following the speaking. Music also is on the program.

LITTLE GIRL MOURNS LOSS OF PLAYMATE

Little Wanda Cales, of 949 S. Burgess Ave., wants her Peggie to come home. Peggie is a little fox terrier, white with a black head and black spots on the body. The dog was wearing a harness and had a license tag No. 8920. It disappeared from the above address Monday afternoon and any information would be appreciated as the little girl misses her pet very much. Calling Ra. 0773-J will get in touch with the little girl.

'Tis Hallowe'en

Hark! Did you hear that sound in the grass?
Mayhap a witch or ghost did pass.
Was that the owl's lone cry?
Is that the wind among the trees?
What voice is whispering in the breeze?
Are spirits really nigh?

That mysterious yet glorious time is here again, Hallowe'en! Everybody is delighted. We have looked forward to it for several weeks.

Masks, costumes, noise, confetti, corn, joyful laughter and the thoughts of pumpkin pies and cider make the old, young and the young younger. Our great-great grandpfathers always celebrated on this occasion and we have followed.

All the family should take an interest in this occasion. All during the afternoon mother has been baking good old pumpkin pies (the kind you read about) and has bought a generous supply of sweet cider. When eventide falls little Willie is the first to bound down stairs rigged out in big brother's long pants, a skeleton faceface and coat pockets bulging out with paper, corn and soap which he immediately puts to use on his mother's front windows and then jumps off with other fellow merrymakers to continue their tactics.

Mother, sister, dad and brother all join the fantastic parade, following close behind the band down the main street.

Then comes the "morning after the night before," to which everyone looks forward. "Where have I seen that old wagon before? Surely these aren't my chairs. Mercy, where could they find so much corn? Look, there is Mrs. Jones' old washing machine on top of that vacant house. And would you look at that cow on Mrs. Smith's front porch. Where did they ever get all of this rubbish?

Such are the expressions, but the dominating conclusion drawn by everyone is that a "good time was had by all."

Come on let's join this fun-making group!

EDUCATIONAL DIRECTOR

Rules on Use of Motion Picture Machines in the Public Schools.

That schools should not be converted into theaters is the burden of a ruling just issued by State Director of Education Vernon M. Riegel. All high schools which have motion picture equipment must make use of it for educational purposes, according to the new regulation, and state inspectors will make findings against any schools which fail to do so.

This ruling was made necessary by the fact that many schools have been confining their showing of films to the theatrical type entirely. Director Riegel indicates that it is his view that a school which can afford to own and use motion picture equipment for entertainment purposes has no excuse for not using it for educational training.

The director does not disapprove the use of motion pictures for community purposes so long as such use is incidental to the regular work of the schools or of educational value to the community.

The department of education, through its new division of visual instruction, is endeavoring, according to the announcement, to set up a central exchange for educational films by encouraging the deposit of such films with the division. These pictures are not to be shown theatrically by the schools but are strictly for educational work.

HERE AND THERE
By C. C. H.

The only famous European personage to come to America and not be greeted by the usual mob of newspaper reporters must have been Christopher Columbus.

• • • •

Everything cannot be "peaches" and cream. Ask Browning.

• • • •

"Big Jim" continues to "tell it to 'em" each night at Hillcrest Baptist church.

• • • •

You should vote for the elimination of the grade crossing. Remember, that although you stop before trying to cross, there are hundreds of people that have not yet been convinced that the locomotive is mightier than the "flivver." Then again the time that is lost by workmen may prove to be an indirect bearing on you or your business.

• • • •

Yours for a good old fashioned Hallowe'en!

• • • •

Are you neglecting to keep yours a "Home Beautiful?"

• • • •

Columbus is quite the metropolis Most any day you can read of at least three suicides or murders.

• • • •

Winter is here, it seems, because people are ordering coal and wishing the cross-word puzzle craze would start again.

• • • •

A New York sport writer called the Ohio State football team country lads from the corn fields. All we can say is that it takes the "corn fed" boys to lay Columbia flat.

• • • •

Speaking of corn in that respect it would only follow that Ohio turns out better corn than Iowa, the state where the "tall corn grows."

• • • •

O. S. U. will be in pink of condition for Michigan if they can only knock the wind out of the "windy city" team this Saturday.

• • • •

Queens seem to be stepping out these days. Marie stirs all America, while Victoria of Spain travels north to London. Even queens desire a change once in a while. No doubt they get rather tired of staring at the same king every day.

"These are the times that try men's soles," muttered the tramp as he let his feet fall lightly to the burning railroad ties.

• • • •

That long and influential saying that "two can live as cheap as one" has been changed to read, "Two can live as cheap as one providing both have jobs."

• • • •

Housekeepers and merchants may prepare for a big Hollowe'en because the young people are preparing likewise. Local prank makers are getting in practice each night by throwing corn and paper scraps. No doubt though there will be many grown-ups who will be anxious to look out upon the results of the "night before." Remember, you were all young once—why not again?

• • • •

Vacant lots are all right if they are vacant but we don't think they can easily be considered such until all rubbish is removed therefrom.

• • • •

Another valuable addition to the Hilltop is the new Chevrolet show rooms now under construction on West Broad street.

• • • •

Again the women have the privelege of changing their minds. The results are that the men will not have to wait so long at the barber shops. Long hair is again taking its rightful place upon the woman's head.

• • • •

People shouldn't be so concerned over what others think of them; chances are others seldom think in that direction at all.

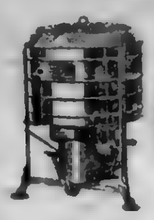
SERIES OF 3 CONCERTS

Columbus Symphony Orchestra Concert Ticket Sale in Charge of White Cross Guild.

If indications, gleaned from early report of ticket sales are significant, Memorial hall will be entirely sold out at an early date for the series of concerts to be given this season by the Columbus Symphony Orchestra and Columbus folk will crowd the hall to capacity to enjoy the entertainment and pleasure in store for them, and to express their enthusiasm and pride in this civic enterprise. The organization of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra (which consists of sixty members) is one of the events of importance marking the outstanding era of accomplishment in greater Columbus during recent years. Ever since its inception three years ago by Earl Hopkins, director, and James T. Daniels, president, and sponsored by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, which has since given it its indorsement, the project has moved steadily forward and has demonstrated its ability to take its place with the various organizations and civic groups to bring Columbus to the fore nationally.



The coming series of three concerts will be given Nov. 9, Feb. 6 (Sunday matinee) and April 10. All talent will be donated with no thought of remuneration; including Mr. Hopkins, director of the orchestra, and all artists who appear. Cecil Fanning, Columbus, internationally known baritone, and Mabel Dunn Hopkins, violinist, will be the assisting artists for the concert Nov. 9. Among other artists who will appear later in the course are Marie Hertenstein Walter, Herbert Eagleson, bass-baritone; Mrs. John Martin Hiss, contralto; Carl Fahl, tenor; Ellis Snyder, baritone, and others in chorus.

Mrs. John—Well, this afternoon I was down to the Hilltop Furniture Co. with Mrs. Jones and while there looked at the new fall patterns. They're just darling, all those new block designs and they're priced very low, much lower than down town and they would lay it for us.

Mr. John—Well, I expect you might go down tomorrow and get some for the kitchen. Say, pick out some for the bath room, too. You know we are going to have company next week.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. E. O. Carleton, a Hilltop Author

"Is there any hope for her?" she asked in a trembling voice.

"The crisis will come tonight. If she lives through that, she will begin to improve in a few days."

All night they waited anxiously, still hoping she would live. At midnight, she became quiet, but breathed with great difficulty. For hours, she hovered near the brink, and when the doctor announced that the greatest part of the danger was passed, everyone was relieved at the news.

For weeks, no one was admitted to the room, and when that period was over, only members of the family were allowed to visit her. Days rolled by. The war ended; and right had triumphed over wrong, but there was still many sad hearts in America. Many family circles had been broken; many a vacant chair served as a reminder that a favorite son, brother or father, who had left for France in perfect health, would never return to enjoy the results of victory.

By Thanksgiving Day, Marjorie was able to take her place at the dinner table. Very different she looked from the Marjorie who had married Richard, with the short curls, which took the place of the beautiful tresses Richard had admired. During her illness, she had become very thin and pale. Now, she was gradually increasing in weight, and the color returned to her cheeks. When with the family, she made attempts to be cheerful, but when alone in her room, she indulged in her grief, allowing the tears to flow freely.

She had loved and had lost. What had she to look forward to? Nothing but love for her infant son. She must take good care of him. It was her duty to bring him up in the right way, and educate him, so that when he reached manhood, his character would be one to be proud of.

CHAPTER XVI.

Mrs. Bartlett, wife of Captain Bartlett, wrote frequently to her husband, and when it was possible for the Captain to do so, he wrote to her several times each week. Before leaving the base hospital, when he and Ralph lay side by side for many days, Mr. Bartlett mentioned Ralph's attitude toward Vera Moreland; and told his wife to discourage their daughter if she were waiting for Ralph, as with him, it seemed to be a case "out of sight, out of mind."

Mrs. Bartlett read the letter, and as Ellen was interested in mail that arrived from the front, Mrs. Bartlett did not mention having received the letter, and destroyed it as soon as she read it. The mother could see that Ellen would be broken-hearted over the news contained in Captain Bartlettt's letter, but decided to let matters take their course, without interfering herself, as she was in no hurry to part with her daughter.

Ellen seldom saw Charles Hartley. When they met, it was usually in the presence of a third person, and the conversation was not personal. Time went on. The armistice was signed, and as their turns came, the boys came home. Early the following spring, Ralph Dalton landed at New York, and a few days later reached Stanton. Ellen was glad that he had come back, and that she would soon see him again; but wished that he were her brother, instead of a would-be lover, as she thought he was. She wondered what she should say to him. What would he think if she were to tell him that during his absence, she had become very fond of another. She knew that she must tell him the truth sooner or later, but shrank from the necessity of doing so.

One evening she heard a step on the porch, and knew who it was. She hastened to open the door, and threw her arms about the man's neck. Mr. Bartlett had come home, and wishing to give his family a surprise, had not written them that he would soon be home. Ralph arrived in the United States at the same time Captain Bartlett did, but Ellen's father was detained in Washington, and Ralph did not wait for him.

A few evenings after Mr. Bartlett reached home, Ralph, as a matter of duty, called at the Bartlett home. He, also, had a problem which was exactly like the one confronting Ellen. Mrs. Bartlett admitted him, saying that Ellen would be down pretty soon.

Before the evening was over, the older people left the living room, and Ralph and Ellen were alone.

"What have you been doing while I was away?" Ralph asked.

Haven't I told you in the letters I wrote?" Ellen avoided answering his question by asking another.

"You weren't good at details. I know you haven't occupied that chair working on sweaters and bandages all the time I have been away."

"Suppose you give me an account of your experiences, they would be much more interesting," she remarked, again avoiding conversation tending toward anything personal.

"I want you to answer my question first," he insisted.

"During the spring, autumn and winter, my time was occupied with teaching and Red Cross work, with a movie now and then. During the summer months, I spent a great deal of time with Marjorie at Weston."

The talk drifted to Marjorie and Richard, of Richard's death in the Argonne, and of his little son and namesake.

"I wonder what Marjorie will do with the drugstore. Has Charlie succeeded with the business?"

Ellen felt rather self-conscious when the quiver of her lips and lowering of her eyelids was noticed by Ralph.

"He has done fine," was her only remark on the subject.

"Along what lines?" Ralph asked testily.

"Your question applied to the store."

"You seemed a little embarassed when his name mentioned. I thought perhaps he had been paying you marked attention during my absence."

Ellen made no reply, and Ralph went on.

"Do you like Charles Hartley, Ellen?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I want an answer to my question."

"Oh, Ralph. I know I did wrong; but I have learned to like him quite well."

A REAL SITE AT THE SITES STORE

One of the most attractive window displays in the city is to be found at the D. O. Sites Electric Co., 2385 W. Broad St. This display is especially attractive to nature lovers. With leaves on the floor and corn "fodder" standing in the corner and pumpkins placed at various places, the whole scene is given a real autumn atmosphere by the proper lighting effects.

Taxidermy specimens make it all the more interesting. Pheasants, ducks, owls, fox, groundhog, skunk and squirrels stand in their life-like postures. These were prepared by Carl A. Cline of Harrisburg, Ohio.

No doubt the most attractive feature of it all is the fact that a Westinghouse Automatic Iron will be given away Saturday, Oct. 30, at 6 p. m., to the person guessing the nearest number of electrical appliances in the display.

Fuse plugs, dry cells, bulbs and other appliances are either in the window or hidden in the leaves.

Guessing the number looks easy at first glance, but the person that really studies the display will no doubt be the winner of the electric iron.

Apple Creek Property For State Institution

The state board of control last week committed itself to the Apple Creek site for the northern Ohio institution for the feeble-minded by authorizing the state highway director to close deals for the six tracts totaling 700 acres at an average cost of $108 an acre; to make necessary readjustments in offers for the other tracts; to arrange for cancelation of oil leases on the property at a cost not to exceed $28,000; to begin condemnation proceedings against property owners who decline to sell privately.

Protect Walls and Ceilings With "GEM" REGISTER SHIELDS

If your home is heated by a warm air furnace, you need "GEM" Register Shields for every wall or floor register to deflect the heat into the room instead of at the ceiling, and to protect walls, ceilings and draperies from dust, dirt and soot coming up through the registers.

The "GEM" saves fuel, reduces decorating costs, lessens house-cleaning labor and keeps the curtains and furnishings fresh, clean and attractive. Made from heavy, durable steel, with a handsome, permanent oxidized copper finish. Adjustable, from 10 to 19 inches, to fit any size register. Price

CELEBRATION POSTPONED

Rainy Weather Spoils Hilltop Halloween Party—Will Be Held Saturday, Nov. 20.

Announcement was made Tuesday morning that the Hilltop Halloween party, sponsored by the Hilltop business men, would be given on Saturday, Nov. 20. It was postponed last Saturday on account of the rain and cold weather.

In addition to the prizes announced before, there will be several added features, it was stated by C. H. Pepple, chairman of the committee.

There will be no change in the arrangements of the celebration. Although Halloween is past, it will be celebrated in real fashion as had been planned. Persons are expected to mask and take an active part in the fun.

Two bands and an orchestra will be on hand and an open street dance will be staked at Powell Ave., just off Broad street.

The parade, as arrangements stood for Saturday's celebration, will form at Belvidere Ave. at 7:30 and march to Chase Ave. and back to south Park, where prizes will be awarded.

FRIENDS BURN MORTGAGE

On last Thursday evening about 125 people from the Highland Avenue Friends Church and Sunday School met at the Rescue Home for a social evening.

In addition to being a pleasant hour socially it was one of the deepest thanksgiving to the Friends and we know the people of the Hilltop and Columbus will be glad to know the Home is now free from incumberance.

Evangeline Reams, through whose devoted life the Rescue Home was founded and carried on all these years, recited the history of the Home. This Home is indeed a monument to her life and all present rejoiced to see her in happiness of the hour. After her review of the Home's history, Louis Haldy burned the mortgage, followed by the singing of the Doxology.

Following these formalities the guests filed through the dining room where each received a liberal helping of coffee, cider, sandwiches and pumpkin pie.

NEW CLASS AT GLENWOOD

Any Married Couple Eligible to Membership Providing Wife Is Not Over 30.

Glenwood M. E. church has organized a young married people's class and it is proving to be a great success. "Others," a poem written by C. D. Meigs, has been adopted by the class and the word Others has been chosen as the class motto.

Mr. Kenneth Lybarger was elected president, Mr. Myer Lauer, treasurer, and Mrs. Margaret Armbrust, secretary, when the class organized.

The class is ruled by a constitution and very interesting meetings are held. No dues or collections are taken except the regular Sunday school collection. The class meetings are held once a month at the home of one of the members.

The class has been very fortunate in securing Mrs. Chenoweth as a teacher. In inviting new members the class always tells them that to hear their teacher talk and attend a class that she conducts only means you will be back bright and early the next Sunday. The class has started at the beginning of the Bible and is going to study a chapter each Sunday.

Any married couple is eligible to become members of the Young Married Peoples class providing the wife is not over thirty years of age. If you are thirty at present hurry and join before your next birthday for once you are a member always a member. There is no age limit concerning the men, so it is a fortunate man who has a wife that is eligible.

The class is now on the lookout for new members so if you are eligible be sure and pay the class a visit and you will call again. The class meets in the minister's study. The officers will be glad to call on you and talk with you concerning the class.

CONDITION OF SCHOOLS GOOD

Inspection Just Completed by J. A. Welch, Chief of Fire Prevention Bureau.

Director of Public Safety W. H. Duffy issued a statement Monday, congratulating the board of education and school principals on the condition of Columbus school buildings and the discipline of teachers and pupils during fire drills. The statement was presented to the board at a regular meeting Monday afternoon.

Duffy's statement is based on a report to him by J. A. Welch, chief of fire prevention bureau, who accompanied by Edward Grove, chief engineer for the schools, and four fire wardens, made a tour of inspection of the city's 72 school buildings during the week of October 17. He said that he conditions found this year far excelled any found in previous inspections during his time in his present office.

West Park Avenue M. E. church will observe its annual home-coming day Sunday, Nov. 7. Three of the former pastor will be present. At the afternoon service at 2:30, Rev. W. S. Fisher and Rev. A. L. Brokaw will speak.

A RECORD IN EACH HOME

Beginning This Week Distribution of Record Will Cover Entire Hilltop Each Week.

The Record has reached a point it has been striving for for several months—that of putting a paper in every Hilltop home every week.

Each week hereafter 5000 copies of the Record will be printed, which will give each Hilltop home a copy. This includes the new territory south of Sullivant avenue west from Hilltonia avenue. We wish to make the Record of interest to residents of all sections of the Hilltop and will strive to do so.

Beginning this week Record distribution will be in charge of the Capital Distributing Co., and we can assure Record readers and advertisers the best of service.

Putting out this number of copies each week taxes our modest plant almost to the limit, especially in press work. For this reason we will appreciate any news copy our readers may have for us, if it is in the office as early as possible, especially of past events. We will be glad to receive any news item over the phone. Ra. 0489 or Ra. 2925-W.

Monday morning at 10 o'clock Highland Junior High pupils and teachers assembled in Glenwood church for exercises celebrating the presentation of Excelsior pins to new members elected to this honorary society, from the present 9A class.

The program planned for this occasion was an interesting one. Music was furnished by the Boys' Glee club and school orchestra, and Miss Ola Trump led the singing of "America the Beautiful" by the school, followed by the salute to the flag.

Principal H. H. Reighley made a short speech explaining the occasion of the meeting. After introducing Assistant Principal Littleton, who explained the meaning of "Excelsior" and the society of this name, Mr. Reighley then expressed his pleasure of conferring this honor on the new members of Highland Excelsior society, and extended his best wishes for success to them in the future.

New members of Excelsior are as follows:

Gertrude Alford, Lois Biddle, Betty Cannon, Jessie Dodd, Eileen Langstaff, Aileen Lanthorne, Martha Millikin, Frances Herron, Jean Randall, Frances Marsh and Marjorie Simmons.

In behalf of these Marjorie Simmons expressed their gratitude for the pins and thanked teachers and principals for their help. Rev. Limouse of Northminster Presbyterian church made the address of the occasion.

Teachers and principals of Highland school extend a cordial invitation to all parents of the school to visit with them any day during the next week, Nov. 8-13. This week is known throughout the country as Education Week, and the furthering of the high aims of education is the goal of this particular week.

Business Men's Ass'n Sponsors Number Hunt

Not Necessary to Buy Anything to Be Eligible to Participate in Distribution of Prizes Worth Nearly $1000—Hunt Ends Nov. 20.

More than 100 prizes, valued at approximately $1000, will be given away by Hilltop business men in a grand Treasure Hunt open to all Hilltop people, it was announced this week.

A complete radio set, ready to operate, and worth $140, heads the list. A bank deposit of $100 is next in line, and two $50 prizes follow. The remainder of the list includes almost everything that could be useful around a home, and displays in an excellent manner the diversity of the products sold in the rapidly developing business center on the Hilltop.

The prize offer was made to show graphically how many and complete the Hilltop stores are, according to R. O. Harrison, president of the Hilltop Business Men's Association, which is sponsoring the treasure hunt. It is no longer necessary to go downtown for most of the things the average family needs, Mr. Harrison pointed out. Almost every line of business now is represented on the Hilltop, with first class stores and shops selling furniture, hardware, novelties, wearing apparel, groceries, fruit and other foods giving high-class service.

A reading of the prize list will show more plainly just how many different kinds of supplies may be obtained here, he said. Not only are they numerous, but of good quality and reasonable price, and the service given is the best available anywhere.

There are no strings watever attached to the prizes, and it is not necessary to buy anything to win, members of the Association committee pointed out.

All merchants and business men and women who are members of the association invite the public to visit their places of business. They will give them a coupon entitling them to participation in the campaign.

This coupon, presented with a deposit at the Hilltop bank, entitles the holder to a numbered prize ticket for each $5 deposited. Not more than 50 tickets can be drawn with any one deposit, however. The tickets are then dropped in the barrel in the bank lobby and left there until the drawing takes place on Nov. 17. The following morning the winning numbers will appear in the stores which offer prizes, and the winner may obtain them by presenting his ticket bearing that number. If he does not present it before midnight of Nov. 20, the number nearest to it which has been presented will win the prize.

Thousands of Hilltop people plan to join in the treasure hunt, it was said Monday, and hundreds already had started with one or two tickets by noon that day. A carnival is being planned to close the Treasure Hunt on the night of Nov. 20.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

In a Thanksgiving proclamation issued last Saturday, President Coolidge asks the nation to observe Thursday, Nov. 25, as a day of praise to God for a year in which the nation has been blessed among the nations of the earth.

The full text follows:

"By the president of the United States of America:

"A proclamation:

"As a nation and as individuals we have passed another twelve months in the favor of the almighty. He has smiled upon our fields and they have brought forth plentifully; business has prospered; industries have flourished, and labor has been well employed. While sections of our country have been visited by disaster, we have been spared any great national calamity or pestilential visitation. We are blessed among the nations of the earth.

MORAL LIFE HIGH.

"Our moral and spiritual life has kept measure with our material prosperity. We are not unmindful of the gratitude we owe to God for his watchful care which has pointed out to us the ways of peace and happiness; we should not fail in our acknowledgment of his divine favor which has bestowed upon us so many blessings. Neither should we be forgetful of those among us who, through stress of circumstances, are less fortunately placed, but by deeds of charity make our acknowledgment more acceptable in his sight."

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November, next, as a day of general Thanksgiving, and prayer and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work, and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek guidance that through good deeds and brotherly love they may deserve a continuance of his favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the City of Washington, this 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and fifty-first.

CALVIN COOLIDGE,
By President:
JOSEPH C. GREW,
Acting Secretary of State.

The cornerstone of the new City Hall is in place and a new era in civic beauty has been established for Columbus. Improvements are rapidly moulding our city into a better place to live. But we ask—why should we make this a nice place to die in? I'm afraid Mr. Hitchcock would change his mind about dying and want to continue life here.

FOR FREEDOM

A World War Story by Mrs. E. O. Carleton, a Hilltop Author

To her astonishment, Ralph was not the least bit disappointed at the news. Crossing the room he took her hands.

"Congratulations, little sister. I see you not only 'like him quite well,' but love him quite well. Now let me tell you a little secret. I was wounded in France, and sent back to a base hospital. There I met a charming nurse, whom I couldn't help falling in love with, but did not want to be untrue to you. Although we weren't engaged, I thought possibly you were waiting for me to come back to America, and I did not tell her of my feelings."

"I suppose you are glad to know that I claim no obligation from you," Ellen remarked teasingly.

"We are both in the same boat," Ralph replied. "I have something to thank you for. Your taunting remark sent me to war, and as a result, I met the girl I now expect to make my wife."

"Do you know where to locate her?" Ellen questioned.

"Yes, I have her New York address," he answered. "And may I tell her about my little sister who was so loyal to me while I was in France?"

"Yes, if you want to arouse her jealousy," Ellen remarked.

"I shall explain the matter in detail, and feel sure she will not feel jealous. It is late, and I must go. You may give Charlie a date any time you wish."

Ralph was soon home, packing a travelling bag for a trip to New York, and Ellen retired for the night.

CHAPTER XVII

It was a lovely springtime morning. The songs of birds and the hum of insects pervaded the air. Marjorie's little garden was all abloom with beautiful roses. To the eye of a stranger, the beauty of the garden would have been complete; but to Marjorie, the most important part was missing. She sat down on the rustic seat where they had spent so many happy hours, and fell into a reverie.

Step by step, she went through the days when he had wooed and won her at this spot, of the short honeymoon spent there, dwelling on every look and word of tenderness he had bestowed on her. The sound of footsteps coming nearer aroused her, and turning around she saw a familiar figure advancing toward her. It was Richard.

He took her in his arms as of old; called her every endearing name he had called her then. It seemed too good to be true. Other footsteps were heard, and the reunited couple, still lovers, looked toward the direction of the sound. It was little Richard, junior, who had just learned to walk. The child's father released Marjorie from his embrace, and soon induced the child to make up with him.

Marjorie's mother and father, returning from a call on some friends in Weston, entered the house, and not being able to find either the child or Marjorie, went to the garden, where their daughter spent so much of her time.

"Someone is with her," Mr. Duncan remarked, as he glanced through the foliage of trees and bushes which prevented a direct view. As they came closer, Mrs. Duncan uttered a joyful exclamation.

"It is Richard," she said.

They hastened forward to greet him. As yet, Marjorie had asked no questions about how her husband's name appeared on the death list. Mr. Duncan asked for the information immediately, and Richard told about how the captain had ordered him to examine the wire entanglements of the enemy camp.

"I completed the task, and on my way back to our lines, noticed I had lost a letter from Marjorie. I knew it was not far away, as I had felt it in my pocket a few minutes earlier. I crawled around in a circle, until I found it, and started, as I thought, toward the American lines. I was very tired and sleepy, and foolishly gave the American password to the German sentry. A soldier in their camp bore a strong resemblance to me, and I was forced to exchange uniforms with him. I knew that if they killed me, they would take my uniform, so I preferred to remain alive, even though I was their prisoner. I do not know what duty the German officer sent the spy to perform; but the next day the Americans attacked the Germans, and there was a fierce struggle. His body must have been found on the battlefield with my insignia, the only marks of identification. I was sent to the rear of the German lines, and treated like a dog, which resulted in severe illness. I did not know when the Armistice was signed, but when my delirium passed, I was again among my fellow countrymen. I wrote you two letters before leaving France, but they probably were lost in the mail rush. When I landed in the United States, I decided to give you a surprise; and here I am."

"I am so thankful for your return!" Marjorie exclaimed.

Then Richard was given an account of Marjorie's illness, resulting from the shock of his supposed death.

"My little wife, we have both suffered, but I hope the future will make up for it," Richard said tenderly.

After the evening meal, both families went to the living room. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan were very glad Richard had returned safely, but their hearts still ached for Howard. There could be no mistake about his death, as Richard, himself, had witnessed the burial. No one could fill his place, not even little Dickey, junior, as everyone called him.

Someone knocked at the door. It was Charles Hartley. He stared open mouthed at Richard who advanced smilingly toward him; and forgetting that men are supposed to be undemonstrative toward each other, they hugged one another in a tight embrace. After the usual calm was restored, Charles passed a telegram to Richard, which Richard read aloud.

It was addressed to Charles Hartley, and the message read as follows: "Married Miss Vera Moreland this morning. Honeymooning in Catskill Mountains. Ralph Dalton."

"I thought he would marry Ellen," said Richard much surprised.

"My private opinion is that Charles is very glad Ralph did not." Marjorie remarked.

"You guessed it," admitted the lovesick youth. "Dick, if you will take care of your store tomorrow, I believe I will go over to Stanton."

"I will gladly," promised Richard.

The next day found Charles on his way to Stanton. How slow that train was! It shouldn't take a whole hour to go from Weston to Stanton. The young man had a strong desire to get out and push, but wisely refrained from such an act.

After what seemed an age, Charles was hurrying along the city streets. He hailed a taxi, which was also a slow means of transportation, though it was fortunate for the driver that none of the traffic cops were very wide awake that day. He hurried up the front steps of the Bartlett home, and to his chagrin, was informed that Ellen had gone down town.

"Will she be here this evening?" the young man asked.

"I think so," Mrs. Bartlett replied.

Somehow, he never knew afterwards, Charles put in the day; and when evening came, he once more rang the bell at the Bartlett residence. Mr. Bartlett admitted the young man, informing him that Ellen would be down in a few minutes. Presently she entered the parlor, and was soon reading the telegram Ralph had sent to Charles.

"I wonder how he knew this news would interest me." Charles remarked. "Have you seen him since his return?"

"He came to see me once."

"Did you tell him what had happened during his absence?" Charles questioned eagerly.

"He-I-that is-we were talking about you, in connection with the drug store, and he noticed I was a little embarrassed when your name was mentioned. He finally learned of our friendship during his absence, and then informed me of his liking for the nurse whose name is mentioned in this telegram," Ellen explained, then added, "I wish he hadn't been so tactless as to send you that message."

"It was the best thing he could have done," Charles remarked happily. "How about it Ellen? You love me don't you? I want you so much."

The answer she gave him must have been in the affirmative, as Mr. Bartlett, who entered the room a few minutes later found them seated side by side, with his arm encircling her waist, on a settee just made for two.

Charles opened his mouth to speak, but Mr. Bartlett silenced him.

"Save your breath, young man. I know what you were going to ask me. It doesn't seem so long since I asked the same question, and now I'll soon be father-in-law. Yes, you can have her. I hate to give her up, but her happiness is my delight, so I wish you both good luck."

"Let us go over to Weston tomorrow, and give Marjorie a surprise," suggested Charles. "I will buy your engagement ring before we go, and you can help me select it."

The next day the young couple left the depot at Weston, and were soon on their way to the Duncan residence. Ellen was surprised to see the happy expression on Marjorie's face, as Charles had not told her that the report of Richard's death had been false, and that husband and wife were reunited.

"I am glad to see you your old self again," she told Marjorie. Then her eyes fell on Richard carrying his son toward them.

"Is it possible!" she exclaimed. "I am so glad for both of you. I was so afraid Marjorie would go too. Now you are together again, and with this darling child, you form a happy family."

"That is our opinion," Richard replied, "And we wish you the same happiness we have experienced."

Marjorie had expressed a desire that the Bartlett family visit Weston the week of Ellen's wedding, which invitation was accepted. The little white church at Weston was once more filled to overflowing, and the same kind of procession that had wended its way up the aisle more than two years before, was now again viewed by the inhabitants of Weston.

After the ceremony, another bride and groom were on their way to a honeymoon in the Catskill Mountains.

Those present at the wedding returned to their separate places of abode—each party commenting in the usual way about how lovely the bride looked, what a fine couple they made, etc.

The little garden, now the birthplace of two great loves, was very lovely that autumn day. Here happiness and grief had been indulged in, but happiness had won, and two young people, who though married, were still lovers, never tired of spending hour after hour here in one another's company.

Far away, under foreign skies, a loved son, brother, and comrade slept beneath a little white cross near the spot where he had fallen—for freedom.

The end.

CO-OPERATIVE ARRANGEMENT

Between Glenwood M. E. Church and Highland Avenue School.

Parent Teacher Association Is Much Pleased with Rivoli Theatre Benefit.

A co-operative arrangement has been comleted between the Glenwood M. E. church and the Board of Education whereby the church may use certain rooms at the Highland school for Sunday school purposes and the Highland school may use the church auditorium for school assemblies during the day time.

Teachers in civics classes at the Highland Junior High school have been having a practical demonstrations this week in civic pride, duty and responsibility. The grade crossing elimination, and city hall site beautification bond issues submitted to the people Nov. 2 furnished the topics for lively discussions in these classes.

The teachers and parents of Highland school are very much pleased with the results from the Parent-Teacher program which was given at the Rivoli theatre Friday, October 22.

The proceeds from this entertainment will be used to purchase supplementary reading material for the school.

At the Highland P.-T. A. benefit production of Harold Lloyd's "For Heaven's Sake," Friday, Oct. 22nd, at the Rivoli theater, proceeds from tickets amounting to over $340.00 were taken in. Of this amount probably about $140 or $150 will be cleared by the P.-T. A. after expenses have been taken out, which sum will be used by the association for community benefit.

The ticket sale at Highland school was especially commendable as over $210.00 worth of tickets were sold. The prizes offered by the P.-T. A. to rooms selling the most tickets goes to Room 26, Mr. T. N. Brown, teacher, in the Junior High, the 6th grade in the Elementary. Room 26 had a quota of 74% and room 19 in the Junior High, Miss Cherry, teacher, had second place in the Junior High, with a quota of 68%, with rooms 1 and 24 following.

On the program at the Rivoli, besides the cinema features, were also several vaudeville numbers by Highland pupils, including the following: Jane Markeson, dance, assisted by Sue Peart and Helen Blair; Alice and Jack Metzger, song and dance; Martha Millikin, solo dance; Charlene Ray, dutch dance.

The P.-T. A. wishes to thank all those who helped out in any way in this undertaking, and especially Mrs. J. R. Shirkey and Mr. T. N. Brown.

Something to Remember.
You'll do better at Seiller's after all."

Mrs. Martha Helmbrecht of Detroit, Mich., is in White Cross hospital for treatments, in the care of Dr. Crotti. Mrs. Helmbrecht is the mother of C. E. Helmbrecht of the Hilltop Furniture company.

Three little girls dressed as fairies brought in a float in the form of a boat containing the presents, with the words "Best Wishes" on the sail. A pleasant evening was spent in playing games, followed by refreshments of ice cream and cake. The following guests were present: Mrs. B. Winnett and son Dorphin, Misses Grace and Aileen Winnett, Miss Gladys Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Cramer and son Allen, Misses Garnet and Gertrude Cramer, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Neff, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. GLENWOOD ACTIVITIES

Next Sunday is Communion Sunday at Glenwood church. It will be a service of real fellowship. You are cordially invited to be present and join in the true fellowship of the Lord's Supper. Dr. Barber will speak on the subject, "Christian Brotherhood."

In the evening Miss Judith Ann Garrison will give a reading, accompanied by Mr. Robert Weller. Dr. Barber will speak on "Stop-Gaps."

The Junior High School Age Department of the church is a livewire department. Attendance increased last Sunday 48% over the previous Sunday, one class having 100% attendance. If you are a member of this department and have not been present recently you have surely missed something worth while, both in the Sunday and in the mid-week sessions of the department.

The Junior Church is very popular with the children. Increased attendance shows that this service is filling a real place in the religious life of the boys and girls. All boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 11 years are invited to come and join in the services, which are held in the Highland School portable building.

Young people do not forget the Epworth League meeting held Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. A splendid program is promised for next Sunday.

Have you seen the large gathering of young people at the Intermediate League? If not, you certainly have missed something really good. Every Sunday sees larger numbers out for this service. If you are in junior or senior high school you will find a great welcome in the League. Come and enjoy it. It meets at 6:30 on Sunday.

A big time was enjoyed by the members of Mr. Weller's class of Glenwood Sunday School last Tuesday evening when they met in the social rooms of the church for a social good time and class meeting. The class is growing constantly and shows signs of being one of the big classes of the school.

The members of Mr. Clark's class will meet Friday evening at 7:30 in the social rooms of the church for a social evening and general good time. Every member of the class is urged to be present as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Fagan.

After almost six months' rest in choir work, Mr. Wm. Knox will again resume the directorship of the Hillcrest Baptist Choir next Sunday and at the first part of the services each Sunday night will train the congregation in hymn singing. This ought to be interesting to those that sing and also those who love to hear the good old hymns and gospel songs.

Over The Top

Last Lord's Day was a happy time at the Hilltop Church of Christ. It was the day when the members were to complete the payment of the debt on the building.

The response was so generous that they went over the top and had a surplus of between three and four hundred dollars. The additional money will make it possible to make some needed changes in the basement to meet the overcrowded condition of the classes, and also leave a nice nest-egg for the second unit of the building to be erected later on the front of the lot.

A day of rejoicing and mortgage burning will be held Nov. 28 when I. J. Cahill, secretary of the O. C. M. S., will be there. The congregation are happy to be out of debt in less than five years after the completion of the building.

Highland Junior High Basketball

Twenty boys reported to Mr. Layman for the first practice of the year at the Shelter House Monday afternoon. A two-hour session on fundamentals and defensive work caused the boys to wander home rather weary of foot. With such men as Larkin, McCrea and Davis of last year's team, and Adair, Smith, Slater, Walker, Cox, Wolfe, Tordiff, Patser, Banning, Tonti and Williams working hard for a position there will be plenty of competition, which makes championship teams.

The season opens Dec. 3rd, with Mound, either at West High School or the Glenwood Shelter House. There will be one other game on the West Side, besides the Starling game, which is always played at Central.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE

For Miss Eva Burnside When Escaped Convicts Demand Her Automobile.

Miss Eva J. Burnside, well known milliner on the Hilltop, certainly had her share of excitement and thrills Monday afternoon when seven of the escaping convicts from the Ohio Penitentiary held her up at the T. & O. C. station and took her car away from her.

She was driving west on Broad St. when these men walked out in front of her as she passed the T. and O. C. Freight House. Thinking they were linemen cautioning her as to a fallen wire, she threw her car into second and slowed down.

The men boarded her car, two of them tore the curtains from the doors and another shoved a gun into her face and demanded she give up her machine. Miss Burnside quietly obeyed, realizing the danger she was in.

Passersby, seeing her plight, called the police, who gave chase to the fleeing convicts. Miss Burnside showed remarkable poise, considering her harrowing experience and attended her place of business later in the day as usual.

Her car was recovered much the worse for its wild trip.

Down But Not Out

"I'm an Irishman down, but I'm not out." These were the words of Elmer Callahan, 295 N. Burgess Ave., Monday evening.

Callahan, employed as guard at the Ohio Penitentiary, was stabbed seven times by escaping convicts. Last reports were that he was improving.

Captain Geo. C. Bennet, 714 Highland St., was hit with a hammer and Wm. Payne, secretary to the warden, was also struck on the head in the fray.

Miss Robbins and Miss Greiner of the Hilltop School of Music, spent the week-end in Detroit, visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Fleming. Among other musical attractions they were enthusiastic over and fortunate enough to hear while in Detroit, was the Royal Welsh choir, which sang before an audience of 5000 people.

C. A. Birle Elected

C. A. Birle was elected chancellor commander of Westwood Lodge No. 770, K. of P., at its regular meeting last Monday night to fill the unexpired term of George A. Good, deceased.

WORK WELL UNDER WAY

On New High School Foundation—Fifty Men Employed on Work.

What promises to be one of the largest construction projects in Columbus is now under way on the Hilltop. The new building will be the West High school.

The new high school is located on Powell avenue, two squares off West Broad street. It will take the place of the present West High at Central avenue.

The contract for the foundation only has been let to date. Contract for the remaining part of the building will be given in the near future.

When completed the new building will be valued at near $1,000,000. Definite height or size other than that it will occupy what is termed a good sized city block has not been made known as yet.

At present nearly 50 men are employed in the excavating and cement work. The foundation will be completed by April 1st. E. Alford Co. has the contract for the foundation work.

This new high school building is quite an improvement for the Hilltop and the west end in general. Children living in this end of town will have the opportunity of going to probably the finest school in Columbus.

Paving work on Powell avenue has also been started.

Wins Bible

Mrs. Ellen Steadman, mother of Mrs. P. B. McCloud of 93 N. Eureka avenue, was winner of the Bible offered by "Big Jim" Kramer at his special Sunday meeting for women only, for being the oldest lady present.

BIRDS INDICATE LONG WINTER

So Says Naturalist M. P. Skinner of Yellowstone National Park.

If birds and animals know anything about the weather, it's going to be a long winter, predicts M. P. Skinner of Livingston, Mont., field naturalist for Yellowstone park.

"Ground squirrels began to hibernate 10 days earlier than usual," says Mr. Skinner. "Wood chucks went into seclusion two weeks before their ordinary winter bedtime and red pine squirrels started to gather pine cones much sooner than customary. Such nests of hibernating animals as I have opened are a good deal deeper this fall indicating they are digging to get away from the frost.

"Birds from the north are coming in greater number and considerably in advance of the expected time."

People of the Hilltop

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT. DOING WHAT?

Last Saturday was that ideal day that so often comes just between fall and winter. It seems that such a day must be sent for a special reason and a look at the scrubbing and raking and burning and shaking that so ably occupied the Hilltopper's day brings one to the conclusion that this must be the fall cleaning day.

An observation proved that nearly every back or front yard was relieved of some of its coat of leaves and front porches galore received another bath before going into hibernation. The front room rug also received its fall beating to the essence of burning leaves in the back yard.

This was the "heavy" day for the younger members of the family but now that it is over their only Saturday tasks to look forward to with a dislike is the furnace cleaning and disposal of the ashes he has allowed to accumulate during the week.

PEARL DIVERS HAVE QUEER EXPERIENCES

In the pearl fishing grounds off Broome, on the northwestern coast of western Australia, deep sea divers meet with many queer adventures. But none was more queer than that which befell Diver John Douglas.

Douglas was down below the surface groping around for good pearl shells and the man tending the signal line on the lugger above him kept on paying out slack each time he felt pressure on the line. He kept on paying out until about 80 fathoms had passed thru his hands and, then he took a hitch round the mast of the lugger.

Immediately the lugger went astern, swiftly at first, then more slowly. For a mile this went on. Then a whale that had been swimming below the surface rose to the top of the water. The whale had become entangled in the diver's line, and had towed him for a mile. When the whale shook himself free from the line, Douglas was pulled to the surface uninjured.

Recently two divers working from another pearling lugger made a gruesome find. They found a helmet, diver's corselet and a pair of diving boots. One diver took the boots to the surface, and the other proceeded to take the helmet and corselet. When half-way up, he dropped the helmet and came to the surface with dilated eyes and an unusual pallor. Peering thru the glass of the helmet his eyes had met the ghastly stare of a skull. The diver's dress had become the coffin of some forgotten diver.

It promises to be one of the finest of its kind in Columbus. It will have the approximate height of a three-story building. The contract is in the hands of Haithaus Bros. and will be completed near Sept. 1 next.

Something to Remember
You'll do better at Seiller's after all.

Nebraska has a new plague to contend with, which has never before been heard of. It has arrived in the form of long-eared, stubborn little burros, which, having been supplanted by the light automobile, have been turned loose by many prospectors, and live in the hills and mountains. Driven down from their homes by the snow and cold, they often sweep down on small towns, invading the streets in a fearless manner. Occasionally a troop will surround a farm and devour everything in sight, including the family laundry hanging on the line. They bray noisily, and are not at all afraid of men, but whirl on a pursuer with flashing teeth or flying heels.

Pat watched the professor staring up at the sky through the long, shiny black telescope.

Presently a star fell.

"Shure, and the man's a grand shot," said Pat.

MEAT AND MACARONI CROQUETTES

Oh, how this does use up the small amount of leftovers! Put the left-over roast through the grinder and for each cup of meat add 1 cup chopped cooked macaroni. Add 1 cup thick, white sauce and season with salt, onion juice and a little nutmeg. Add the beaten yolk of 1 egg and form the mixture into croquettes. Roll in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep, hot fat until a nice brown. Drain on brown paper to remove any grease before serving.

Jumbalee

Two cups of sugar, two teaspoons vanilla, three eggs, three tablespoons margarin.

Cream the margarin with the sugar. Add the beaten egg yolks, then the vanilla, then the egg whites. Stir in very lightly sufficient flour to make it possible to roll out thin. Cut out with a small cookie cutter, having a hole in the center. Brush with white of eggs and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake in a moderate oven.

Tomato and Bread Soup

Place one cup of tomatoes in a sauce pan. Bring to a boil. Have ready some cubes of bread which have been fried lightly in butter. Place these toasted cubes in the bottom of each soup plate. Have ready the strained tomatoes thickened with a little flour and butter creamed together. Pour over the fried bread cubes and serve very hot.

Hamburg Steak

Four cups chopped beef from the round, one-eighth teaspoon salt, four cups breadcrumbs, few grains pepper, milk to moisten.

Soak breadcrumbs in milk until quite moist. Combine with beef and shape in small cakes. Sauted in a very little butter and serve with any desired sauce. When meat is expensive this is an economical and delicious dish.

Bacon Omelet

Prepare a plain omelet and just as it begins to cook sprinkle over the top chopped bacon which has been cooked until it is so crisp that it will break. The bacon should be tender and not burned. The omelet is then folded over.

Devonshire Cream

This is delicious as an accompaniment to any desired fruit and makes a simple and nourishing dessert. Place the milk over a moderate heat and bring slowly to the scalding point. Do not boil. Let stand in medium warm part of the stove for 30 minutes. Move to a cold place and let stand until the cream has risen.

BUTTERSCOTCH BREAD PUDDING

Put a generous half cupful of butter and two and a half cupfuls of brown sugar into a small frying pan and cook until it is a dark brown. Do not burn it. Add a quart and a quarter of sweet rich milk and turn into a double boiler. Add a pint of hot water, a teaspoonful of salt and five beaten eggs. Blend all together, but do not boil. Add two teaspoonfuls of flavoring, a small grating of nutmeg and a little over a quart of stale bread cut in cubes. Turn into a buttered pudding dish or individual molds, set in a pan of water and bake. Try with a knife and if it comes out clean the pudding is done. Just before taking it from the oven cover the top with halved fresh marshmallows and leave them in the oven just long enough to brown delicately.

AN EPITAPH OF BAD ROADS

They took a little gravel,
And took a little tar,
With various ingredients
Imported from afar;
They hammered it and rolled it,
And when they went away
They said they had a good street
To last for many a day.

They came with picks and smote it,
To lay a water main,
And then they called the workmen
To put it back again.
To lay a railway cable
They took it up once more,
And then they put it back again
Just where it was before.

They took it up for conduits,
To run the telephone,
And then they put it back again
As hard as any stone.
They tore it up for wires
To feed the 'lectric lights;
And then they put it back again,
And were within their rights.

Oh, the street's full of furrows,
There are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it,
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome street,
A credit to the town;
They're always digging of it up
Or putting of it down.
—Washington Post.

An English florist has discovered that by dropping a silver coin into the water in which cut flowers stand the flowers will take on delicate colorings and shadings not possible under natural conditions. The silver hydroxide which is formed causes the change by the action of the chemical. After the coloring has proceeded to the desired degree, the coin is removed and a few crumbs of slaked lime are added to set the color.

MISTAKEN EVOLUTION

It was that time that marks as the transition between night and day. Hurry and scurry actions were being directed by the brain everywhere. Hence it follows that my observation point was one of vantage as I viewed this assembly of variegated life here on a West Broad street car.

After the big fellow who was last to enter the car had sufficiently trampled in my feet so as to make a dive for a nearby strap I was able to let my eyes travel about and my mind make queer speculations as to the who, what and why of his apparently self satisfied gathering.

The majority of those who held that extreme pleasure of being seated were directing their attentions to the books or papers they held before them while even some of those who appeared to be dangling from the car straps went through the same actions of perusing the facts of scandal, murder, football, politics or what not such as their particular paper might hold.

About this time our friend the conductor stepped up into the door and broadcasted his familiar message, "Step 'orward in the aisle, please," after which I finally found myself looking over the shoulder of a fellow passenger near the front of the car. Here I came to the conclusion that I had found what scientists have so long looked for. Perhaps the queerest speculation that came to my mind was that he must have an extreme interest in his family line because of the fact that he was reading very intently of what seemed in my notion to apply very directly to himself. The headline of his paper read 'Professor Claims Monkeys Descended from Man."

As I studied the man more carefully I felt more assured of my first speculation. A dark and hairy face was set off by a long narrow chin and jawbones and a set of protruding lips. His monkey like appearance seemed to recall pictures I had seen of those animals swinging by their hands and tails in the vine covered jungle. In true fashion he swung to and fro with the swaying car as he held tightly to the leather strap suspended from above.

All my hopes vanished when my supposed "missing link" loosened his grip on the strap and turning left the car. When in walking posture again the specimen proved to be somewhat a normal creature, which only goes to show what mistaken conceptions one may get while riding street car.

SMITHS, JONES AND BROWNS

Lead Names in New City Directory—Gives Columbus Population of 310,822

The Smith, Jones and Brown families still hold sway in Columbus, according to the new 1926 Columbus city directory just issued.

The Smith's lead with 1742; the Jones follow with 1156 and the Browns come third with about 950. These figures count only the heads of families, not the wife and children.

Greater Columbus has a population of 310,822, the directory estimates, using the multiple 2½ to allow for children and wives.

The 1925 estimate of the publishers was 304,705.

COURT FINES ARE ALMOST DOUBLE

Collections in the criminal division of the Municipal Court during the month of October were almost double the amount collected in the same month a year ago, Clerk Harry B. Lamon reported Saturday.

Collections for October totaled $15,191 compared to $8428 for 1925.

There was an increase in the number of cases for the month, from 1420 to 1684.

An increase of one per cent in drunkenness was reported. There were 307 cases during the month compared to 303 a year ago.

CHANGING TIMES

Days of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn surely may be recalled by fathers of today, but the boys of this day surely cannot put into practice the same tactics as used then.

Where's Tom's aunt made him whitewash the front fence and perform similar tasks the present day lad's duties are somewhat similar. But Tom Sawyer had the advantage of knowing how to "work" others, while the particular lad seen on Hague avenue last Saturday was lacking in this respect.

This young fellow while engaged in scrubbing the porch made repeated attempts to attract the attention of the boys who were playing football on the vacant lot next to where he was working. All motions were to no avail as the boys continued playing and the other fellow kept at his scrubbing.

Where Tom Sawyer received apples, tops and even a private look at one boys sore toe for letting them do his work this modern boy worked on in agony.

Times certainly have changed and there is no longer a thrill in doing another's work. This is indeed distressing to the lad who prefers football to porch scrubbing.

An exhibit of original drawings and paintings opened Sunday at the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts. This exhibit is valued at $16,000 and is considered to be one of the choicest collections of modern illustrators' work sent out of New York. Columbus is the second city in the United States to be honored by having the privilege of seeing the exhibit.

Through special arrangements with W. F. Bigelow, editor of the Good Housekeeping Magazine, the Columbus Gallery was included in the early part of the itinerary and the exhibit is to be open free to the public until December 1. There are 20 English and American illustrators represented in the exhibit. Among these represented in the exhibit are two designs by Jessie Wilcox Smith, two sketches by the English illustrator, Arthur Rackham; a crayon design by Franklin Booth; several oil paintings by Pruett Carter; two charcoal and ink illustrations by Charles Livingston Bull; a composition of drawings by Paul Branson; a novel combination of chalk and charcoal illustrations by Charles R. Chickering; an oil rendering painted in France by Herbert M. Stoops, and canvasses by Forrest C. Crooks, Rose O'Neill, James E. ACCIDENTS INCREASE

September Leads All Other Months With 21,899 Industrial Mishaps.

According to a special report issued last Saturday by T. P. Kearns, chief of the division of safety and hygiene, industrial accidents throughout the state are on the increase.

The report shows that there were 21,899 accidents reported to the state industrial commission in September, and while reports for October have not been tabulated the same ratio of increase is expected.

September leads all other months in number of accidents. There were 927,512 days lost because of accidents.

More than 27 per cent of all accidents in September occurred in metal goods manufacture, and of the 6013 in that classification, 2126 were caused by machinery and 1089 received when handling objects. There were 2062 accidents in building erection and demolition, 14 per cent of the total.

Almost as many accidents occurred in commercial employment, which had 1994 from all causes, 26 per cent, or 520, resulting from handling objects, 227 from hand tools and 217 from motor vehicle operation. Blast furnaces, steel works, rolling mills and ore refining is the fourth classification in number of accidents, with a total of 1583.

Of the total number from all causes, there were 4452 caused by handling objects, 375 from machinery operations, 2190 from stepping upon or striking against objects, 2104 from hand tools and 1894 from falls of persons.

KILLED WHILE HUNTING BIRDS

Herschel McCarty, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. McCarty, 211 N. Burgess Ave., was accidentally shot and killed Wednesday afternoon by Robin Sharp, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Sharp, 2265 West Broad St., while the two boys were hunting on the Robert Briggs farm near Mt. Liberty, Knox county.

The two boys were hunting pheasants and while climbing a fence saw one. Sharp raised his shotgun, but before he got it to his shoulder it accidentally discharged, and McCarty, who was only a few feet away was struck by the full charge of the gun. Two men husking corn in a field near by saw accident.

Funeral service which are being arranged by C. J. Kohn, will probably be held Saturday. Rev. E. E. McFarlane, pastor of Hillcrest Baptist church, will officiate.

McCarty is survived by his parents. He was a senior at West High school, and also played on the football team.

BOYS CONFESS 7 ROBBERIES

Small Amounts of Money and Trinkets Taken from Broad St. and Sullivant Stores.

Seven West-side and Hilltop robberies were confessed to Tuesday by two fourth grade school boys.

Their largest loot was $25 in cash belonging to F. D. Moore, manager of the United States store, 2699 Sullivant Ave. Other small amounts, trinkets and candy were stolen from the following places: M. I. Beaver, shoe repairer, 2291 W. Broad St.; A. J. Silliman, tailor, 2396 W. Broad St.; Mrs. G. Parsell, grocery, 2621 Sullivant Ave.; C. B. Pepple, gift shop, 2434 W. Broad St.; Rankin & Griffith grocery, 2588 Sullivant Ave., and Reise Harris, barber shop, 2658 W. Broad St.

The boys were turned over to the Juvenile court authorities.

Monday night at Hillcrest church a farewell reception was given Mrs. Moore by the choir and others. There were plenty of good eats and ice cream for all. Bernice Brown arranged a program of music and recitations. Mr. Wilson was toastmaster for the occasion and called on many to speak, all paying high compliment to Mrs. Moore for her splendid work at the organ. She was presented with a beautiful breakfast set of dishes from the choir and others. The choir feels sorry to loose Mrs. Moore's services.

New Bridge Now Under Construction

A new concrete bridge is now under construction at Carrol avenue and Westwood drive, which will connect these two streets and make a complete drive around Holton park playground.

The concrete work will be completed this week and iron work then started. The bridge will probably be ready for use near the 10th of December.

The members of West Broad Street Parent-Teacher Association wish to express their deep appreciation to Mr. Pekras, who so kindly gave them their benefit picture November 5 at the Rivoli Theater. We also thank Mrs. Ewing, Mr. Patterson, Allen Klem and the ushers for the courtesy extended us.

The Wooster College Alumni club of Columbus, of which Mr. Phil Cunningham, 232 North Burgess avenue, is president, and Miss Helen Funk, 333 West Eighth avenue, is secretary, is arranging to celebrate Wooster day, Dec. 11. This day is celebrated annually by all Woosterians, as of special significance, being the anniversary date of the big fire in 1909 which completely destroyed the college. It also marks the beginning of the new Wooster, and as such is recognized and celebrated by song and speech-making. The local Wooster alumni meet this year at the Indianola Presbyterian church. Professor William B. Westhafer of the department of physics will represent the faculty as principal speaker. Probably other members of the official family will attend.

About 16 boys became scouts at the meeting. Parents of the boys and representative school officials were guests.

TREASURE HUNT ENDS SATURDAY

More Than 100 Prizes to Be Distributed to Holders of Winning Numbers.

More than 100 Hilltop people will carry home prizes worth from $2 to $140 each this week, when the Treasure Hunt conducted by the Hilltop Business Men's Association comes to a close. The prizes have a total value of $1,000.00. Drawing of winning numbers was held Wednesday afternoon by a committee composed of C. B. Pepple, A. F. Elliott and R. C. Lane.

During Thursday, Friday and Saturday the holders of numbers were conducting their search through the business places on the Hilltop to find the prize they had won. Each merchant placed a card bearing the number that won the prize somewhere about the store or in the window of the store.

The person holding the number needed only to present his ticket in order to win the prize.

Under the rules of the contest the prizes must be claimed by Saturday night. If the winning number has not been presented by that time the number nearest to it, which has been presented, will win.

Heading the prize list is a $140 Radio set complete and ready to be installed. The Hilltop Bank is giving a $100.00 bank deposit, credit of $50.00 each on any two lots in Broadview are the third and fourth prizes, and the winner of either of these prizes may receive $25 in cash if he prefers. The prizes offered include almost everything sold on the Hilltop and in every case are items of the finest possible quality.

The Business Men of the Hilltop sponsored the contest in order to advertise their places of business among Hilltop people and to acquaint them with the completeness of the stores which serve this section of the city.

WEST SENIORS ELECT OFFICERS

Senior class officers have been elected at West High School. Candidates were chosen at primaries after their names had been placed on the ballots by petition. The election was a concrete example of elections by primary.

The following were the successful candidates: President, James Williams; vice president, John Feder; secretary, Margaret Kuhn, and treasurer, Margaret Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wise and family, accompanied by Mr. Homer Wise, all of Huntington, W. Va., spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wise, 45 S. Eureka Ave.

Evangelistic Campaign at Burgess Ave. Church

Next Sunday will mark the beginning of a great revival meeting at Burgess Avenue United Brethren church that will last until Dec. 10. The services will be under the direction of the new pastor, Rev. C. Elmer Miller, who will preach every night except Saturday, after the first week.

The first week of the meeting, the sermons will be given by the pastors of the various United Brethren churches of the city.

Burgess Avenue church has been very fortunate in obtaining an evangelistic help, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Shaw of Muncie, Ind., These people are specialists in the singing evangelists field, and will make a great contribution to the spiritual life of the community. In addition to being singers of exceptional ability, Mr. Shaw is one of the very best saw artists in the country. The music he produces from a common carpenter's saw and violin bow is positively marvelous.

WEST CHURCH BASKETBALL

There will be a very important meeting in the office of the Recreation Department, next Monday, Nov. 22, at 7:30 p. m. for the purpose of forming the West Church Basketball League.

Every church on the West Side is invited to put a team in this league, so let's have a big representation, at the first meeting and show the people of Columbus that the West Side sure does deserve a new shelter house by filling up the majority of nights with church basketball.

Mrs. Thomas Clark, 298 Columbian avenue, will be hostess Nov. 26 at a meeting of the Black Joker club, which was recently organized. The club met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. L. E. Scott, 347 Columbian avenue, when Mr. and Mrs. Arby Joliff, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Neal, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kitzman and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hershberger were initiated.

APPEAL FOR OLD CLOTHING

Volunteers of America Get Continual Calls for Aid from Sufferers.

Many homeless men and families are seeking aid, due to infirmities, lack of work or other unfortunate circumstances, according to Lt. Col. Walter E. Collins of the Volunteers of America, who has issued an appeal for old furniture, cast-off clothing and bedclothes.

Cold weather intensifies the suffering of the destitute, he said.

"Men's clothing, overcoats, and trousers are needed continually, as is furniture for those who have been burned out or have had some other run of hard luck.

"So far this year 50 families have been taken from the streets and cared for until proper arrangements could be made for them, which often called for half-fare tickets to their destination. This, too, is furnished by the Volunteers.

"The Volunteers are giving first aid to families at all times, and if a call comes at midnight to take food to a hungry family, a basket is packed and taken to it."

The Jolly Hustler's club of Delta Review, No. 33, Woman's Benefit association, met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. A. O. Bowers, 196 N. Terrace Ave. Mrs. John Sheets spoke on "Whole Life and Old Age Protection." A special hour followed the meeting. Those present were: Mrs. John Sheets, Mrs. R. L. James, Mrs. A. B. Wright, Mrs. L. F. Linn, Mrs. Charles E. Ruth, Mrs. James M. Flesher, Mrs. R. L. Williams and Miss Louise Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Young, 123 North Harris avenue, announce the birth of a son, James Young, born Thursday, November 11.

GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. McClelland, of Newark, former residents of Columbus, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday, Nov. 14, by entertaining 60 guests at an informal reception at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. E. Ray, 586 Lilley avenue. On Tuesday Mrs. Ray and her sister, Mrs. Samuel E. Urmstoit will entertain with a dinner at the latter's home, 760 Miller avenue, honoring their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McClelland, 76 South Hague avenue, and Mrs. Alta McClelland, 266 South Burgess avenue, who were present at the wedding fifty years ago, will also be honor guests at the dinner. Others invited are Mrs. Anna Moriedge of Homestead, Pa., Mrs. Allie McClelland and Mrs. Laura Paisley.

HIGHLAND JR. HIGH SCHOOL

Has Attendance Record of 95.4 Per Cent for Month of October.

During the month of October the following records in attendance were made by pupils in Columbus Junior High Schools:

Indianola	96.1%
Roosevelt	95.8%
Crestview	95.6%
Highland	95.4%
Franklin	95.2%
Starling	94.6%
Pilgrim	93.9%
Eleventh	93.6%
Champion	93.1%
Barrett	92.6%
Mound	90.1%
Everett	88.2%

A per cent of attendance of 95 or more is considered a very satisfactory average for the month but Highland boys and girls are anxious that the attendance record of their school may soon be the best in the city.

There is no question but that a large per cent of those pupils who fail do so because of irregular attendance. Parents are urged to co-operate with the school in seeing that their children are as regular in attendance as possible.

The Hilltop Child Conservation Circle held their annual meeting at the Friend's Rescue Home, 295 N. Powell Ave., on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 18. The afternoon program consisted of musical numbers and the speaker, Mrs. Lillian M. Burt, representing the W. C. T. U., had as her subject, "The Story of Life." The circle presented the Home with the shower gift and then followed a social hour.

The bride was graduated in 1925 from Ohio State, and is a member of Alpha Delta Sorority. Dr. Sharp studied at Harvard and was graduated in medicine from Ohio State, where he is a member of Phi Rho Sigma. He and his bride will be at home in Seville after December 1.

AMERICAN EDUCATION

Week Aroused Much Enthusiasm in Columbus Schools.

American Education Week was a busy one in the Columbus public schools. Varied programs in practically every school in the city featured the work the children are doing in their classes.

An educational institute held in Memorial Hall, and attended by 4000 parents, teachers and pupils, marked the opening of the events of this national celebration. At this meeting, former State Commander Hugh Martin, a graduate of East High School, spoke in behalf of the American Legion, and Rev. E. F. Chauncey gave his notable address on "The Great Teacher."

During the meeting of the Central Ohio Teachers Association the business men of Columbus entertained visiting and local educational leaders as their guests at a luncheon at the Chittenden Hotel. The room was decorated with posters of educational maxims taken from the rooms and hallways of the city schools. Pictures of some of the more recently constructed school buildings in Columbus were on display. An excellent drawing of the proposed new West High School building was shown. Highland Junior High School contributed a fine poster to the exhibit. Music was furnished by a girls' quartette from the Bexley Schools; by a chorus from North High School, and by an orchestra from Central High School. J. A. Maddox of the Board of Education and Superintendent Collicott spoke in behalf of the work of the Public Schools and President Emeritus W. O. Thompson made some very appropriate remarks.

Monday The American Insurance Union offered to the Schools the exclusive use of the wireless station WAIU. From 2 to 3 p. m. an interesting and varied program of music, talks and declamations by representative school groups was broadcasted to the schools and the public. A conservative estimate indicates at least 10,000 children listened to the program in Columbus Schools alone. Through the courtesy of a down town radio store pupils in the study rooms of the Highland Junior High School were able to hear this program.

Continuing throughout the week, each day recorded some distinct expression of home, school and community activity. In every section of the city an encouraging interest was demonstrated by the attendance at the various school functions: Evening sessions, Father and Son Banquets, Building Rededications, Parent-Teacher meetings, and Special Day programs. At the West Broad Parent-Teacher meeting on Friday the topic was "Good Reading" and Miss Lydia Phillipps of the School Library made an interesting talk. At the Highland School the Parent-Teacher meeting on Tuesday evening was largely attended by interested parents. Senator-elect Paul Herbert, representing the American Legion, was the speaker. The music was furnished by the girls' glee club of the school. The question box period was a valuable feature of the meeting.

Republican Meeting

The Eleventh Ward Republican club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Colburn, 804 Midland Ave., Monday evening, Nov. 22, at 8 o'clock.

The ladies of the "Crego Guild" of Glenwood M. E. church entertained Tuesday, Nov. 16, in honor of Mrs. Mary Daugherty of 75 S. Ogden Ave., the occasion being her 78th birthday. The Ladies took their baskets and had a very delightful spread. The class presented her with a potted plant, besides individual gifts and tokens. Those present were: Mesdames Hughes, Lindermuth, Thomas, Gould, Marshall, Major, Ong, Blackwell, Smith, Boyles, Acheson, Bright, Smith, Bucher, Gill, Netcham, Marsh, Fulmer and the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Mott Hindall (Ruth Johnstone), 2501 Sullivant avenue, announce the birth of a daughter, Dorothy Ann, November 5.

Mrs. Grace Blevins, 112 S. Hague Ave., is now at her home after spending three weeks in White Cross hospital, where she underwent an operation for goitre.

The W. H. S. M. club, a newly organized girls' club of the Hilltop, consisting of girls between 14 and 16, is extending an invitation to all girls whose last name begins with either W, H, S or M, to attend their meeting this Thursday night at 7 o'clock at the home of Miss Gertrude McCloud, 30 N. The construction will be of reinforced concrete, skeleton design, with concrete joists. The exterior brick work and interior woodwork will be furnished by the convicts of the penitentiary.

The building is designed to accommodate boys in one end and the girls in the other, with separate dining rooms and recreation rooms in the basement. The dormitory, including 80 beds, cell rooms, linen and clothing closets, bath and toilet rooms, will be located on the first floor.

POSTPONE OHIO WEEK

State-Wide Campaign Delayed Until After First of Year.

The state-wide "Know Ohio" campaign, which was scheduled for the week of Nov. 14, has been postponed until after the first of the year, according to an announcement made by John J. Lentz, general chairman of the committee.

Following his appointment several weeks ago, Lentz made a detailed study of the campaign and its various possibilities, and it was decided that sufficient research regarding Ohio statistics would require more time than had been allotted. Following a business trip to the west coast, Mr. Lentz will summon together his 20 divisional chairmen to complete final arrangements for the campaign. Included in this group are the division of real estate boards, represented by J. W. Jacoby, Marion, president of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards, the division of tax associations, represented by John E. McCrehen, secretary of the Ohio Tax association.

Ohio's oldest resident died last Tuesday at the age of 115 years. Many people give up the ship much sooner and feel satisfied.

An optomist is one who feels that he can get a seat for the Michigan game the afternoon it is being played. By this there were several so-called optomists who were disappointed.

If you live on the Hilltop you are a part of it. Remember the Record is printed on the Hilltop, by Hilltop people and for the good of the Hilltop.

Hats off to the new West High School. It's on the Hilltop too.

That old favorite "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" is now replaced by "Thanks for the Huggy Ride."

• • • •

We certainly had a hot time in the old town last Monday when the convicts escaped from Ohio Pen. You can hardly blame a "lifer" for trying to escape, but we will say this, the one serving a three year term would have been better off had he waited patiently.

• • • •

Have you staked your claim in the Treasurer Hunt?

• • • •

Hundreds of people saw all their entertainment raked away from them last week when firemen subdued the flames of the $800,000 downtown fire. We will have to have more fires to satisfy people's curiosity.

• • • •

Dr. Carolton Washburn of Illinois told local school teachers last week that the "repeaters" cost the U. S. $100,000,000 yearly. A little influence on the part of the home might be instrumental in cutting some of this amount from the tax ticket.

The famous Hall-Mills crabapple tree has been caried away as a souvenir. What next? Possibly people will want samples of the water in which the Titanic sank.

All hail the Queen! Ohio State students elected agriculture department prize cow as queen of the homecoming celebration. We wonder who will lead the grand march with her? No doubt but she is a contented cow.

• • • •

Queens certainly are causing a lot of attention lately. Ohio State's queen seems to have gained a little edge over Queen Marie since the disputes aboard her special train last week.

The Ohio convicts were only trying to get out in time for the Michigan game.

The world's greatest optomist is the young man who thinks he can be a professor and yet never reach the absent-minded stage.

$1,391,000,000 was spent on advertising last year. These figures prove that it must pay to advertise. President Coolidge says that advertising is the life of trade. Long live advertising.

FULTON'S SUBMARINE

A submarine that actually worked was invented, constructed, and operated more than a century ago by Robert Fulton, who later won fame by developing the first successful steamboat.

Napoleon Bonaparte made a fatal mistake in turning away Fulton when the young American offered to build submarines for him. "England's navy was the only obstacle that lay in Napoleon's way," says General William Barclay Parsons, an eminent engineer, quoted in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. "Fulton offered him his only chance. But Napoleon regarded him as a dreamer.

"But the British secret agents realized better than Napoleon the menace to England's power that lay in Fulton's ideas. They invited Fulton to England.

"So Fulton went to England and for two years received two hundred pounds a month from the British, with promises of liberal remuneration if his ideas were accepted and developed. Then Nelson's victory at Trafalgar definitely established British sea power. Fulton no longer was needed. In 1806, at forty-one, after twenty years of striving in England and France, he came to America, a failure, only to win undying fame as builder of the first successful steamboat.

"While in France he built a submarine, the Nautilus, which he submerged to a depth of twenty-five feet, navigated for two miles under water, and kept submerged for seven hours. It was operated by man power, through a screw which was a forerunner of modern screw propellers, and a helicopter, for submerging or raising the submarine, which was a forerunner of the helicopters with which aviation engineers today are experimenting."

Why is it when a person's hair begins to turn gray, one hair will remain its original color and the one next to it will turn gray, in other words why do they not all turn gray at the same time?

Why doesn't a man get bald on his face the same as on his head?

Happy Thanksgiving Day

By Suzanne Peart, 2560 West Broad Store 4.

Hey Bob! Wait up for a fella, Bob turned around and he saw Paul, his boy friend, running to catch up with him. "What's the matter old top?" Bob ask d.

"Lots of things, but the most important is about our Thanksgiving dinner we're gonna' have cranberries and a turkey and gosh knows what not," said Paul, taking a short breath after each word. "What are you gonna have?"

"We're goin' to my grandma's house for Thanksgiving, so I suppose we will have a swell dinner. I can hardly wait, can you?" asked Bob, who was anxious for the day to come.

"It does make my mouth water, but I will soon be tasting it, so I should worry," but the truth was he was worrying whether he would get the part of the turkey he like best.

Thanksgiving day over we find the boys in the school yard waiting for the bell to ring. We have asked everybody what they had for dinner and no one's seems as good as ours. Oh! There comes Betty, let's ask her what she had for dinner. Paul started to go to her, but Bob held him back.

"Wait till she gets closer to us," said Bob. "You see it wouldn't look right." Betty approached. She was a very pretty child with jet black hair and dark eyes and lashes, which showed clearly against her clear white skin. Betty was not dressed however in costly dresses, but her clothes were plain and simple, because her father had been out of work for a long time and they could hardly make ends meet, as is the old saying.

"Hi, Betty! What did you have for dinner, yesterday."

"Nothing more than usual," said Betty.

"Why didn't you know yesterday was Thanksgiving?"

"Yes, but that is no sign you have to eat more. Mama and I took what little food we could spare and I got my old toys together and we took them to the orphan's home. I only wish I had more to give them," she sighed, "but why did you ask?"

Neither boy could answer for they knew they had toys at home they did not want. Both boys were ashamed and the only thing that saved them was that the bell rang just then and Betty went to her room with the other girls.

The boys walked home together as usual, but talk was scarce.

"So long, Bob," said Paul, when he came to his house.

"So long," Bob answered without looking back.

When he reached home his face looked sad. When his sister held up her little face for the usual kiss, he gave her when he came home from school, she was pushed roughly aside. She ran to her mother and told her Bob was not feeling well. She knew something was wrong. She went to the kitchen where Bob was putting wood in the stove. "Come to me, dear, and tell me your troubles," she said in a low, gentle, motherly tone.

"Oh, mother, if I had only shared my dinner with some of the orphan children, I would be much happier."

"Well if that is what your trouble is just fling your troubles to the winds, because I have packed a sack of your told toys and have made jelly, cookies and canned fruits and we are going there tonight. It is not too late for the founder of the home was detained sickness and they are celebrating it tonight.' Bob's joy was great and he kissed his mother again and again. That night there was a grand rush. Bob's mother had called Paul's mother, and they both arrived at the same time, and every Thanksgiving day after that they shared their toys and dinner with the orphan children.

DO YOU LACK PEP?

If so, visit the Chiropractor. Is your heart diseased? If so, have that pressure removed which is causing that trouble and thereby render yourself 100 per cent efficient in your life's work. Whether the abnormal condition be of one character or another it is produced by some cause. Enlargement of the heart, leakage of the heart and irregularity in the heart action has a common cause. Let the Chiropractor find out the cause of the heart trouble.

LOCAL BUILDING IS CURTAILED

Work Under Construction Being Rushed to Completion Before Winter Sets In.

While there is a gradual diminution in building operations and in new projects started, building supply dealers in central Ohio have been having a fairly good volume during the past week.

This is due largely to the better weather conditions, which have prevailed together with the tendency on the part of the builders to rush their work in order to avoid the coming extreme low temperatures. Much of the work that has been in progress during the fall is being rushed to enclose it at least in order to avoid any stoppage due to inclement weather.

Although new residences are falling off to a large extent, there are a number of larger building projects which make up for the loss in residential work. There are quite a few large downtown jobs which are being promoted and work will start on several in the near future.

Speculative residence building is not as brisk as earlier in the year. Some of that work is still going on, however, and will continue for the winter. Home builders are going ahead, especially in the high class suburban residential districts.

Supply dealers as a rule do not expect the volume of business during the winter months as compared with last winter. It is believed that some projects now in hand will be postponed until spring. But with the big work going on there should be a steady demand for building materials of all kinds during the winter months.

See Seiller's Ad on last page.

Mr. and Mrs. Orman Spencer and family of 140 N. Burgess Ave., spent last week end with friends and relatives in Logan, Ohio. Mrs. Alice Lehman, Mrs. Spencer's mother, returned home with them after spending a pleasant two weeks' visit there with relatives.

Happy Hour Club met Thursday, afternoon, Nov. 11, with Mrs. Eugene Dupuis, 183 S. Burgess Ave., hostess.

Glenwood M. E. Notes

Next Sunday is Family Pew Sunday at Glenwood Church. How many generations will be represented in your pew? We believe the family pew has many values; let us enjoy some of them next Sunday. Each family is urged to choose a pew for the Sunday services and fill it with every member of the family present. Dr. Barber will deliver a very interesting sermon on The Church as a Family.

The evening service will be a service of religious drama which you should not miss enjoying. Mr. Fagan, director of religious education, will speak on The Religious Value of Drama. Following this will be a dramatization in which the deeply significant message of the parable of the Ten Virgins will be presented by young people of the church. This presentation will portray a type of the earliest religious drama held in the cathedrals of Europe during the Middle Ages. Do not fail to see it.

The Epworth League will be held at 6:30 Sunday evening under the leadership of Miss Margaret Huffman who will speak on Living at Your Best. All young people are urged to be present.

The Intermediate League is coming strong with increased numbers. The leader for next Sunday evening will be Miss Arvene Lee, who will speak on Can We Spend Less on Entertainment Than We Do?

The Junior church had another large increase in attendance last Sunday. The boys and girls are having a most interesting time at this service each Sunday morning at 10:30. The program is built up to provide a religious service of worship and instruction that grows out of and is fitted to the child experiences. They will be happy in their service if you bring them, and you will enjoy your service much more. You should hear them sing under the splendid leadership of Mr. Brown.

A very interesting social time was spent last Friday evening in the social rooms of the church by the members of Mr. Clark's class as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Fagan.

FIRST COLONIAL THANKSGIVING

Pilgrims Celebrate a Day of Thankfulness for First Harvest.

PLYMOUTH COLONY, NOV. 25, 1621—The entire population of 53 residents and 90 Indians headed by Chief Massasoit took part in the feasting and thanksgiving in celebration of the first harvest gathered by Plymouth Colony since its settlement.

After a round of the peace pipe among the Indians and settlers whereby the pledge of friendship was renewed, the feasting began. The men and Indians provided a goodly supply of venison, turkey and small fowl, and the good women of the village had spent many hours in baking. A large open barbecue provided plenty of meat and the feasting continued all day.

Over half of the settlers have died from exposure and starvation since landing last December. A few have been killed by unfriendly Indians. The health and happiness of every surviving member of the colony was at its height at the time of the celebration and peace with the Indians has been assured through the friendliness of good Chief Massasoit. A bountiful harvest has been gathered and comfort and food for the cold winter seems available.

Governor William Bradford today expressed his desire that this day be proclaimed an annual event. It is hoped the following generations may likewise celebrate and be thankful in the manner as was today..

REV. SHIELDS IS INSTALLED

Dr. Cadman Preaches Installation Sermon for Former Hilltop Pastor.

Mountain Lakes (N. J.) News gives a very interesting account of the installation, Nov. 2, of Rev. Richard E. Shields, former pastor of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church, as pastor of Mountain Lakes Community church.

The Community church was crowded to the doors by the people of Mountain Lakes and a microphone was installed on the pulpit to broadcast the service.

Rev. Claus Olandt, president of Passaic Classis, presided over the services, which began with an organ prelude. Rev. Olandt delivered the call to worship, the invocation and led the congregation in the recital of the Lord's Prayer.

The congregational singing, led by an enlarged choir, included old-time anthems, "Oh, Worship the King" and "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord."

After the reading of the customary form for the installation of Rev. Shields, the charge to the pastor was delivered, followed by the charge to the church, introduction of the pastor and the installation prayer.
